Something about Marne

June 26, 2010 by Elias Shams

Here are more information we digged out about the new facebook’s vice president of global public policy babe, Marne Levine, who just left her top position as the National Economic Counsel at the white house. I blogged about her yesterday.

According to Washington Life, Marne is married to Philip Deutch “a managing director of Perseus, LLC, a Washington, D.C. and New York City-based private equity fund. Deutch focuses on venture capital investing in the energy area.”
She donated $4,600 to presidential campaigns in 2008 – $2,300 to Hilary Clinton and $2,300 to Barack Obama.

She used to be director of product management at Steve Case’s start-up Revolution Money.
During the Clinton Administration, she worked at the Treasury Department as deputy assistant secretary for banking and finance in the office of legislative affairs and public liaison.

She graduated from Miami University in Oxford, Ohio.
She has an M.B.A. from the Harvard Business School.

According to her NEC bio, “From 2001-2003, Ms. Levine served as Chief of Staff for Harvard University President Lawrence Summers where helped manage operations of the universities 14,000 employees and $2.4 billion operating budget.”
She goes out on the town! Here’s a pic from society magazine Washington Life...

Possibly related posts: (automatically generated)

- Facebook snags White House economic adviser Levine as global policy head

Filed under DC Tales, social media Tagged with washington, white house, startup, facebook, Washington DC, Steve Case, d.c, barack obama, Marne Levine, National Economic Counsel, Office of Legislative Affairs, Public Liaison, vice president of global public policy, Philip Deutch, Perseus, presidential campaign, Hilary Clinton, Revolution Money, Clinton Administration, Treasury Department, deputy assistant secretary, banking, finance, Miami University, Harvard Business School, Lawrence Summers

About Elias Shams

Serial Washingtonian Entrepreneur in Telecom & Social media space and love Washington, DC