Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now, as part of the settlement reached from the Byllesby capitulation to you and your associates, did not you and your associates obtain an agreement from Byllesby to enjoy 75 percent of all future Standard Gas System financing?

Mr. EMANUEL. As I recall that agreement, it was an agreement between United States Electric Power and Byllesby, and Byllesby, as I recall it, had 25 percent of the banking, and United States Electric had the right to nominate, I presume you would call it, where the other 75 percent of the banking would go.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Chairman, so that the record may be complete. I will offer in evidence at this time the cable previously identified by witness Fuller.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. This will be received.

(The cable referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1935" and is included in appendix on p. 12872.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Did not the J. Henry Schroder Banking Corporation of New York attempt to obtain a share in this 75 percent division, Mr. Emanuel, do you recall?

Mr. EMANUEL. I don't recall exactly. I think they had a small interest in subsequent financing, I don't recall that it was very major.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Do you recall whether other members of the American group were somewhat reluctant to cede to Schrobancro an interest in this 75-percent division?

Mr. EMANUEL. I don't recall that.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Do you recall whether or not at this time it was not thought desirable to have as a director of United States Electric Power Baron Bruno Schroder, the senior partner of the London house?

Mr. EMANUEL. I remember he went on the board when the company was formed, or shortly after.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. He did consent to serve as a director, did he not?

Mr. EMANUEL. I think he did; yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. But in so consenting to serve as a director, didn't he make a rather important proviso, do you recall?

Mr. EMANUEL. I don't recall, no; I don't think I had any communications with him about it.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. But you, of course, were intimately familiar with all of the details and arrangements at the time, being one of the moving spirits?

Mr. EMANUEL. Well, I of course had intimate knowledge of the situation, but I think as regards Mr. Fisher's interests in it, he handled that himself; I think he was over here, as I recall it.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Do you recall that Baron Bruno Schroder provided that he would accept a directorship on the condition that a fair position in the future banking business would result for the London firm's New York branch, Schrobanco?

Mr. EMANUEL. No; I don't recall that.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Fuller, what is your recollection on the question I asked Mr. Emanuel?

Mr. FULLER. It is quite clear in my mind that he did make that proviso and that that was subsequent to efforts of Schroder New York to get a participation here which has not been granted as originally planned. Since we had no financial interest in it at any time, and it is my recollection that one of the provisos made on giving us any representation was that Baron Schroder should go on the board and our counter suggestion was that if he did, which was not his custom, then naturally his interest should be well recognized in a future profitable financing that came along.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I show you four documents, cables, from Schrobanco to Schrodpriv or from Schrodpriv to Schrobanco. Will you be good enough to tell me whether you recognize these as documents coming from your files and in some instances bearing your initials?

Mr. HENDERSON. While we are waiting on that, did Loewenstein have any interest in Sofina?

Mr. EMANUEL. At one time I think he controlled it. I can't say exactly; I think he did. He had a large interest in the Barcelona Traction Light & Power Co. which he developed.

Mr. HENDERSON. Did Schroder have any interest in Sofina?

Mr. EMANUEL. I don't know.

Mr. HENDERSON. Do you know, Mr. Fuller?

Mr. FULLER. No; they never did.

Those seem to be documents from our file.

Mr. EMANUEL. I think, Mr. Henderson, that Loewenstein had had some interest in Sofina, but I don't think he ran it.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The four documents identified by the witness are offered in evidence, may it please the committee.

(The cablegrams referred to were marked "Exhibits Nos. 1936 to 1939" and are included in the appendix on pp. 12872-12873.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. As part of the deal which resulted from Byllesby's capitulation to your interests, did you not then buy up Ladenburg, Thalmann's interest in Standard Power for $25,000,000 and 266,666 shares of United States Electric Power Co.?

Mr. EMANUEL. As a result of the agreement with Byllesby, I think it was during the time it was being negotiated, we found for the first time about Ladenburg, Thalmann's large interest in Standard Power and the agreement they had on that, and that resulted in United States Electric buying their stock for the consideration you mentioned.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Then you paid $10,000,000 in cash and the balance in notes, did you not?

Mr. EMANUEL. As I recall, that is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now, the deal was finally consummated on or about December 21, 1929, was it not?

Mr. EMANUEL. I think we came to an agreement on that date.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And about that time you became president of Standard Power, the top holding company of the Standard Gas System, did you not, sir?

Mr. EMANUEL. I think I became president when the company was reorganized on January 7, 1930, when the stockholders' meeting occurred, if not then right afterwards.

SECURITY ISSUES PURSUANT TO BANKING MEMORANDUM OF
DECEMBER, 1929

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Chairman, I should like to offer in evidence at this time a table which shows the securities sold to the public by Standard Gas and Electric Company or any of the corporations in its system from the period January 7, 1930, to June 1, 1936, and the percentages of participations therein by the various banking firms, arranged as per the terms of the Banking Memorandum between Byllesby and the United States Electric Power Corporation and Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. December 21, '29. You will recall we have had evidence on that in "Exhibit No. 1931." Together with this table are three supplementary tables identified here again as supplementary exhibits A, B, and C.

(The tables referred to were marked "Exhibits Nos. 1940-1 to 1940-4" and are included in the appendix facing p. 12874 and on pp. 12874 and 12875.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. For your information, sir, I state that the data appearing on these tables were furnished to the Securities and Exchange Commission and appear in the Commission's Docket No. 31-379 and Docket 31-420, also, and these are Exhibit No. 20 and Exhibit No. 21 in those dockets. I think that it would be advisable, if I may suggest, sir, that these two documents be placed on file with the committee, and that the table which I now offer to you be spread on the records of the committee.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. That may be done, these are submitted for filing.

(The documents referred to were marked "Exhibits Nos. 1941 and 1942" and are on file with the committee.)

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. Is this a convenient place to adjourn?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Excellent.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. The committee will stand in recess until 2:30.

(Whereupon, at 12:30 p. m., a recess was taken until 2:30 p. m. of the same day.)

AFTERNOON SESSION

The committee resumed at 2:35 p. m. on the expiration of the recess.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. The committee will be in order, please.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Emanuel and Mr. Fuller, will you be good enough to return to the witness stand, please?

TESTIMONY OF VICTOR EMANUEL AND CARLTON P. FULLER—

Resumed

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The committee will recall that before our recess I offered in evidence committee "Exhibit No. 1940," which showed the financing for the Standard Gas system for the period 1929 through 1936. This exhibit shows that all of this financing which was undertaken during this period complied exactly with the terms of the Banking Memorandum.

Thus, for example, in the financing covered under group A of the table in evidence the distribution was precisely as called for on page 1 of the Banking Memorandum, and in the case of group B on the table the distribution of the participations to the investment banking firms was precisely pursuant to paragraph 3 on pages 2 and 3 of the Banking Memorandum.

In the case of the distribution of participations under group C on the table before you those participations were pursuant to paragraph 4 on page 3 of the Banking Memorandum, with further development of those participations appearing to the supplementary exhibit A, and so on.

Mr. Fuller, as Mr. Emanuel's earlier testimony shows, Ladenburg, Thalmann's interest in Standard Gas was bought out by United States Electric Power for $25,000,000. You recall that testimony; do you not?

Mr. FULLER. Yes.

$15,000,000 LOAN TO USEPCO SECURED BY STANDARD POWER & LIGHT CO.
STOCK—EFFORTS TO REGAIN COLLATERAL

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And do you not also recall the transaction which involved that exchange of cash and securities?

Mr. FULLER. No; I was not familiar with it in any detail at the time, since Schroder Banking Corporation had nothing to do with it.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. You know only of it then—

Mr. FULLER (interposing). By hearsay.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Do you recall that to raise this sum some $15,000,000 had to be borrowed from the Chase, the Guaranty, and Chemical?

Mr. FULLER. I recall at a later date I realized that fact, yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And that this loan was secured by Standard Power stock?

Mr. FULLER. Eventually; yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Do you recall, Mr. Emanuel, that ultimately this loan was reduced to about $12,500,000 in 1934?

Mr. EMANUEL. I think that is probably right.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And do you recall, Mr. Emanuel, that United States Electric Power had defaulted on its interest to the banks?

Mr. EMANUEL. That is right.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And that the banks thereafter increased their collateral by taking over all of the assets of, may I say Usepco in order to avoid that long name?

Mr. EMANUEL. That is right.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. This meant, in effect, did it not, that the control had passed under the pledge to the banks?

Mr. EMANUEL. Well—

Mr. NEHEMKIS (interposing). Potential control, at least.

Mr. EMANUEL. Yes; they had all the collateral.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. In 1934 did you, Mr. Fuller, not recognize about the only worthwhile thing left in Usepco was the future Standard Gas financing?

Mr. FULLER. I don't recall my state of mind at the time, but I should think probably the figures would have shown that the current value of its holdings was not very large.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I show you a memorandum bearing your initials dated August 10, 1934, entitled "General Evaluation of Future Prospects of Standard Gas & Electric Corporation." Will you be good enough to examine this document and tell me whether or not it was prepared by yourself and whether those initials are yours?

Mr. FULLER. Yes; this memorandum consists of a list of favorable points as to the future prospects of Standard Gas & Electric Corporation, and also unfavorable points, there being five favorable and eleven unfavorable. I don't know just how they would be evaluated as to rating.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And among the favorable points that you enumerated at this point [reading]:

There is considerable financing in the system to be counted upon and hitherto U. S. Electric has had a small participation in the profits of such issues.

Mr. Chairman, I offer in evidence the document identified by Mr. Fuller.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. This may be received.

(The document referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1943" and is included in the appendix on p. 12875.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Did not the banks begin looking around to find a market for the stocks pledged to them?

Mr. FULLER. I am not familiar with the situation. We were not in close contact with United States Electric, in spite of membership on the board. Those negotiations were handled by Mr. Fisher.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Is it not a fact, Mr. Emanuel, that about this time the banks to whom the stock had been pledged began looking around for a purchaser or market to dispose of their holdings?

Mr. EMANUEL. What time was that?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. 1934.

Mr. EMANUEL. I think that is true. I mean they wanted to get paid.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. That is right. And do you recall some negotiations with Harrison Williams, of the North American Power &

Light, in regard to acquiring that pledged collateral? I am addressing my question to you, sir.

Mr. EMANUEL. I had one conference with Mr. Williams about that matter. I think that is all I had, and he was talking about one of the banks' having told him they were reducing these notes in their possession.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Fuller, I show you a document which purports to come from the files of your company. Will you examine it and tell me whether you recognize it as a true and correct copy of an original in your possession and custody?

Mr. FULLER. It would seem to be.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And this is a copy of a cablegram from Brussels to—I assume that is a code name—Alemanuel.

Mr. EMANUEL. That is the code name of Albert Emanuel & Co.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And it is signed by Vanderstraten, and his cable address is Canabelge, and Vanderstraten is a director or was a director of Hydro-Electric, do you recall?

Mr. EMANUEL. I think he was.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. One of the Belgian directors.

Mr. EMANUEL. That is right.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. This cable reads as follows [reading from "Exhibit No. 1944"]:

Hydro Committee surprised learn Chasebank negotiating with group Harrison Williams cession securities pledge by Usepco feeling that Chasebank appeared disposed accept our proposals about which other banks had to be approached (stop) What is present position (stop) We suppose Chasebank could not conclude deal with Harrison Williams without Usepco's renunciation assets pledged or protracted formalities (stop) Usepco under no circumstances must give such renunciation but should endeavor obtain consent Chasebank that our negotiations be postponed for few weeks until Fisher's recovery (stop)

I offer in evidence, Mr. Chairman, the document identified by the witness.

The CHAIRMAN. This may be received.

(The cable referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1944" and is included in the appendix on p. 12876.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now, that came over on the code name of your firm. You recall that particular cable, do you?

Mr. EMANUEL. No; it has been years since I received that. I have no doubt it is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. In accordance with the discussions that were taking place between New York and London and Brussels at this time, you did all you could, did you not, Mr. Emanuel, to delay any deal of the banks with Harrison Williams?

