It was a sad night for spookdom.

In darkened rooms all over the city charlatans who were fleecing a horde of gullibles were struck with terror by the whispered news of the arrest of Mazzininanda, chief of fakers, and the downfall of the Moores.

Again Mazzini has been caught in the police dragnet.

Again have the Moores fallen under the ban of the law.

Three weeks ago Mazzini paid a fine of $150 for practicing mediumship without a license. This money was gathered in dollars from fellow fakers and in dimes from the pockets of poor men and women who could ill afford to contribute to the infamous cause.

A few weeks ago the "Rev. Dr." H. R. Moore was forced by the exposure of the New York World to leave the eastern metropolis and seek pastures new.

Heading for the Mecca of fakers Moore landed in Los Angeles and straightway started "the First Church of Harmonial Philosophy."

The women pleaded with him, and all manner of maledictions were called down on the head of the man who had dared to swear to the complaint against the fallen chief of the spookster.

Moore Caught with the Goods

H. R. Moore and Cora H. Moore were arrested at 9 o'clock at 816 West Ninth street by Detectives Ritch and Roberds, the capture being made right in the midst of one of their trumpet seances and with a large and appreciative assemblage of dupes present.

A warrant had been sworn out earlier in the evening for the arrest of Mrs. Moore and the officers were instructed to arrest Moore the minute it became apparent that he was collecting money under false and fraudulent pretenses. The arrest was made as directed and the fact that there were not several of the subjects and dupes of these two fakers sent to the receiving hospital for repairs is wholly due to the forbearance of the officers making the arrests, for not only Moore himself but several of his fanatical adherents started a rough house which only the coolness of the officers turned into a rather lame and abject surrender to the majesty of the law.

The moment the denoument came pandemonium reigned in the close room. Women shrieked and men cursed and gathered in a threatening manner about the two officers. "Til knock your d—d block off;" "what the h—l is the meaning of this?" and several like choice expressions dropped from the lips of some of Moore's adherents, and two or three of them made threatening demonstrations toward the officers and declared that Moore, who had been placed under arrest, could not be taken out of the room without bloodshed.

Cool, deadly determination exhibited by the officers soon brought the fanatical bluffers to their senses and they finally backed water and Moore and his wife were taken to the police station, where they waited from 9:30 o'clock to midnight for one of their dupes to gather up bail money for them. At that hour they were released and returned to their spook palace on West Ninth street.

It is probable that a number of arrests for disturbing the peace and interfering with an officer may grow out of the arrest of the Moores, as several of their dupes interfered with and made as hard as possible the task of the police in executing their orders.

At last he decided to accompany the detective without more worlds, and together they boarded the car for the jail.

On the way to the police station the fortune teller continued to plead with his captor and to beg for mercy. He raved against those who were responsible for his arrest and swore that justice was not obtainable in the local police courts.

"I did not receive justice last time," he said, "and besides my lawyer was a bum one. This time it will be different and I will do things in a different way. I have friends who will stand by me, but I cannot find them tonight. They will get me out tomorrow and then I will find out why I am arrested. I have not told and fortunes and have done nothing but preach the gospel of Budda to my classes. This is persecution."

When the officer and his prisoner reached the police state an eager crow, largely composed of members of the Anti-fakers society, gathered to witness the second downfall of the man who organized the Mediums' Protective association for the purpose of defeating the license law, and the convicted spookster and fake medium shrunk before their eyes as he formerly shrank when haled before the court of justice.

His pockets were searched and 45 cents, a bunch of keys, a package of tobacco and several cards were brought to like. These were placed in a police envelope and Swami Leo di Mizzandanda was led to his place among drunks, vagrants and crooks in the lower tanks.

In Mazzini's pockets were found a card of H. R. Moore, the medium arrested at the Ninth street raid last night, and the business card of Mrs. M. E. G. Howe, associate editor of the Occidental Mystic. According to the card Mrs. Howe is state organizer of the California State Spiritualists' association.

The lights were then turned out and the room draped in black hangings presented the appearance of the bottom of a coal mine at midnight.

"Now be very quiet," said Spook Doctor Moore's voice, "and I think Pansy will come and see us."

Immediately thereafter "Pansy" arrived.

In a squeaky and rather incoherent voice "Pansy" announced through one of the tin trumpets that she was on the spot.

"How are you, Pansy," was the greeting that went up from a dozen of the throats of the fanatics present.

"I am very well, thank you, and oh, so happy over here," was the response in the squeaky voice.

Then "Pansy" went on to greet each one present in the room by name and inquired after their personal health and affairs.

His work in the east was so raw and crude that he was at last forced to leave that city and seek new regions for gullibles.

Los Angeles was recommended to him as a city which contained many easy mars and where a good live spookster could easily build up a firm bank account by bringing back the departed from the spirit world and exhibiting them to their friends at four bits a throw.

Confident that this was the place he had long sought, Moore, his wife and child, who aid him in his spirit work, packed their grips and came westward. News of his coming had preceded him, however, and no sooner was he installed in his lodging at 816 West Ninth street when world was passed to the police that an arch faker was in the city and preparing to carry on his trade.

Moore was recently shown up in New York, when Mrs. Harriet E. Strickland, one of his assistances, sued him for @25,000 for defamation of character. This one was one of Moore's "spirit friends," and in her complaint Mrs. Strickland told of ghostly visits to coal dark rooms, and how, garbed in a cotton gown, she would visit the seances and press her cold hands on the feverish foreheads of the dupes who attended and whisper cheering messages into their ears.

All went well with her and she drew down her weekly wages of $12 per week from the "Rev. Dr" until one night a young man in the audience became suspicious and grabbed her. Mrs. Strickland lost her gown in the getaway, and she also lost her job, as Moore found it would be impossible for him to continue to employ her when she had been captured while carrying off one of her stunts. She was dismissed from his service, and according to her complaint, Moore began to spread stories detrimental to her character.

Mrs. Strickland was willing to be a spirit - that did not phase her. But she objected to having stories told about her and the suit was the result. At the trial the insider secrets of the spirit world were given light and several other "spirits," among them a barkeeper and a hired girl, gave testimony.

Experts in Moore's form of "psycho-science" spiritualism attracts vulnerable young women who serially marry such practitioners, or just commit adultery serially, many times into the hundreds or thousands of women who fall under the psychological influence of such clairvoyant mediums. It appears that the Ellisons and Larry's father and mother, Roman J. Yanicki and Florence Ruth Spellman (nee Yanicki), were disciples of Rev. Raking Up the Past

The trend of the prosecution narrowed down largely to the question whether Mayor Harper's health board shall take into account McGill's alleged shortcomings under the McAleer board. Most of the evidence of the present board so far deals with what happened in previous years, such as carelessness and errors in keeping tooks and records, doing politics, in interfering with Dr. Powers and in protecting inspectors whose removal for drunkenness and otherwise the department sought.
