BY E-FILE AND HAND DELIVERY PUBLIC VERSION DECEMBER 29, 2009

The Honorable Leonard P. Stark U.S. District Court for the District of Delaware U.S. Courthouse 844 N. King Street Wilmington, DE 19801-3556

Re: Leader Technologies, Inc. v. Facebook, Inc., C. A. No. 08-862-JJF(LPS)

Dear Judge Stark:

Pursuant to Your Honor's December 3, 2009 Order, Plaintiff Leader Technologies, Inc. ("Leader") submits this opening letter to the Court, requesting that the Court compel Defendant Facebook, Inc. ("Facebook") to produce its change log document under a non-source code designation as required under the Court's Protective Order. (D.I. 35).

Since February 20, 2009, Leader has requested that Facebook provide the historical changes to the Facebook Website. See Leader's Interrogatory No. 2 (Ex. A hereto). Leader requires this information to determine when changes to the Facebook Website were made. Facebook has maintained that producing such information would be an "enormous and undue burden." See Facebook's Response to Leader's Interrogatory No. 2 (Ex. B hereto). On November 13, 2009, Facebook agreed to disclose this information in the form of a change log.¹ See Ex. C hereto. Facebook, however, required that its change log be given the same protections set forth in the Protective Order for "Source Code." Under this provision, Facebook only allows the change log to be viewed on a stand alone computer at their office. Given that the change log is hundreds of pages of technical information, reviewing the document is extremely time consuming. A complete review in the manner proscribed by Facebook would require numerous visits from Leader's attorneys and expert witness.

Interestingly, Facebook even admits that the change log is not source code. (Ex. D hereto). Nevertheless, it demands that all of the protection procedures reserved for source code must be followed every time Leader would like to view this voluminous document.

Facebook's rationale behind these restrictions is unclear. Facebook has stated that ² See Ex. D hereto. However nothing in the Protective Order supports Facebook's interpretation. Paragraph 8 of the Protective Order states:

"PROTECTION OF SOURCE CODE- Documents or other things that contain a party's or non-party's source code, or the substance thereof, shall be designated HIGHLY CONFIDENTIAL ATTORNEYS' EYES ONLY - SOURCE CODE." (D.I. 35).

Examining each protection procedure described under paragraph 8 demonstrates the portion which refers to the "substance thereof" can only refer to executable code, not anything "revealing the substance of source code" as proposed by Facebook. Therefore, only source code and executable code can apply to this designation. Executable code and source code are similar in that they are not in written in normal English like the change log document. Source code is written in a high level programming language which is then compiled into machine language instructions the computer can execute. See Ex. E hereto: definition of source code. Executable code is the result of source code that has been compiled or translated into machine language. See Ex. F hereto: definitions of executable and executable program. In order for a party to obtain discovery without undue burden or delay, it is understandable that the Protective Order limits its most restrictive procedures to source code and executable code. In contrast, Facebook's attempt to have paragraph 8 apply to anything "revealing the substance of source code" is troubling.

Facebook has attempted to justify its artificial restrictions based on its argument that the change log document is a "highly sensitive document." See Ex. C. Yet merely being a "highly sensitive document" does not justify the tremendous protections reserved only for source code. Likewise, Facebook is unable to explain why the Protective Order's HIGHLY CONFIDENTIAL- ATTORNEYS' EYES ONLY designation does not offer enough protection for its change log. Accordingly, Facebook should be required to produce the change log as specified under the Protective Order.

Respectfully,

/s/ Philip A. Rovner

² Moreover, Facebook has never defined what "substance of the source code" actually means and how the change log can reveal more sensitive information than its previous technical document production made available to Leader under the same Protective Order.

James.

Correction with regard to the change log document, which contrary to your claim has already been produced by Facebook on the stand alone computer. I did not say that Facebook's position is that the document itself is considered source code. I said that the document falls under paragraph 8 of the Stipulated Protective Order, which discusses the procedure for the production of "documents or other things that contain a party's or nonparty's source code, or the substance thereof []." (Emphasis added). As I stated during our call, the change log in guestion contains a narrative description of changes to the source code, therefore revealing the substance of the source code. It is a highly sensitive document and we therefore are not willing to waive the restrictions of the Stipulated Protective Order, to which LTI agreed long ago.

Sincerely,

Jeff

Jeff,

I write to summarize our meet and confer this afternoon.

As you know, Leader requested reproduction of certain technical documents because the right hand margin had been cut-off. Because the right-hand margin had been cut-off, at least part of the name of the author was also cut-off, among other information. During the meet and confer, Facebook represented that the only information that was cut-off from the technical documents was the name of the author and the full path of the html address for the documents. Furthermore, Facebook represented it would be very difficult to re-produce the technical documents with the full names of the authors. Because of the apparent difficulty in re-producing the technical documents with the full names of the authors, as a compromise, we suggested that Facebook provide a list of the authors of the technical documents with their full names. We stated that we should be able to discern which author corresponded to which technical document based on this list, and that. Facebook would not be required to match each author with each technical document. If any questions arose about the appropriate author of the technical document, we stated that we would call you to verify the author's name. You said you would consider the proposal and get back to us.