Mr. EMANUEL. I was engaged for three or four years, I suppose. I can't remember exactly the period, in trying to do everything I could to save that company, and we were working during that whole period on trying to make a compromise of our position with the banks who held our notes. Naturally, I did everything I could.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The thing you were really trying to save, of course, was the collateral, not the company.

Mr. EMANUEL. That is—well, we were trying to save the company.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Well, the company without the collateral was a meaningless shell, was it not?

Mr. EMANUEL. That is right, but what we were trying to do was to work out some compromise with the banks whereby the principal stockholders of the company could redeem that collateral and keep it in the company.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The point at issue, at stake at this particular time, was who would get possession or be able to regain possession of the collateral pledged to the banks. Now, the thing you had to get hold of, if this system was going to mean anything to you, was the pledged collateral, is that correct, sir?

Mr. EMANUEL. No; I couldn't answer that question that way. I was president of U. S. Electric Power, and as such I was trying to keep the company alive for the benefit of its stockholders. The banks held this collateral and their notes were under water. For a period of three or four years I and some of the other principal stockholders of this company, a good many of us, tried repeatedly, time after time to make a deal with the banks whereby we could compromise these loans, because obviously they were under water. I don't know if that is exactly in answer to your question, but that was the situation.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And in connection with these negotiations that were taking place over this period of time, you were doing everything conceivable to protect your interests, to delay any sale of the pledged collateral by the banks to Harrison Williams, or anyone else?

Mr. EMANUEL. Correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Fuller, I show you a document, a cable, purporting to come from the files of Schroder Rockefeller & Co., and ask you to tell me whether or not this is a true and correct copy, and whether this doesn't bear your initials on the right-hand top corner.

Mr. FULLER. I presume that is the case, although I didn't sign the initials.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The document is offered in evidence.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. It will be received.

(The cable referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1945" and is included in the appendix on p. 12876.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now, Mr. Emanuel, why was it important for you to gain possession of the pledged collateral and to avoid, if possible, any disposal of this pledged collateral to Harrison Williams or any other group?

Mr. EMANUEL. Well, if it hadn't been avoided the U. S. Electric Power stockholders would have all been wiped out.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And what would have happened to Victor Emanuel and his interests if Harrison Williams or any other group got this pledged collateral? Victor Emanuel and his interests would have been completely wiped out, wouldn't they?

Mr. EMANUEL. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Therefore, it was to your interest, was it not, and the European interests who were counting on you, to see that that pledged collateral remained intact until you could buy it on your terms, is that correct?

Mr. EMANUEL. It was to be our interest to see that the collateral wasn't sold to anybody else or anybody except the U. S. Electric Co.; that was at that time, 1934, what we were trying to do.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And as you and I said we might refer to it, that Usepco was merely a shell without that pledged collateral; that company was nothing but a fiction without the pledged collateral behind it. With it, it meant you and your interests and the European interests had control over the utility empire, is that correct?

Mr. EMANUEL. No; that isn't.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. In what particulars do I misinterpret the situation?

Mr. EMANUEL. I think you asked me two or three questions in that one question. I will have to take them up by sections.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Please.

Mr. EMANUEL. In the first place had that collateral been sold by the banks to outsiders or to anybody but U. S. Electric, U. S. Electric would have been entirely without assets and busted. Secondly, during that entire period from 1934, and I think most of 1935, a group of U. S. Electric principal stockholders were trying to come to an agreement with the banks. I can't tell you now how many conferences we had; they perhaps were monthly. We had plan after plan, time after time; we thought we had a plan that the banks would accept; they all fell through. It wasn't to keep me, though, from having control of the utility empire because, whether U. S. Electric was saved or not, we didn't control Standard Gas. We did have the power, as I previously testified, in Standard Gas to sort of veto, if you will, certain policies of the company or certain things like the purchase or sale of properties, and that sort of thing, within the agreement. I think you have the record of it.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Fuller, Schrobanco at this time was not very enthusiastic about blocking Harrison Williams. As a matter of fact, it was trying to work out a plan of its own with Williams and Bylesby, wasn't it?

Mr. FULLER. I don't recall the circumstances offhand. Of course we had other business relationships with Harrison Williams. I imagine we weren't particularly interested in blocking any plans of his in other connections, but I couldn't recall what you have in mind at the time. We had many conferences with him about many different things.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I show you a cable from Schrobanco to Schroder, London, dated September 21, 1936, and purporting to bear your initials. Will you examine this and tell me—

Mr. FULLER (interposing). You are now talking about 1936, having just been talking about 1934.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I beg your pardon, it is 1934. Will you tell me whether you recognize this as a copy coming from your files?

Mr. Fuller, does that document now refresh your recollection?

Mr. FULLER. Yes; I recall now.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. What is your recollection at this time of whether or not Schrobanco was or was not interested in blocking Harrison Williams?

Mr. FULLER. Schrobanco at that time had no interest any more than it ever had in Usepco itself, and it wasn't even close to the internal operations of it, and Schrobanco was naturally interested in getting any business it could and having good business relationship with Harrison Williams, would naturally not want to imperil good relationships with rather tenuous relationships. Therefore, I assume that this cable discusses one of the numerous plans that Mr.

Emanuel has mentioned about rescuing the collateral from the banks. I don't recall the details of it more than given in that cable.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Did I understand you to say a moment ago that you had no particular interest in the Standard Gas matter?

Mr. FULLER. No; I didn't say that; I said Schroder Banking Corporation never had any financial interest in Usepco.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. How does it happen that all these documents that I have been offering in evidence come from the files of Schroder Rockefeller & Co., Inc.?

Mr. FULLER. That is quite a story in itself, but you must realize that we were acting as bankers in New York for Hydro interests so far as we could, that our London house was their chief London banker, and in most of these matters we were acting for a London house and trying hard to act more closely for Hydro, although at this period we were not very close to them.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. You were perhaps a conduit for these various interest, say a clearing house.

Mr. FULLER. I think that is a good expression.

Mr. HENDERSON. As far as control over Usepco was concerned, however, your company and Mr. Emanuel's company still really had that while the stock was pledged, did you not?

Mr. FULLER. Perhaps it isn't clear in your mind, Mr. Henderson, that our company, meaning the Schroders, had never had any financial interest in the U. S. Electric Power Company, and we have never had any financial interest in Hydro, either. That is not a Schroder company.

Mr. HENDERSON. Weren't you acting, however, as their conduit?

Mr. FULLER. That is correct.

Mr. HENDERSON. I am saying, assuming that you represented the Hydro interest—

Mr. FULLER (interposing). Which is a rather far-fetched assumption at this period, but, assuming we did, your question is?

Mr. HENDERSON. And taken together, the two interests, yours and Mr. Emanuel's, were a majority, were they not?

Mr. FULLER. Well, it depends there, I suppose, where you put the United Founders interest, and I couldn't tell offhand just where the control lay. I wouldn't think it did.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Emanuel, at this time the financing, the right to do the financing still resided in that original document.¹ That had not passed until Chase would reduce the stock to possession?

Mr. EMANUEL. That agreement was still in effect as much as it ever could be in effect.

Mr. FULLER. And I might add that Schroder Banking Corporation was not a party to that agreement at any time.

Mr. EMANUEL. You asked about control of the United States Electric. Of course, all this collateral was deposited with the banks at that time, they had first call on it, but the largest stockholders of United States Electric were still the same as what it had been when the company was formed which was the United American Founders group, so-called, and the Hydro Electric Securities Corporation. At all times, as I recall it, they had a majority of the stock of the United States Electric.

Mr. HENDERSON. Was there any financing during this period in '34 and '35?

Mr. EMANUEL. I can't recall offhand, Mr. Henderson. As I remember it, markets weren't very good during that particular period.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The previous exhibit¹ showed the sale or volume of financing during the period from '30 through '36 pursuant to the agreement.

Mr. EMANUEL. I thought you were asking about '34.

Mr. HENDERSON. I was.

Mr. EMANUEL. I don't recall offhand.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Chairman, may I at this time offer in evidence the document previously identified by Mr. Fuller.

(The cable referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1946" and is included in the appendix, p. 12877.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Fuller, for purposes of offering it for the record, will you identify for me the two documents I now hand you? I do not intend to examine you, Mr. Fuller, on those documents. Merely tell me, if you will, if they come from your files, and if they are true and correct copies.

Mr. FULLER. I should think so.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The two documents identified by the witness are offered in evidence.

(The documents referred to were marked "Exhibits Nos. 1947 and 1948" and are included in the appendix on p. 12878.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The pledged collateral more or less went to sleep for a period of time, nothing could be done until about '35, when the next suggestion for recapturing the pledged collateral was advanced by you, Mr. Emanuel. Is that not so, as you recall the situation?

Mr. EMANUEL. During this entire period, constantly we were working on these bank loans, because the situation was always highly dangerous. Of course, the loans were undercollateralized, and, as I say, I can't recall offhand how many different plans we had to redeem it, but it was constantly on the fire.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And at that time you did organize a group to buy the Usepco notes, did you not?

Mr. EMANUEL. I think that was in '36, wasn't it?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Substantially, the end of '35 or early '36; I guess it was the end of '35.

Mr. EMANUEL. What had happened was that Mr. Fisher, who had succeeded Captain Loewenstein at the Hydro Company, was ill himself, and he did come over here I think once or twice while he was ill, and he was hoping not seriously. It developed, however, that he had cancer. During that same period, also in 1935, the Founders group companies had disposed of their United States Electric stock by declaring it out to their stockholders, so they wouldn't come under the Public Utility Act, and always in the plans heretofore, the Founders group of companies had always been willing to make their fair contribution of capital to save the United States Electric Co. So had Mr. Fisher, as far as he could. I think they both felt a high degree of responsibility, akin to my own, to do everything to save the company. When the Founders group disposed of their stock by declaring it out to the stockholders, Mr. Fisher became seriously ill, and during this period sometime, we sent, well, I think Mr. Granbery went over twice to see him, he had some free time, and I think Mr. Seagrave went over once, also. Always we were on the verge of settling with the banks. One time Mr. Fisher, when he was here, had a plan of his own which he thought the banks would approve, and when we lost the support, you might say, of the Founders group, they no longer were stockholders, Fisher was very ill, then we had to formulate new plans to try and save the company if we could. And I think that those came to a head in '36, as I recall it. I can't remember the exact date.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Fuller, who is Robin Wilson?

Mr. FULLER. He is associated with Schroder, in London.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Connected with the banking house?

Mr. FULLER. Of J. Henry Schroder & Co., London; yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I show you a confidential document relating to Usepco bearing the initials of Mr. Wilson, with the date 12/18/35, which purports to come from the files of your company. Tell me whether you recognize this as a true and correct copy.

Mr. FULLER. It would seem to be.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And I show you another cable from Schrobanco to Adshead, a code address, 17 John Street, Adelphi, London, signed by Robin, and tell me if you likewise recognize this as a correct copy.

Mr. FULLER. Yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. In the confidential memorandum prepared by Robin Wilson in regard to Usepco, Mr. Emanuel, he had this to say [reading from "Exhibit No. 1949"]:

Emanuel believe that the Chase Bank, Chemical Bank and Guaranty Trust are prepared to sell for $3,000,000 their claim against USEPCO which is secured by that company's holdings of Standard Power & Light shares. He proposes to offer them $1,000,000 and thinks they might compromise at between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000. He proposes:

(a) A three party joint account with this transaction between himself, Leadenhall Securities and Hydro Electric.

Mr. Fuller, Leadenhall Securities is the investment end of the London bank. Is that correct?

Mr. FULLER. I would say it is a wholly owned financing company of Schroder, London.

