The Global Intelligence Files, Files released: 5543061

On Monday February 27th, 2012, WikiLeaks began publishing The Global Intelligence Files, over five million e-mails from the Texas headquartered “global intelligence” company Stratfor. The e-mails date between July 2004 and late December 2011. They reveal the inner workings of a company that fronts as an intelligence publisher, but provides confidential intelligence services to large corporations, such as Bhopal’s Dow Chemical Co., Lockheed Martin, Northrop Grumman, Raytheon and government agencies, including the US Department of Homeland Security, the US Marines and the US Defence Intelligence Agency. The emails show Stratfor’s web of informers, pay-off structure, payment laundering techniques and psychological methods.

Russian Spy #12 Worked at Microsoft
Alexey Karetnikov, the 12th Russian spy, spent nine months working at Microsoft as a software tester at the company's Redmond, Washington campus.

He was deported based on immigration violations rather than any criminal acts, such as those that landed the other eleven spies in trouble with the U.S. government. However, officials said he was not associated with the Russian agents arrested on June 27.

Based on the Facebook page content from one Alexey V Karetnikov, he graduated from St. Petersburg State Polytechnic University in 2009 and from the Physics and Mathematics Lyceum 30 high school in 2004. He previously worked NeoBIT, a Romanian-based technology company that has associations Russian defense and intelligence agencies.

It’s unclear what Karetnikov’s mission was while he worked at Microsoft. He was monitored by the U.S. government soon after he entered the country in October 2009. "He was just in the early stages; had just set up shop," a senior federal law enforcement official told the Washington Post.

The US retained on Tuesday the twelve person in the espionage network in favor of Moscow, suspected of being linking to the ten agents already arrested and deported to Russia, who used to work in a company with headquarters in Romania, according to the Facebook profile, Washington Post reads.

Federal authorities declared that the young Aleksei Karetnikov was deported on Tuesday in Russia. According to his Facebook profile page, Karetnikov, who according to authorities was not older than 25, worked at Microsoft and at a software company with its central headquarters in Romania, Neobit.

Microsoft confirmed that the young man was working for them.

The ten Russian spies were expelled to Russia in exchange of four prisoners that were supposed to reach the US.