Mr. NEHEMKIS [reading further from "Exhibit No. 1949"]:

Having acquired the claim, he would foreclose and take title to the Standard Power & Light stock. He would then call a meeting of directors and principal stockholders of USEPCO and inform them that the shares of USEPCO were valueless, but he proposed to offer pro rata to each shareholder of USEPCO the right to buy from our syndicate all the Standard Power & Light shares, less a small number of commission shares, for the sum which we had paid for them. These Standard Power & Light shares are about 70% of the company and before making the offer to USEPCO shareholders, he would want the directors to confirm that our syndicate acquired the benefit of the existing contract allotting 75% of Standard Gas financing to the present finance group. Our syndicate would then be left with such shares of Standard Power & Light as USEPCO shareholders would not take up, and the right to 75% of Standard Gas financing.

The next step would be to confirm with the Byllesbys that their management contracts with Standard Gas were secure, and obtain their cooperation in liquidating Standard Power & Light, shareholders of which would receive their due proportion of Standard Gas & Electric shares, thereby turning our syndicate's investment into marketable securities.

Mr. Emanuel, in whose interest were you working, the stockholders or the interest of Victor Emanuel and his associates? I offer the document identified by Mr. Fuller and the cable from Robin to Adshead.

(The documents referred to were marked "Exhibits Nos. 1949 and 1950" and are included in the appendix on p. 12879.)

Mr. EMANUEL. I was working solely in the interest of the United States Electric stockholders. I did not send that cable. I never saw that cable or heard of that cable until at this time.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Does Robin's statement misrepresent your position?

Mr. EMANUEL. It certainly did, if that is what he said.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. He was identified by Mr. Fuller as a close associate of yours, tied up with Schrodpriv, and he should have known what was going on.

Mr. EMANUEL. He may have known perfectly well what was going on, but you are asking me to say that those were my views. This entire thing, until the time that Founders withdrew, was entirely to save this for the United States Electric stockholders.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Do you deny, Mr. Emanuel, that the steps laid forth in that confidential memorandum by Wilson were not those that you intended to pursue at the time?

Mr. EMANUEL. I can't speak for what Mr. Wilson said, but they certainly don't coincide with any views that I can now recall.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Do you think it is possible that the steps set forth in that confidential memorandum could have been misunderstood by Robin Wilson, who was in close association with you and the other interests, and who, as a matter of fact, was in this country at the time to represent the London interests; could he have so misunderstood the steps?

Mr. EMANUEL. I might say that up to that time I knew Robin Wilson; I did not know him well. Since then I have known him much better. At that time I wouldn't have construed that Robin Wilson represented any interest in this company other than his house happened to be bankers in London for the Hydro Electric Securities Corporation.

Mr. HENDERSON. Could I ask a question, Mr. Fuller? You said that your company has no interest in Hydro?

Mr. FULLER. No financial interest in Hydro.

Mr. HENDERSON. Partners do not have any interest financially?

Mr. FULLER. No; not of any substance.

Mr. HENDERSON. There is no kind of interest on the part of the partners of the company, directly or indirectly, in Hydro?

Mr. FULLER. There is a personal relationship. They are banker advisers to them. Two of the members of the Schroder organization are on the board of Hydro as bank advisers. I was referring specifically to financial interest, which they never had. They never sponsored Hydro or securities to the public. It has been a purely banker advisory relationship all through.

Mr. EMANUEL. I would like to say, Mr. Henderson, I don't think the time that cable¹ was sent—I don't recall that any of the associates of Schroder were even on the board; they might have been.

Mr. FULLER. I think there was one at that time rather than two, but that one had very little to do with the affairs of the company.

Mr. HENDERSON. Were you going into the question of what Mr. Emanuel did have in mind at that time?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I think, sir, that the evidence as it unfolds itself will indicate that.

Mr. Fuller, I show you a cable from Schrodpriv and another cable from Schrodpriv of December 19, 1935, and December 20, 1935. Will you examine them and tell me whether you recognize them to be true and correct copies? Do you recognize those as coming from your files, Mr. Fuller?

Mr. FULLER. Yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I note in the cable from Schrodpriv to Schrobanco, addressed to the attention of Beal, the following reference [reading from "Exhibit No. 1951"]:

Robins wire USEPCO think preferable await definite plan.

Apparently Robin was pretty close to the London people at the time, Mr. Emanuel—

Mr. FULLER (interposing). He was employed by them at the time.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. So he must have known what was going on. The two documents identified by the witness are offered in evidence.

(The cablegrams referred to were marked "Exhibit No. 1951 and 1952-1" and are included in appendix on p. 12880.)

IMPORTANCE OF FUTURE STANDARD POWER & LIGHT CO. SYSTEM FINANCING
IN CONSIDERING REDEMPTION OF THE PLEDGED COLLATERAL

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Didn't Schrobanco, Mr. Fuller, get the details of the future possible financing from Mr. Emanuel?

Mr. FULLER. Yes; we had numerous details at various times of these proposed rescue parties that Mr. Emanuel has referred to. They changed from time to time. The documents you have just shown me were relatively early in the negotiations, and we always understood that Mr. Emanuel was trying very hard at the time to raise money, and it was rather difficult to raise money for any utility situation at that period, and as he discussed the matter with us, he naturally had to bring out any facts he could in the favorable side to persuade our clients of our London house to put up money, and I believe he brought out all the points that could be done, at least he got the money.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I note, Mr. Emanuel, a memorandum which bears the initials R. W., dated 12/24/35, with this caption, and also initialed by Mr. Fuller [reading from "Exhibit No. 1952-2"]:

Standard Gas and Electric Co. Information obtained by Robin Wilson from Victor Emanuel—

And then a very elaborate detailed statement outlining the various steps to be taken in the future, dissolution steps, financing, in the near future, and so on, and then the following caption: "Possible New Financing," and then a list of the new financing with a notation, "$700,000,000 total over years."

(The memorandum referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1952-2" and is included in appendix on p. 12880.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Don't you think that Mr. Robin Wilson was pretty closely in touch with the situation and knew what was going on?

Then I call your attention to another caption, "Standard Gas Refunding, all issues now outstanding of subsidiaries mentioned by Victor Emanuel for refunding."

Mr. EMANUEL. I don't know just what your question is. I have never seen this document.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. My question was a very simple one. You indicated that Mr. Wilson apparently misconstrued the steps that were going through your mind at the time and that he might not have been informed. I merely call your attention to the fact that Wilson knew extremely intimately and with great detail everything that was taking place because you told him.

Mr. EMANUEL. He might have. I presume from what you say he was in this country during the time this particular thing was done, but what I am saying is you asked me whether I wasn't trying to help my own interests and not the stockholders of Usepco, and that is the only thing I took exception to, because I think I am the only one who would know that. Mr. Wilson wouldn't. I was talking to him about trying to save his company.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Wilson had had many conferences with you, had he not?

Mr. EMANUEL. I can't recall; probably did.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The evidence that has been going into the record indicates that he has.

Mr. EMANUEL. He may have; I didn't say he didn't.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. You don't remember whether or not he did?

Mr. EMANUEL. During this whole period this thing wasn't something that came up one month and then died for six months; there were dozens and dozens of conferences on this thing, meeting after meeting, the principal interests in Usepco making trip after trip to the bank.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. What about a memorandum like this, which reads:

Memorandum, Standard Gas and Electric Company. Information obtained by Robin Wilson from Victor Emanuel?

Take a look at it. Do you think a man can write a memorandum like that unless he knows what is in your mind? Just thumb through it. Look at the details of that memorandum. Where did Robin Wilson get this information?

Mr. EMANUEL. I never said, Mr. Nehemkis, that he didn't get information from me; he undoubtedly did.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Fuller, I show you a letter by Carlton P. Fuller to Mr. John L. Simpson, dated December 26, 1935, which purports to come from the files of Schroder Rockefeller & Co., Inc. Will you be good enough to tell me whether this is in fact a true copy? And tell me whether you recognize that as having been a letter you wrote.

Mr. FULLER. Yes; Mr. Simpson was at that time in Paris, which was much closer to the real source of authority on Hydro, which was Brussels, than we were, and we naturally wanted to keep him fully informed of any negotiations over here, just as Mr. Wilson had to keep his principals in London, who were advising Hydro, informed, and therefore many details were transmitted at various times about various trips of proposed rescue parties.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. In other words, the traveling ambassadors at this time were Robin Wilson, with headquarters in London, and John Simpson, making headquarters in Paris, but working toward Belgium?

Mr. FULLER. They happened to be in those places, not for this particular business, because they were regular trips they made, and this business came up while they were there.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The document identified by the witness is offered in evidence, may it please the Committee.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. It may be received.

(The letter referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1953" and appears in the appendix on p. 12882.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. This letter reads as follows [reading from "Exhibit No. 1953"]:

Jerry—

May I know who Jerry is, please?

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Beal; we have two Jerrys.

Mr. NEHEMKIS (continuing):

Jerry and I have just spent four hours with Robin and Victor Emanuel on this situation—

And "this situation," according to the caption of the letter is re U. S. Electric?

Mr. FULLER. That situation was the question of buying the collateral or the notes from the bank and raising money to do it.

Mr. NEHEMKIS (reading further from "Exhibit No. 1953"):

And Robin has departed for the boat, escorted by Victor. He is extremely keen on the situation we have been discussing and we have been having long talks in London about it as well as with you upon your return there, so that we thought you would like to have our own slant on the whole matter.

And then the letter—I won't read all the details set out in very neat little captions: "Proposal"; then there comes one under the category "Strategy," which I would like to read:

Jerry has emphasized with Robin that the latter's chief object upon his return should be to convince Hydro and other prospective underwriters that the Standard Power & Light stock securing the bank loans is an attractive gamble at the present time.

Now, according to the evidence which has gone into the record only a few minutes ago, Schroder thought it was practically worthless.

Mr. FULLER. I would like to call attention there to the word "gamble" and call attention also to the market situation in second-grade utilities at that time.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The record so shows your comment, Mr. Fuller [reading from "Exhibit No. 1953"]:

Leaving the question of the financing well in the background in order that it may not appear that the scheme is designed to use other people's money for acquiring a position in the financing . . .

Mr. Fuller, isn't that exactly what the scheme was designed to do?

Mr. FULLER. I call your attention that this is a letter concerned with Hydro-Electric Securities' money and "other people's money" is their money as distinguished from Schroder money. At that time we were just renewing our contact with Hydro after Fisher's death, and I may say that the relationships were not very good. Today we could go to them on a direct basis and discuss the whole thing. At that time we didn't want to emphasize the advantages we would get, which were important in our minds.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now, another comment by you set out under the category, "Receivership" [Reading further "Exhibit No. 1953"]:

A 77b action has been proceeding since the October 1st default—

That is the default in the interest on the notes?

Mr. FULLER. Standard Gas notes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Standard Gas notes?

Mr. FULLER. I assume so.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. [Reading further from "Exhibit No. 1953"]:

* * * but the conditions of this receivership seems unusually lenient, with the Management left as sole Trustees, 70% of the maturing bonds now in the hands of the Committee representing the Management, and the opposing Protective Committees not too obstreperous. On the information Emanuel produces, it would not seem unlikely that the Company could be brought out of receivership in the near future.

And then the following caption on page 3 of your letter to Mr. Simpson: "Future financing:"

Since Jerry has written you separately regarding our prospects for doing underwriting, we'll simply assume here that we shall find a way to take advantage of such a situation as we are discussing. Once the group has acquired the claims from the banks, there will undoubtedly be terrifically bitter negotiations with the present Usepco group over the future division of financing. The idea is not to exclude them from it, but to swap with them participation in some of their financing. The plan is to leave the Byllesby management and interest in the situation undisturbed.

And then you conclude with the caption, "Our point of view:" which I read to you:

We are not carried away by all these big figures, nor by Emanuel's eloquence, nor by Robin's enthusiasm. We are, however, definitely impressed by the possibility of getting into the middle of a very large picture with good gambling possibilities, on the basis of a moderate contingent commitment.

Is this prospective commitment really moderate? We certainly would not undertake such a contingent guarantee if it amounted to a million dollars maximum if the situation proves entirely worthless, and we should definitely prefer it to be only $100,000. Nevertheless, a $250,000 maximum commitment, especially when it begins to operate only after a 50% decline in the relatively low cost of acquisition, does not seem to us out of line with the possibilities in the situation. (These possibilities, of course, include deposits and fiscal agencies from the Standard Gas system and perhaps an underwriting commission in the form of Standard Power & Light shares at the time they are offered to Usepco shareholders.)

We have fully in mind, of course, the political pressure on utilities, the fact that Standard Gas may not get out of receivership as soon as Emanuel expects, the possibility that the banks may decide not to sell their claims at a sufficiently low price, the difficulties of making arrangements with the present Usepco group, the stickiness of some Standard Gas securities even if we control the financing, etc., etc. Nevertheless, we think there is a chance to make a good play here without any heavy commitment, and we hope that Robin will be able to produce some sort of bid from Hydro and others to be presented to the banks.

Now, Mr. Simpson was not certain of the wisdom of buying into the financing, was he?

Mr. FULLER. Neither were any of us. We lined up the possibilities, as you so very clearly and eloquently read, at the time, and we thought for a modified commitment anything we could do would be useful.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Yes; it was a good deal as it appeared at that time and Mr. Simpson's feeling was that Schrobancro would probably get little consideration unless it did, however, buy in.

Mr. FULLER. That is right, our relations with Hydro were such at the time we couldn't count on full support in any sort of undertaking.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And the thing you were buying in here was financing?

Mr. FULLER. As far as Schroder Banking Corporation was concerned, they were interested in any banking participation they could get because that was their function. As far as Hydro was concerned, they also had the investment interest in mind.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Schroder was interested in deposits, etc?

Mr. FULLER. Yes; in any banking participation.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And the thing that you really were concerned about, or rather your people were really concerned about, was the possibility of buying into the future financing of this system. However, the medium for buying in would ultimately be worked out, is that correct, sir?

Mr. FULLER. As far as we were concerned, that is our business and naturally what we were interested in.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. However, while Schrobanco may not have been too keen on the deal, you, Mr. Emanuel, never lost your original enthusiasm, did you?

Mr. EMANUEL. Keen on what deal?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Buying in on 75 percent of the financing of Standard Gas System, that is what we are talking about.

Mr. EMANUEL. That was not a primary consideration with me. I was trying to save this company.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Save the company for the stockholders?

Mr. EMANUEL. Yes, sir.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I wanted to be clear, Mr. Emanuel.

Mr. Emanuel, perhaps you can recall a cablegram to Schroder, London, from yourself, dated January 8, 1936, in which you, among other things, had this to say to Major Pam and Robin Wilson [reading from "Exhibit No. 1954-1"]:

Of course as previously explained, it impossible avoid participation in particular pieces System financing by houses long identified in the business with local houses in territories served which however never major amount which situation understood by your office here from their previous experience in Systems financing (stop) As explained the negotiations with other houses which are part of American group now in business would have to be conducted delicately and one hundred percent reciprocation might not be possible or advisable.

Suppose you look at that and tell me whether that isn't a cable you sent to Major Pam and Robin Wilson?

Mr. EMANUEL. That cable was probably sent by me. By this time, 1936, the Founders' group, as I have previously testified, distributed their shares in Usepco. Fisher I think by that time had died. He had been my contact with the Hydro Company, and ever since Loewenstein's death, he is the one who had worked with me on any number of previous plans.

At this particular point, it seemed impossible to save this company with the resources of the company in America who had been working on it previously, because we had lost Founders' support, and on Fisher's death, it made the Hydro situation very difficult, but what I was trying to do was to do anything I possibly could leading toward a redemption of this collateral and this collateral was finally redeemed and it was offered to the United States Electric shareholders at the exact same price at which it was redeemed.

I am perfectly willing to admit in order to get that done, in which I have spent my life during this whole period, and because all the time from the time United States Electric was formed the depression started immediately afterwards, and this company had had trouble; I had served it for many years without any salary or other compensation, and in fact paid good many of the expenses out of my own pocket. I was willing to do almost anything to save some stake in this thing for the stockholders. That was my primary consideration. I admit that Emanuel & Co. by this time was in the investment banking business, but they never could have participated much in any financing because we weren't a large house. I think there was only one issue in which Emanuel & Co. had what you might call a really large participation.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Fuller, I show you a letter from yourself to Mr. John L. Simpson, dated January 10, 1936. Can you tell me whether you recognize this to be a true and correct copy of an original in your possession and custody?

I meant to ask you, Mr. Emanuel, you intended, did you not, for the preferred stockholders to take up their pro rata share?

Mr. EMANUEL. I think we had some formula worked whereby they were to take up a small number of the shares. We didn't give them a very generous percentage because that stock was only held in three hands, as I recall it.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now, if the stockholders had taken up that offer, it would have just about ruined your plans, wouldn't it?

Mr. EMANUEL. No; that is what we wanted them to do, is to take it up. They took about a third of the stock, as I recall it.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. You mean you wanted them on paper to do that, but you hoped they wouldn't?

Mr. EMANUEL. No, sir; we hoped that they would, but we couldn't send out any selling letters on it because this stock wasn't registered.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Have you identified the letter for me, Mr. Fuller?

Mr. FULLER. Yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. "Yes" means it is a true and correct copy of an original in your possession?

Mr. FULLER. I presume so, I haven't seen the original for some time.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The document is offered in evidence.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. Do you mean the whole document? Some of it seems to be crossed out.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I apologize for that, that is an error. I don't know how those lines got on it. But the document should be printed, if you will so order it, in its entirety.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. It may be admitted.

(The letter referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1954-2" and is included in the appendix on p. 12886.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I want to read to you, Mr. Emanuel, from Mr. Fuller's letter which he has just identified. This is on page 3 of Mr. Fuller's letter of January 10, 1936, to Mr. Simpson, London [reading from "Exhibit No. 1954-2"]:

After the above discussion of philosophy, you may be interested to learn that Victor Emanuel is all in a sweat about how to proceed next in this situation after receiving approval of the $2,000,000 bid limit. The promptness of the action on the $2,000,000 really staggered him a bit and made him wonder if Robin had fully disclosed all the obstacles in the situation, such as the possibility of a long lock-up before Standard Power & Light stock can be reduced to possession on account of delays in registration of the stock; or the other possibility that Usepco stockholders may—take up Standard Power & Light stock and leave our group with only Hydro's 25% participation in hand, whereas real control—

Note that word, it is underlined in this letter—

Mind you, I am not manufacturing these words, I am reading a letter from Mr. Carlton P. Fuller—whereas real control of the financing depends on a 51% voting control of the Standard Power Board, which could then be obtained only through proxy solicitation, etc., etc. Emanuel (still believing that the London group will do all its underwriting in this situation through us as soon as we have set up a new vehicle) is trying definitely to tie Schrobancro into all these problems so that London will not place the entire blame on his shoulders if a fiasco results.

It is really a frightfully complicated situation—

And I sympathize with you, Mr. Fuller, it is,— and both he and we are trying to avoid a denouement in which we would have lost the business and at the same time have antagonized all the present financial group. Equally, we wish to proceed so that our bid can't be used to raise that of some competitor. There is also the problem of possibly getting together with Harrison Williams.

All of which may lead you to conclude with us that the deal is far from done; but there is some money in hand now, and before the time this reaches you, another stage will probably have developed.

Since writing the above, more gyrations have occurred, and Emanuel has decided not to talk to the Chase today but sit down with us tomorrow to plan the campaign once more. Allen Dulles has called up to tell us a little more openly than previously that Harrison Williams is interested in the picture, so the kettle is boiling merrily, and probably Victor will approach the Chase on Monday.

Now, will you tell me who Allen Dulles is?

Mr. FULLER. He is counsel for Schroder Banking Corporation.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And he is connected with what law firm?

Mr. FULLER. Sullivan & Cromwell.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Can you explain to me the meaning of this rather cryptic statement [referring to "Exhibit No. 1954-2"]:

Allen Dulles has called up to tell us a little more openly than previously that Harrison Williams is interested in the picture.

Mr. FULLER. As Mr. Emanuel has testified, it was well known Mr. Williams was interested in the Standard Gas picture at the time, but we had not received any direct intimation of that fact until counsel indicated that someone might be, not identifying the someone, and at this time apparently he disclosed the principal for whom he had indicated an interest.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. But previously he had been apparently somewhat reluctant to make this information available, although you thought you knew it.

Mr. FULLER. Presumably he had not been authorized by this principal to reveal the name of the principal.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And Mr. Dulles was then representing Harrison Williams?

Mr. FULLER. No; other members of the firm represented Harrison Williams, and he represented us.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And Allen Dulles represented Schrobanco?

Mr. FULLER. As general counsel.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. But the same firm, however, was representing two different interests; is that your understanding?

Mr. FULLER. Well, I hope they represented many different interests for their sakes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I am addressing myself to the facts in hand. As you have testified, apparently Sullivan & Cromwell represented Harrison Williams.

Mr. FULLER. They are general counsel for North American Co.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. You have also testified that Allen Dulles, a partner of the firm, represented Schrobanco.

Mr. FULLER. That is right, and a lot of other clients.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I didn't ask you that. Confine yourself to my questions, if you will, sir.

Did not the Hydro London interests agree to put up $1,500,000 in the deal?

Mr. FULLER. What time is this?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. This is in January of 1936.

Mr. FULLER. I have forgotten the time there, but I remember the amount that the London interests were persuaded to put up varied from, I think, a low of $1,000,000 to an eventual high of a $1,500,000 or a $1,750,000.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I show you two cables from Schrobanco to Schrodpriv, London. Will you be good enough to examine them and tell me whether you recognize these to be true and correct copies?

Mr. FULLER. Yes; these indicate that Mr. Emanuel had made some progress in trying to persuade the Hydro interests to put in some money which he had started when Mr. Wilson was in the country.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. That was not my question. My question was, do you identify these two documents as being true and correct copies of documents in your possession and custody?

Mr. FULLER. I said yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Thank you, sir. I note that the cable dated January 15, 1936, to Schrodpriv bears the notation: "Copy to Mr. Emanuel," and the cable dated January 14, 1936, reads as follows [reading from "Exhibit No. 1955"]:

Emanuel made tentative approach Chase and had favorable reception but finds active competition from Harrison Williams through Guaranty and others (stop)

Emanuel indicated they must be prepared put in cash and/or reciprocal financing if they wished retain position in Standard financing (stop) Initial reaction favorable and substantial cash will probably be forthcoming as well as good start on later reciprocal financing agreements (stop) If business can be done for two million dollars Emanuel assumes you would be willing if necessary to allocate up to five hundred thousand to that group leaving total London participation at one million dollars and total American one million including Emanuel for minimum $250,000 (stop)

What is the meaning of this expression that the group, if they wish to retain their position in Standard financing, would have to either put up cash or indicate that reciprocity on future financing was in order, Mr. Emanuel?

Mr. EMANUEL. I don't know. I didn't send that cablegram.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Does that misrepresent your views at the time?

Mr. EMANUEL. I can't say exactly what my views were. What I was trying to raise was cash.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And you went around to the group and said, if I might put it in colloquial language, "You fellows fork over either cold cash or assure us of future reciprocity in financing, or you are out of this deal."

Mr. EMANUEL. I certainly don't think I did. I don't remember asking for any reciprocity. I was trying to raise money for this deal, and I might also add I was in constant touch with other members of the North American group throughout all the negotiations from the time they started.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Fuller, this cable which you were good enough to identify bears your initials, its authorization over the cable wires was by you; how does it happen you so grossly misunderstood Mr. Emanuel?

Mr. FULLER. Do you expect me to answer that question?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Yes; why not?

Mr. FULLER. I don't know how to answer it.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Did you misunderstand Mr. Emanuel? You were charged with the responsibility of informing London of developments. Mr. Emanuel has no recollection of this fact. You state in the opening of your cable. [Reading from "Exhibit No. 1955"]:

Emanuel made tentative approach Chase—

And so forth, then you proceed to indicate—

Emanuel indicated they must be prepared put in cash and/or reciprocal financing if they wished retain position in financing.

Mr. FULLER. I can't interpret that cable for you but I can tell you in general what the situation was then. Very definitely we were interested in either financing or reciprocity or anything else we could get or they could give us.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Did you write this cable?

Mr. FULLER. Are my initials on it?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Yes.

Mr. FULLER. I wrote it; yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The cable identified by the witness is offered in evidence.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. This may be received.

(The cablegram referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1955" and is included in the appendix on p. 12887.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And the second cable which Mr. Fuller has been good enough to identify has the following that I call to the committee's attention. [Reading from "Exhibit No. 1956":]

Hydro Schroder group agree they will take participation of between $1,000,000 and $1,500,000 in purchase provided total cost does not exceed $2,500,000 and provided their proportion not less /than/ 50% of total (stop)

While approving Emanuel tactics we wish to be kept informed important negotiations and also to know what percentage financial benefits will accrue to our group direct and reciprocal.

And that, I call to the committee's attention, is a cable from Schrodpriv to Schrobanco at New York, and a copy of which was sent to Mr. Emanuel.

I offer this in evidence.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. This may be received.

(The cablegram referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1956" and is included in the appendix on p. 12887.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. At this time London was pretty hard put, was it not, to see what benefits it could get from this deal, do you recall that?

Mr. FULLER. I recall very well they had gone into the merits of things as a speculation and decided it had some speculative merit but was a borderline case. They were more convinced of the prospects of second-grade utilities than we were in this country, but not quite convinced enough and had some trouble in persuading their clients, one of whom was Hydro, of the benefits at that time of proposing second-grade utilities in the utility division of the market, and they actually acquired some other securities. In this particular case they didn't think it quite made the grade for a purchase that way and all sorts of arguments had to be used to get them to do the one which was of possible benefit for the financing. That was a very definite consideration all the way through this period because the gambling attraction of it as a speculative security wasn't of quite enough interest.

J. HENRY SCHRODER & CO., LONDON, DESIRES ASSURANCE ON FUTURE
STANDARD POWER & LIGHT CO. FINANCING

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Fuller, will you be good enough to examine a copy of the cablegram from Schrodpriv, presumably to Schrobanco, and tell me whether you recognize it to be a true and correct copy of an original in your files and custody?

Mr. FULLER. Yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Before you release it, will you take it back, please? There appears on the lower left-hand margin a pencil notation. Will you read that, please?

Mr. FULLER. It says, "Copy to Mr. Emanuel."

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I beg pardon? What did you say?

Mr. FULLER. It says, "Copy to Mr. Emanuel."

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Cable No. 135 from Schrodpriv in London to Schrobanco, dated February 14, 1936 [reading from "Exhibit No. 1957"]:

To help us form opinion as to advisability for Hydro and other clients participating in Usepcos loan acquisition should Emanuel make suitable proposal, please enlighten us on value of share in future refinancing Standing Gas subsidiaries STOP

Emanuel has repeatedly said that this financing probably more valuable than prospects of appreciation of Standard Power stock so we want assurance that new syndicate will really thus acquire valuable asset STOP

The London banking house were rather shrewd fellows; they wanted to know precisely what it is they were putting their money in, weren't they, Mr. Fuller?

Mr. FULLER. That is quite right.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now [Reading further from "Exhibit No. 1957"]:

Please discuss with Emanuel and cable how this asset could in your opinion be valorised STOP

That meant if Schrodpriv put its money in here the one thing they were concerned about, were they not, is how they could write this thing up on their books as an asset, does it not?

Mr. FULLER. No; they weren't. Schroder, London, were not putting any money in this at any time.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I mean Hydro was putting the money in.

Mr. FULLER. They wanted to know how they could justify an investment that had no return on it in a speculative field when it didn't seem quite as valuable as some other speculative investments at the time; if they could show how they could get a return, they might justify themselves.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. That was with reference to "Please discuss with Emanuel and cable how this asset could in your opinion be valorized"?

Mr. FULLER. Yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS [Reading further from "Exhibit No. 1957"]:

Is there no danger that present First Boston syndicate could insist on right future financing without compensation to us STOP

Even if syndicate could acquire right to 75% future financing what benefit could there be to Hydro and others here who are not American issuing house STOP

Please cable fully to enable us explain situation in detail to our friends.

The document identified by Witness Fuller, from which I have been reading is offered in evidence, Mr. Chairman.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. It will be received.

(The cable referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1957" and is included in the appendix on p. 12887.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now, you spent a good deal of time in preparing your answer to Schrodpriv's cable, did you not, Mr. Fuller?

Mr. FULLER. Presumably.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And you consulted with Mr. Emanuel, did you not, about it?

Mr. FULLER. Presumably.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And did you not also consult with Mr. Allen Dulles?

Mr. FULLER. At some stage, I am not sure just when it was.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. As a matter of fact, 4 days were required—excuse me. (Conferring with member of staff.)

As a matter of fact, 4 days were required to complete your studies before preparing the reply to Schrodpriv, do you recall?

Mr. FULLER. I don't recall, but if you have the document that shows so I assume it did.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I show you four documents, dated February 17, 1936, February 18, February 20, and February 24, 1936, which purport to come from the files of your company. Will you be good enough to identify them for me, please?

Mr. FULLER. Yes; I identify them.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. This is a letter from Mr. Victor Emanuel under date of February 17, 1936, to you, Mr. Fuller. It reads as follows [Reading from "Exhibit No. 1958"]:

Dear Carl: I have now had a chance to read your draft of the cable to London in reply to their cable to you of the 14th, received by you on the 15th. I believe the cable is all right, except for the following suggestions:

1. That a satisfactory arrangement be worked out as to how you handle the agreed percentage of any profits to be paid the London group, but I presume you have talked to Alan Dulles about this.

Did you discuss this with Mr. Dulles?

Mr. FULLER. I presume so.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And can you tell me at this time what Mr. Dulles advised?

Mr. FULLER. What was the question involved at the time? I was consulting him constantly.

Mr. NEHEMKIS (reading further from "Exhibit No. 1958"):

That a satisfactory arrangement to be worked out as to how you handle the agreed percentage of any profits to be paid the London group, but I presume you have talked to Alan Dulles about this.

Mr. FULLER. I can't recall right now what the particular discussion was.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Then the next thought that Mr. Emanuel presented to you was this:

(5) The last statement in your cable is very conservative, as to Standard Gas financing, as all in all the underwriting group profit averages more than 1 point, which is the amount you have stated.

I do not know whether you want to say that the present USEPCO position of 75%, as a base for financing, is not covered by a legal agreement but by a memorandum, but that Byllesbys have verbally agreed with me, and will, I am certain, before we consummate a deal, agree to continue the memorandum to the new group, and that with this assurance, plus the position our stock would give us, there is no question in my mind that our group could inherit the position the present group now has. This, of course, does not change what you have said as to valorizing this for the London group who might not want to participate direct in the financing.

I offer the document in evidence, Mr. Chairman, as well as the two other documents identified by the witness. There should be four documents.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. They may be admitted.

(The documents referred to were marked "Exhibits Nos. 1958, 1959, 1960, and 1961-1" and are included in the appendix on pp. 12888-12890.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now, the Usepco deal seems to have gone completely to sleep during this time. Do you recall, Mr. Emanuel?

Mr. EMANUEL. I don't know what the dates of those are.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. We are now in the early spring of the year 1936.

Mr. EMANUEL. I can't recall that exactly; I don't remember it ever slept very long.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now I show you a letter from Robin Wilson to you under date of the 27th of March, and I ask you to look at the third paragraph and see whether that doesn't refresh your recollection.

Mr. EMANUEL. This is a letter from Wilson evidently to me. It might have had a short lull. He rather gathers it was, but he might not know whether it was or not.

(The letter referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1961-2" and is included in the appendix on p. 12891.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. It was sort of slumbering embers on the fire all the time?

Mr. EMANUEL. Always.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And when you gave a good, strong blow, why, up she went?

Mr. EMANUEL. It wasn't me giving a blow, if the banks wanted to reduce this collateral. I might help this whole thing by saying that I was doing anything I could to raise this money from any decent source.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Wilson wrote to you as follows:

The USEPCO deal seems to have gone completely to sleep for the moment, but I gather from Carl Fuller that you are being kept pretty well informed of the intentions of our competitors. If by any chance the deal does come off I feel it will be a good thing for me to be in New York to represent our group in negotiations over our share of underwriting.

Just how were you informed, Mr. Emanuel, of what your competitors were doing at this time, and what their intentions were?

Mr. EMANUEL. I swear I don't know. I naturally heard one way or the other of people considering the purchase of this collateral. The only person I can think of at the moment principally was Harrison Williams, I knew he was interested. I can't say just exactly at that time, during the period about this collateral.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. It just strikes me as being a little bit unusual for a man in your position, who has a tremendous stake here, to know what his competitor's moves are. How did you know what Harrison Williams was going to do in this situation?

Mr. EMANUEL. I certainly didn't know from him.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. That is it. Now how did you know?

Mr. EMANUEL. I don't know.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. But somehow or other you did manage to keep pretty well informed of what the next move would be?

Mr. EMANUEL. I suppose what happened at times, one of the bank officers would call me up and say I had better put on all the hurry I could in resolving this matter. I suppose that is the way I knew.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. By the way, who was your counsel at this time?

Mr. EMANUEL. Seibert and Riggs.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Seibert and Riggs are in New York, your counsel?

Mr. EMANUEL. Yes, they are.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now about this time that we are discussing the problem, the spring of '36, did not Bancamerica Blair come into the picture, do you recall?

Mr. EMANUEL. Yes, they came in sometime before we had what we called rescue parties.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And there were certain difficulties that were cropping up at this time about giving Hydro underwriting participations, do you recall that, Mr. Emanuel?

Mr. EMANUEL. Well, it is pretty hard to recall. I don't think Hydro ever wanted underwriting. They never have been bankers, to my knowledge, at any time.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now, Mr. Fuller, may I trouble you once again to identify a cablegram from Schrodpriv to Schrodanco under date of May 26, 1936. Would you identify the cable I am now showing you at the same time?

Mr. FULLER. (Examines and returns papers to Mr. Nehemkis without comment.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Emanuel, I want to call your attention to a paragraph in Schrodpriv's cable to Schrobanco as of May 22, 1936.

Mr. FULLER. May I point out those cables are to a particular person; the cables are addressed to a particular person.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. This is addressed for Mr. Wilson and this one refers to 257.

Mr. FULLER. Yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. (Reading from "Exhibit No. 1962"):

We could certainly arrange with Hydro and others to accept less than theoretical percentage if all risk avoided although we understand underwriting and even selling syndicate now practically without any risk owing to new issue conditions but drop from point 375 to point one seems impossible to explain and we fear great difficulties.

And then came the reply to that.

(Reading from "Exhibit No. 1963"):

Very difficult for foreign underwriter like Leadenhall enforce reciprocity and Schroder Inc. would have hard work to protect our interests. There still is risk on underwriting because underwriting group must take commitment few hours before registration statement effective and selling group cannot be legally bound until registration effective.

Now I had assumed that there was—at least from the testimony of the witnesses who have appeared before this committee—tremendous risk involved in underwriting and I now find out that there is very little risk, and whatever risk does occur in a matter of a few hours.

Mr. FULLER. That is why I wanted to point out who wrote the cables; those were written by Mr. Wilson of our London office, who was here in New York at the time, and they are very clear evidence of some of the difficulties we were having in the situation where they assumed that London conditions might be the same as in this country, and they also had the very false assumption that the Securities Act and the other legislation at the time set up for the protection of investors had made it perfectly riskless for the underwriter. They just didn't know the facts.

Mr. Wilson discovered some of the facts while he was here and still rather played them down in his cable saying a few hours' risk.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I call to your attention, Mr. Fuller, that this cable¹ which you have identified, bears your initials; that its transmission over the wire from Schrobanco to Schrodpriv was authorized by CPF, being Carlton P. Fuller. If Mr. Wilson had made such a mistake as to misunderstand syndication under American conditions, how did it happen you authorized the transmission of that cable?

Mr. FULLER. Authorization simply means authorized to be charged to a certain account, and has nothing to do with the content of the cable itself.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And you were not at all concerned about the content of this cable when it passed your desk?

Mr. FULLER. I didn't say that.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. What?

Mr. FULLER. I didn't say that.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. You saw the cable?

Mr. FULLER. Yes; but I didn't say I wasn't concerned with the content; I simply said I didn't censor the cable.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. But certainly this was a most serious thing to let your London people have the impression that underwriting involves no risk. How did it happen that you allowed this cable to go over your desk?

Mr. FULLER. The cable, as I recall, says that is only a few hours risk; a few hours might in that terminology mean 48 hours. We are dealing here with high grade securities and that probably was the understanding at the time.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. You think about all the underwriting risk there is today is probably 48 hours?

Mr. FULLER. I didn't say that. I said at the time this cable was written that is probably the understanding that went into it. You must remember at that time we ourselves were not in the underwriting business; all the Security Acts were relatively new, certainly as far as we were concerned, and therefore our more complete knowledge of today cannot be attributed to that period in which the cable was written. There was a whole period of education going on there then.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I recall your attention, however, that this was in May of 1936.

Mr. FULLER. That is right.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now, Mr. Chairman, I don't believe I have offered in evidence the cable from which I have just been reading, being cable dated May 25, 1936, identified by the witness. As well as the cable identified by Mr. Fuller to which the cable you now have is an answer.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. They may be admitted.

(The cables referred to were marked "Exhibits Nos. 1962 and 1963" and are included in the appendix on p. 12892.)

OBTAINING THE STANDARD POWER & LIGHT CO. STOCK PLEDGED AS COLLATERAL.—ORGANIZATION OF SCHRODER ROCKEFELLER & CO., INC., JULY 1936.—AGREEMENT WITH J. HENRY SCHRODER & CO., LONDON

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I show you, Mr. Fuller, a letter dated August 24, 1936, to Messrs. Schroder Rockefeller and Company, Inc., from the London banking house of J. Henry Schroder and Company. Do you recognize this to be a true and correct copy of an original in your possession?

Mr. FULLER. It seems to be a copy of an agreement by which they were to share in the proceeds of underwritings; yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I offer the document in evidence, Mr. Chairman.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. It may be received.

(The document referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1964" and is included in the appendix on p. 12893.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Eventually the Usepco notes were reported to the banks, were they not, and the Standard Gas stock reduced to possession?

Mr. FULLER. The Standard Power stock reduced to possession.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Standard Power, is that your understanding, Mr. Emanuel?

Mr. HENDERSON. What was the amount paid eventually?

Mr. EMANUEL. $3,500,000 cash.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. What was the value of the stock?

Mr. EMANUEL. I couldn't recall at that time. I think it was probably less than that, or a little less than that.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Fuller, when was Schroder Rockefeller & Co., Inc., organized?

Mr. FULLER. Early in July 1936.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And can you tell me the purpose underlying the organization of Schroder Rockefeller?

Mr. FULLER. Yes; to engage in the underwriting of securities business.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Who was instrumental in organizing Schroder Rockefeller?

Mr. FULLER. Several Schroder interests and Rockefeller interests, primarily.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And who owns the stock of Schroder Rockefeller?

Mr. FULLER. There are two classes of the million-dollar capitalization; the nonvoting stock is practically all owned by the Schroder banking corporation; the voting stock is owned, $200,000 by Mr. Avery Rockefeller and his family; $225,000 by J. Henry Schroder & Co., London; and $50,000 by Atlas General & Industrial Investment Trust, London, which is an independent investment trust.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And was not Schroder Rockefeller & Co. organized for the purpose of engaging in underwriting activities involving the 75-percent financing into which the European and American interests had bought?

Mr. FULLER. It was organized to get as much of a participation in Standard Gas financing as was possible under the circumstances, and to engage in other business.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And did not Schroder Rockefeller enter into a contract¹ with its parent, J. Henry Schroder & Co.?

Mr. FULLER. This one you have just shown me?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And which you have identified?

Mr. FULLER. Yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And substantially what were the terms of that contract?

Mr. FULLER. As I have testified before, all through this period regarding the rescue party the London interests concerned wanted to see some way of getting a return on their money on their hook-up of funds. Various means discussed of doing that, ranging from their doing direct underwriting over here to doing it through somebody else, and finally when we evolved the Schroder Rockefeller set-up they agreed to do it through them, so long as Schroder Rockefeller gave them the return on the earnings they made from underwriting in the Standard Gas system.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And what was the return which Schrrock was to pay to Schrodpriv?

Mr. FULLER. Schrodpriv as agent?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Yes.

Mr. FULLER. As I recall, it was about one-tenth of 1 percent on the face value of an issue.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And have such payments been made in the past?

Mr. FULLER. That agreement was outstanding for about 5 months, as I recall, and two payments were made under it.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And do you recall approximately when those payments were made?

Mr. FULLER. They came after the Louisville issue and the Oklahoma Gas & Electric issue which were August and December '36, respectively.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Do you know whether or not it is required under the registration statements that are filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission to report such payments or similar payments?

Mr. FULLER. We were advised by counsel at the time that these particular payments were not required.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. May I inquire at this time the name of counsel who so advised?

Mr. FULLER. Our counsel is Sullivan and Cromwell.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Did they render a legal written opinion that such payments were not required to be reported to the Commission?

Mr. FULLER. I don't recall whether it was in writing or not.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Will you be good enough to make available that information to this committee by a letter when you have the leisure to ascertain that fact?

Mr. FULLER. Yes.¹

SUMMARY OF THE RECORD BY COUNSEL--COMMENTS BY MR. EMANUEL

Mr. HENDERSON. Mr. Nehemkis, I must confess that I am a little bewildered by the rapid introduction of evidence here. Somewhere after the loan went under water, I went under water, too, and I wonder, for my benefit, before we go any further, if you couldn't start back with that financing of U. S., and bring it down to date.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. To put it very simply, and to rush over a vast amount of detail which I can't put quite as precisely as one would like to, the situation, briefly, is this: Back in 1928, a much younger man, Victor Emanuel became acquainted with an European capitalist and financier, one Captain Alfred Loewenstein, who had investments in various utilities and other enterprises all over the Continent, and Mr. Emanuel and Captain Loewenstein sat down together and decided that that was a good time to buy into American utilities. So they worked out a scheme of acquiring control of Standard Gas & Electric, American Water Works, and another utility. Had one devil not intervened at that time, namely, the depression, it would appear from the evidence that Mr. Emanuel and Captain Alfred Loewenstein might have controlled the utility system of this country. But unfortunately for those plans, there was a thing called the depression, and some of the plans went awry. However, the program was carried out pretty much with reference to the acquisition of the Standard Gas system, and the committee will recall from the testimony of the first witness that the Standard Gas system was an empire worth fighting over, there were assets in that empire of about a billion dollars, with property scattered throughout the United States and Mexico. Now, the problem, of course, of getting control of that utility empire centered about acquiring the stock held largely by the Byllesby interests, and you recall that the testimony showed this morning that Mr. Emanuel worked out a series of legal moves, stockholders' suits were brought, mandamus proceedings were instituted, all in an endeavor to acquire this stock from the Byllesbys, who had the crucial position.

¹Mr. Fuller, under date of January 24, 1940, submitted the information requested. It is included in the appendix on p. 13017.

The alignment of interests both at home and abroad were too great for the Byllesbys, and finally they capitulated to Mr. Emanuel's interests and Mr. Loewenstein's interests, who by that time had fallen out of an airplane when it was crossing the British Channel.

Well, the depression, as I say, came along and even Standard Gas & Electric Co. found itself in difficulties. I should, however, retrace one step. It was necessary at this time to take care of a banking house by the name of Ladenburg, Thalmann, that always had a rather important place in the financing and it was as a result of this necessity that the difficulties arose, because a certain cash payment had to be made to this banking firm, and in order to raise cash, borrowings had to be made from some of the banks.

As a result of borrowing from these banks, stock was pledged with the banks, and subsequent battles centered around the recapture of this pledged security, and you will recall that earlier this morning there was introduced in evidence a banking agreement¹ that was evolved after the first battle had taken place. You will recall that the evidence shows that the financing followed very closely the terms of that banking agreement.

Mr. HENDERSON. That was between the Byllesby group and what you might call the Emanuel group.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. That is correct; substantially, yes, that is the situation.

Following the pledging of the stock with the New York banks, as the testimony has shown this afternoon, a long, protracted struggle took place in which Mr. Emanuel bended every effort to raise cash in order to obtain and repossess that pledged collateral, because the secret to the Standard Gas system rested with whoever had ownership or could reduce to possession the pledged collateral. You will recall, sir, from the evidence that Mr. Harrison Williams at this time became interested in possibly buying this pledged collateral.

Finally, the collateral was obtained by Mr. Emanuel's group, and always the big stake in this empire was the future financing, whether or not 75 percent of this utility empire's financing would fall to the interests represented by Mr. Emanuel and the European group.

Now, for various legal difficulties and complexities, Schrodpriv, the London house, couldn't very well participate in American underwriting activities, and in order, however, for Schrodpriv's American house, Schrobanco, to get its full reciprocity out of this 75 percent financing that they were buying into, as Mr. Fuller has previously testified, a new investment banking firm was organized, Schroder Rockefeller & Co. And Mr. Fuller has just testified as to where that stock is held, some of it held in London, some by the Rockefeller interests, some here.

Some of the previous charts that have been offered in evidence show the various percentage participations of the investment banking houses that belong to the various groups lined up in this situation and how that financing followed the terms of the original banking agreement.

That is about where we are at the present moment.

Mr. HENDERSON. Do you have anything to say?

Mr. EMANUEL. I would like to correct that. In the first place, I met Captain Loewenstein in 1926, not 1928. In the second place, he already owned a large block of Standard Gas and large blocks of stock in a number of other American companies, four or five, as I recall. I made one proposal to him, I remember, about acquiring other companies and forming a company to do that. I believe I testified that he was not interested in that, and that whole thing fell when he died in 1928, although I might have talked to Fisher about it, who succeeded him early in 1928. Also, Captain Loewenstein died before the depression came on by well over a year.

There was only one legal move that I recall that we ever made, and that was a mandamus proceeding which I recall it was just to get information. We did make a demand on the directors, but I don't think that was legal, I mean in a court.

Mr. HENDERSON. Eventually what resulted then was your counsel and the other counsel got together and you got——

Mr. EMANUEL (interposing). And there was a settlement of all of our differences, which did not give me or Usepco control of Standard Gas; we didn't mention it, or we had no power of initiation; we merely had power to pass upon certain matters.

Mr. HENDERSON. How about the directors?

Mr. EMANUEL. We had a minority of the board of Standard Gas and they had the majority.

Mr. HENDERSON. How about the principal officers?

Mr. EMANUEL. The principal officers were all people who were officers of Standard Gas before; we had no officers.

Mr. HENDERSON. How about the management contract?

Mr. EMANUEL. That stayed in the Byllesby Engineering & Management Corporation, which was a wholly owned subsidiary of Standard Gas.

Mr. HENDERSON. How about the financing?

Mr. EMANUEL. Byllesby had 25 percent, which I think was based upon their historical interest in the business, and Usepco had the right to designate 75 percent.

Mr. HENDERSON. And what collateral was really posted with Chase?

Mr. EMANUEL. Everything we had was eventually put up.

Mr. HENDERSON. Mainly Standard Power?

Mr. EMANUEL. And that included the large block of Standard Gas and Electric stock owned by Standard Power.

Mr. HENDERSON. And it was recognized that even though that was pledged before the bank reduced its possession, the finance contract, 75-25, still continued.

Mr. EMANUEL. Yes, that still was in existence. I would like to say there that that was a memorandum, right at the time it was made: the counsel for Usepco, which was Seibert & Riggs, advised us, and it is on the minute books of the Usepco, that that agreement was of no legal force or effect.

Mr. HENDERSON. If you had an economist or financier and he looked back over the record, he would say it had a financial and economic effect, would he not?

Mr. EMANUEL. That is right, but what I am trying to point out, it wasn't an agreement enforceable in law, because it would have been binding future actions of boards, which we cannot do, and also most of the financing was in the subsidiary companies which financing had come up before the respective boards of these companies, and also for the most part be approved by the various Public Service commissions.

Mr. HENDERSON. But in this attempt to get the stock out from under water, it was pretty generally recognized that the old 75-25 would still obtain.

Mr. EMANUEL. I was trying to get this collateral back for the Usepco itself. During this entire period the company was in trouble, every plan was to get it back for the company until the Founders' group distributed their stock and Mr. Fisher died. When that happened, it became apparent that I couldn't do it for the company because the Founders group had a majority of its stock I think of Usepco by that time, and without their support, it seemed impossible, so the best thing I could do was to use every means at my command, which I admit I did, to try and sell my people——

Mr. HENDERSON (interposing). I am not sure that we got all of the testimony today.

Mr. EMANUEL. I did nothing else for years but try to do this, and I used every means at my command to try and save something for the stockholders, which finally resulted in the agreement of 1936, whereby we paid the banks $3,500,000 for the collateral, and then as soon as we could, because the stock wasn't registered, we offered it to the United States stockholders at the same price at which we paid without any commission whatsoever.

Mr. HENDERSON. Who finally bought it?

Mr. EMANUEL. I think, Mr. Henderson, that something over a third of the stockholders bought the stock. The offer expired on a certain day, but we just extended that thing by letting any stockholders who came in later buy their pro rata share. The stock then went up in the market and quite a few came in, and every time we felt they were bona fide stockholders who had bought their stock before this period came on, and not for as few cents a share as the worth of the security, we let them have the stock.

Mr. HENDERSON. The stock did get down to a few cents a share, did it not?

Mr. EMANUEL. The United States Electric stock after the collateral was reduced by possession was worthless, but it appeared it still was being sold by unscrupulous people for a few cents a share.

Mr. HENDERSON. There was a good gamble, however.

Mr. EMANUEL. There was no gamble then because the company had no assets.

Mr. HENDERSON. But it did have something which if you could——

Mr. EMANUEL (interposing). If you could send it in and get this other stock for it.

Mr. HENDERSON. Mr. Fuller, have you any comments?

Mr. FULLER. I don't think I have anything to add, unless there are some further questions.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Just a few more questions.

Senator KING. Do you assent, with the exception you made, to the résumé made by Mr. Nehemkis?

Mr. EMANUEL. Yes.

Senator KING. I regret I have been in the Finance and Judiciary Committees all morning and it was impossible for me to be here.

Mr. HENDERSON. I think we are ready to go on.

THE GROUP PURCHASING NOTES AND COLLATERAL—CONTINUING EFFECTIVENESS OF BANKING MEMORANDUM OF DECEMBER 1929

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Fuller, we were saying earlier in connection with your direct testimony that a new group had entered into the picture, the Bancamerica-Blair people. Do you recall that?

Mr. FULLER. Yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I show you a memorandum which was obtained from the files of Schroder Rockefeller and I ask you to tell me whether you recognize this to be a true and correct copy of an original in your possession.

Mr. FULLER. Yes; I identify it.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Can you tell me who Mr. E. G. Diefenbach is?

Mr. FULLER. At that time he was vice president of the Bancamerica-Blair Corporation.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. This is what Mr. E. G. Diefenbach had to say after his people had come into the picture [reading from "Exhibit No. 1965"]:

On May 20, 1936 J. Henry Schroder Banking Corporation, Bancamerica-Blair Corporation, W. C. Langley & Co., A. C. Allyn & Co., Inc., and Emanuel & Co. purchased from the Chase National Bank of the City of New York, Guaranty Trust Co. of New York and Chemical Bank and Trust Co., $12,500,000 Notes of the United States Electric Power Corporation, secured by—

And then he lists the various stock that had been pledged and which was now out of pledge.

He continues:

United States Electric Power Corporation had an agreement with H. M. Byllesby & Co. which gave them a first call on 75% of the financing of the Standard Gas & Electric System. H. M. Byllesby & Co. agreed to continue this financing arrangement with the new group which purchased the Notes of the United States Electric Power Corporation, secured by Standard Power & Light Common Stock, from the three New York banks. The purchasers of the Notes agreed that their interest in this finance contract should be on the same percentage basis as their interest in the purchase of United States Electric Power Notes.

I offer in evidence the document so identified by the witness.

(The memorandum referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1965" and is included in the appendix on p. 12894.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. So that after the shooting was over, the battle had subsided and the captains had retired, what was really at stake here in this struggle that had taken place over the years was the acquisition of 75 percent of the financing of the Standard Gas system. Is that correct, Mr. Emanuel?

Mr. EMANUEL. Not from my standpoint. I have no doubt that that was one of the considerations. Some of the other members of the group joined the so-called rescue party. It was never with me any primary consideration. It was one of the considerations, though, that undoubtedly helped me raise the money.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Fuller, will you be good enough to examine a copy of a cablegram from Schroderpriv under date of January 6, 1936, and tell me whether you recognize this to be a true and correct copy of the original in your possession?

Mr. FULLER. I identify it.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And Mr. Emanuel, will you glance at the photostat copy of what purports to be a cable from you to Robin Wilson in Paris under date of January 6, 1936, and tell me whether you recognize this to be a true and correct copy of an original that you are familiar with and that was sent by you?

Mr. EMANUEL. It was sent by me.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Fuller, there appears to be on the lower left hand margin of this cable from Schrodpriv certain pencil notations. Before I offer the document in evidence, will you be good enough to read to me what those pencil notations are?

Mr. FULLER. It says [reading from "Exhibit No. 1966"]:

Copy to Mr. Emanuel, also Mr. Dulles.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And Mr. Dulles is Mr. Allen Dulles, your counsel?

Mr. FULLER. Yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now, on January 6, 1936, Schrodpriv inquired of Schrobanco as follows [reading from "Exhibit No. 1966"]:

Please arrange with Victor Emanuel joint consultation with Sullivan & Cromwell and enquire whether they foresee any serious legal difficulties in our USEPCO programme.

You may recall, Mr. Emanuel, I used the word "program" this morning. I think I got it from this cable.

And one of the points they wanted Schrobanco to enquire about of Messrs Sullivan and Cromwell of eight points enumerated was the following, which is point 8 [reading further from "Exhibit No. 1966"]:

How binding a contract can be made assuring 75% future group financing to Emanuel and Hydro.

And then your cable, Mr. Emanuel, to Robin Wilson, care of Major Albert Pam, at the Hotel Meurice, Paris [reading from "Exhibit No. 1967-1"]:

Fuller communicated to me your cable sixth stop. Difficulty arises in that Sullivan and Cromwell counsel for First Boston and Langley who for reasons you understand do not want know about this now stop Fuller having confidential talk with Dulles first this morning and if they see their way clear act confidential basis we will have joint meeting this afternoon stop

I ask leave of the committee at this time to call Mr. Allen Dulles to the witness stand. Mr. Dulles, will you be good enough to take the witness stand, please?

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. Do you solemnly swear that the evidence you are about to give in the matter now pending will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. DULLES. I do.

TESTIMONY OF ALLEN WELCH DULLES, SULLIVAN & CROMWELL, NEW YORK

Mr. DULLES. Mr. Examiner, as I mentioned to you, I have acted, as these papers indicate, in the capacity of counsel. I want to be of help in any way I can to the committee. I don't know whether the question of professional privilege is going to arise or not.

So far as Mr. Fuller is concerned, I think he has been very glad to waive it. There may be other matters that come up on which Mr.

Fuller cannot waive the privilege, and I want to make that statement and I hope we can avoid the question arising.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Will you, so that we may proceed in an orderly fashion, state your full name and address?

Mr. DULLES. Allen Welch Dulles.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And are you not a partner in the firm of Sullivan & Cromwell?

Mr. DULLES. I am.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. How long have you been a partner in that firm, Mr. Dulles?

Mr. DULLES. About 10 years.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And, as the testimony has shown this afternoon, you have had fairly intimate knowledge of many of these transactions, have you not, sir?

Mr. DULLES. Well, I wouldn't say fairly intimate. I have had knowledge of certain phases of them; yes. I have been consulted now and again, but I wouldn't say I had intimate knowledge of the transactions.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And your firm represents, does it not, the J. Henry Schroder Corporation, of New York, which we have been referring to as Schrobanco?

Mr. DULLES. It does.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And does not your firm also represent other members of the American group, for example, The First Boston Corporation?

Mr. DULLES. Well, how do you include them as members of the American group? We have done considerable work for The First Boston Corporation; yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I mean when I say members of the American group, members of that group who were aligned with Mr. Victor Emanuel in the financing and in connection with the various events that have been testified to this morning and this afternoon. Incidentally, have you been in the room this morning and this afternoon?

Mr. DULLES. I have been in the room this morning; yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And you have heard the testimony?

Mr. DULLES. I have heard the testimony today; yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Does my explanation clarify to you what I meant by the American group?

Mr. DULLES. I don't recall The First Boston having been identified as a member of the American group. I know that they have done a certain amount of financing in the Standard group system, but I didn't know that they were a member of the so-called American group, if you mean the group that purchased the notes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Do you recall that Harris, Forbes & Co. and its allied interests were associated with this deal?

Mr. DULLES. Which deal, Mr. Examiner?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I am talking about the transaction that began in 1928 and was consummated in 1936, as we have been hearing testimony on it this afternoon and this morning.

Mr. DULLES. Well, I know nothing about that, except hearsay, insofar as any relationship they had in this picture.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Does your firm represent Langley & Co.?

Mr. DULLES. No, it does not.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I had occasion a moment ago—

Mr. DULLES (interposing). I think we have done some work occasionally for Langley, not in this connection.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I had occasion a moment ago to ask Mr. Fuller to identify a cable from the J. Henry Schroder Co. of London to Schrobano in New York, in which the following question was asked and the request made that legal advice be obtained from your firm [reading from "Exhibit No. 1966"]:

How binding a contract can be made assuring 75% future group financing to Emanuel and Hydro.

And I had occasion to ask Mr. Emanuel to identify a cable from him on January 6, the same date as this cable to which reference has just been made, to Mr. Robin Wilson. Mr. Emanuel cabled Mr. Wilson as follows [reading from "Exhibit No. 1967-1"]:

Fuller—

Mr. Carlton Fuller who sits at your side—communicated to me your cable sixth stop Difficulty arises in that Sullivan and Cromwell counsel for First Boston and Langley who for reasons you understand do not want know about this now stop Fuller having confidential talk with Dulles first this morning and if they see their way clear act confidential basis we will have joint meeting this afternoon.

It is with reference to these two documents that I am now asking my questions. You have indicated your answers and I don't want to retrace them with you. Can you clarify that cablegram and the references made therein?

Mr. DULLES. As I recall, we desired to talk with The First Boston Corporation, whom we had represented in connection with certain of the earlier financing, to see whether we were free to discuss the matter with Mr. Fuller or whether they were still interested. As I recall, the answer came from The First Boston Corporation that they were not at this time interested and that we were free. That is my recollection.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. To discuss it with Mr. Fuller?

Mr. DULLES. To discuss it with Mr. Fuller and Mr. Emanuel, yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. But you do recall, then, according to your present testimony, that The First Boston Corporation was interested in this whole larger transaction?

Mr. DULLES. We did not know whether they were interested or not. I don't think they were interested in the purchase of the notes, in the reduction of the collateral.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now, Mr. Emanuel, may I ask you at this time whether you can clarify the meaning of this statement which you wrote to Robin Wilson [reading from "Exhibit No. 1967-1"]:

Difficulty arises in that Sullivan and Cromwell counsel for First Boston and Langley who for reasons you understand do not want know about this now.

Do you recall what you meant?

Mr. EMANUEL. I don't recall what I referred to. I would like to say this about that cable, that Emanuel is used as a name, I am sure Schroder Co. didn't mean me personally.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. It is a code name?

Mr. EMANUEL. I mean—I think I have to explain something about it—that Emanuel & Co. was always a small house and never came into this financing until 1935, 5 or 6 years after this company was formed. Emanuel I think they use broadly to mean the American group which was composed of a number of houses other than Emanuel & Co., who had just a small interest when they did have any interest in this financing.

I think I remember the last part of the cablegram.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. What did you mean by "Fuller having confidential talk with Dulles"?

Mr. EMANUEL. I meant prices.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The stock market prices at the time?

Mr. EMANUEL. What I was afraid of was that if the indicated market value of Standard Gas securities went up I wouldn't raise enough money.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Fuller, do you remember having a talk with Mr. Dulles about the situation referred to in the cable?

Mr. FULLER. Yes.

Mr. HENDERSON. Mr. Emanuel, you don't know what this cable means when it says [referring to "Exhibit No. 1967-1"] "for reasons you understand"?

Mr. EMANUEL. I can't recall, Mr. Henderson, what was meant.

Senator KING. You drafted the telegram, did you?

Mr. EMANUEL. I think I did; yes.

Senator KING. Was anybody else conferring with you simultaneously?

Mr. EMANUEL. I think almost everybody concerned was. It might have meant difficulties of reoffering this Standard stock to the United States Electric shareholders without a registration statement. I know that was one of the things that were troublesome at that time.

ENFORCEABILITY OF THE 75-25 PERCENT AGREEMENT FOR FUTURE FINANCING

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Dulles, was not one of the pressing questions which the London firm wanted your firm's opinion on, whether the 75 percent agreement was binding legally and enforceable at law?

Mr. DULLES. That was one of the questions that was in that telegram that you have introduced in evidence, which was presented to us at this conference Mr. Fuller has mentioned.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Did your firm render an opinion on that question?

Mr. DULLES. I don't believe we rendered any opinion. My best recollection is that we discussed it with Mr. Fuller and Mr. Fuller drew up his cable on the basis of that discussion.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Is it not a fact, Mr. Dulles, that your firm, and perhaps you in particular, felt it inadvisable at that time to render written opinion, but preferred to make your opinion oral?

Mr. DULLES. I think lawyers always, when they can render oral opinion, prefer it to rendering written opinions.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Although when we render written opinions, since I, too, am a lawyer, I know we sometimes get paid more. But the fact remains you rendered an oral opinion at the time.

Mr. DULLES. That is my recollection; yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Did you not have some particular reason why you felt under the circumstances you preferred to render an oral opinion rather than a written opinion?

Mr. DULLES. I don't recall it; no.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I offer these cablegrams in evidence.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. They may be received.

(The cablegrams referred to were marked "Exhibits Nos. 1966 and 1967-1," and are included in the appendix on p. 12895.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Pursuant to the advice you obtained from Mr. Dulles, Mr. Fuller, did you not advise Schroedpriv?

Mr. FULLER. I believe I did.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I show you a telegram from Schrobanco to Major Pam at Paris, under date of January 7, 1936. Will you be good enough to glance at this cable and tell me whether you recognize it as a true and correct copy of an original? And by the way, will you tell me who Major Pam is?

Mr. FULLER. Major Pam is associated with J. Henry Schroder & Co. in London, with power to sign the firm's signature. I identify it.

(The cablegram referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1967-2" and is included in the appendix on p. 12896.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. May I have the document? I think I requested that Mr. Fuller identify it. The cablegram reads as follows:

Sullivan and Cromwell have following comments your particular inquiries.

And then you itemize them from 1 through 8, and under 8 you reported as follows:

They consider contractual control of financing unfeasible and undesirable but agree with Emanuel that real source of control would be Hydro's holdings and the majority on the directorate plus an agreement and good relations with Byllesby.

Mr. Dulles, is that substantially in conformity with your understanding at this time of what transpired in the nature of the advice rendered Mr. Fuller?

Mr. DULLES. I don't remember, but I have no doubt if Mr. Fuller put that in a cablegram at the time that represented his understanding of the advice I gave him.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Can you enlighten us at this time as to what you had in mind when you referred to an agreement?

Perhaps I had better show you the particular paragraph. You will find it enumerated under 8 on page 2 of the document I now show you.

Mr. DULLES. As far as I can read back my thoughts at the present time, presumably that was not any written agreement because I apparently advised that a written agreement or anything that purported to be in a contractual form was both unfeasible and undesirable.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. May I interrupt at the moment and ask, since we have been spending a great deal of time on these so-called agreements, treaties, contracts, that investment bankers enter into, why you, a lawyer of many years' standing, felt that such an agreement was undesirable—I think that is the word in the cable.

Mr. DULLES. Well, I think anything that purports to be a contract but is not really a contract, something that is entirely unenforceable, something that relates to the disposition of something you do not control, has no real value as an agreement, and therefore, as a lawyer, I would oppose my clients—I believe—entering into that type of so-called contractual agreement which really was no contract at all.

Mr. HENDERSON. May I ask a question there? Is your firm counsel for Goldman, Sachs?

Mr. DULLES. They are.

Mr. HENDERSON. Is it counsel for Lehman Bros.?

Mr. DULLES. They are, in certain matters.

Mr. HENDERSON. Are you aware that they reduced their under-standings on the matter to a treaty?

Mr. DULLES. I have seen it in the paper recently. I knew nothing about it at the time.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. You didn't yourself pass on it?

Mr. DULLES. No.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And if you had passed on it you probably would have said about the same thing said here, "not feasible"?

Mr. DULLES. Well, certainly if I were looking at it from the point of view of today I would; whether I would have been wiser in those days or not I can't say.

Acting Chairman KING. Your idea was that it would be unfeasible to have a written contract as to property that you didn't control?

Mr. DULLES. That would be one of my reasons, Senator.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Or property that was not owned, Mr. Dulles?

Mr. DULLES. Property not owned?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Yes.

Mr. DULLES. Property you could not dispose of; yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Either through control or ownership?

Mr. DULLES. Yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Do you recall, Mr. Dulles, that in connection with the agreement that Mr. Commissioner Henderson referred to, operating between Lehman Bros. and Goldman, Sachs, that the form of that agreement was passed on by your firm?

Mr. DULLES. I didn't recall that.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Such is the testimony before this committee. A deceased partner of your firm——

Acting Chairman KING (interposing). Are we going into the Goldman, Sachs in this?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. No, sir; but we are discussing now the problem of the legal validity of the agreements, contracts, and treaties entered into by investment banking firms, and the testimony, in my opinion, of the witness to whom the questions are now being put is directly relevant to that subject.

Acting Chairman KING. They may be relevant on that, but not relevant—I am trying to ascertain whether or not you are offering that testimony as a part of the investigation of this corporation Mr. Emanuel is connected with.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The question has arisen, sir, that Mr. Dulles had advised his client Schrobanco——

Acting Chairman KING (interposing). I know what he stated there. Is that what you mean?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I wanted to know how it happened this firm passed on the form of another contract, when Mr. Dulles has just testified that he doesn't think these contracts are either feasible or desirable. I think that is a highly relevant question, I submit.

Acting Chairman KING. Perhaps it is; I have no objection.

Mr. DULLES. I am perfectly willing to say, Senator, that partners in law firms often differ, and maybe I am profiting here by hindsight. That is the way I view it today.

Acting Chairman KING. I understood you to testify that you knew nothing about that contract to which counsel referred in the Sachs, Goldman matter.

Mr. DULLES. Knew nothing whatever about it.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Nehemkis, may I ask Mr. Dulles a question? I am not clear in referring to this agreement, the opinion requested by Mr. Fuller, who was that agreement to be between? Who were to be the parties to the agreement that he contemplated?

Mr. DULLES. I assume that the parties to that agreement would have been someone representing Hydro-Electric Securities Corporation, or acting for them, and other possible American underwriters of the subsidiaries of the Standard Electric Co., Standard Gas.

Mr. MILLER. Well, would the agreement with the Hydro-Electric Securities company be with them, because they were owners of stock of Standard Power?

Mr. DULLES. That was the theory in those days; yes.

Mr. MILLER. In other words, it was an agreement with the chief stockholder?

Mr. DULLES. Agreement with a substantial stockholder; not the chief.

Mr. MILLER. Not just an agreement between banking houses?

Mr. DULLES. Well, it might be an agreement between the banking-house, let us say, which Hydro might designate as its bankers. That, I think, is a possibility.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Miller, may I interpose? I have passed to you a copy of the agreement. It is that agreement concerning the legal validity of which that the question was asked of Messrs. Sullivan and Cromwell, Mr. Dulles.

Mr. DULLES. Mr. Examiner, may I say here that I am speaking as an individual when I give you my personal opinion of what I think of an agreement or its feasibility or unfeasibility. It is quite possible that some of my partners would differ from the views I express here, and I don't purport to bind them or express their views.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. That is generally characteristic of the legal profession.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Nehemkis, this agreement here is of December 21, 1929.¹ I thought this was a new agreement that was contemplated that Mr. Fuller talked to Mr. Dulles about, not this agreement.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. What is your testimony on that?

Mr. FULLER. I was considering the possibility of a new agreement at the time of the 1936 deal.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. But the original agreement that Schrodpriv wanted to know whether or not it was enforceable, and which they requested you to ascertain advice of counsel, was this agreement?

Mr. FULLER. Whether that or any similar one could be.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. That was not the question in the cable.

Mr. FULLER. I have forgotten the cable, then.

Mr. O'CONNELL. Will you read the cable provision? I am not clear between whom this agreement would be.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The cable is in the record; Witness Briggs testified this morning with reference to committee "Exhibit No. 1931," that the contract dated December 21, 1929, was entered into on that date and was executed by H. M. Byllesby & Co. by J. H. Briggs, United States Electric Power Corporation, which we have been referring to here as Usepco, and signed by Victor Emanuel, and Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. by Walter Rosen, a general partner.

Now it was this contract that we have been referring to as giving the 75-25 rights. Now, the London people had put a considerable amount of money into this thing; they wanted to know whether they were buying a piece of paper or something that was legally enforceable, and so they cabled to their American house, Schrobano, and said, "Get in touch with our counsel and find out whether this is just a piece of paper, or whether we are buying something that has a legal and binding contractual effect," and, as I understand the evidence, counsel advised Schrobano—by counsel I refer to Messrs. Sullivan and Cromwell—that they didn't think it was legally binding, but that it had a certain moral effect, and as the evidence will show in a few moments, we will come into the actual interpretation that was placed upon it by Sullivan and Cromwell. At least, such is my understanding of the evidence, Mr. O'Connell.

Mr. O'CONNELL. Is that your general understanding of the question put to you in 1936?

Mr. DULLES. Not quite. It was my understanding as to whether any agreement of this kind could be concluded which would be binding as to the future.

Mr. O'CONNELL. An agreement between underwriters?

Mr. DULLES. Between underwriters to control a certain percentage of financing.

Mr. O'CONNELL. And when you advised your client that in your judgment such an agreement was not feasible, or what was the other word used?

Mr. DULLES. Desirable.

Mr. O'CONNELL. Desirable; you had in mind it was in the nature of a legal opinion that such a contract would be unenforceable?

Mr. DULLES. Quite.

Mr. O'CONNELL. You didn't think such an agreement would have any legal effect?

Mr. DULLES. Quite.

Mr. EMANUEL. I think I could facilitate this by saying that as I recall the agreement of December 21, 1929 (referring to "Exhibit No. 1931"), was by its terms not transferable, so if any agreement was being discussed it was probably a new agreement.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Fuller; I beg pardon, Mr. Dulles, is Mr. Crispell an associate of yours?

Mr. DULLES. Partner.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Partner of Sullivan & Cromwell. On or about March 10, Mr. Fuller, did you have occasion to consult Mr. Crispell in regard to the contract here in question and other agreements?

Mr. FULLER. Sometime in that period; yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I show you a memorandum dated March 10, 1936, addressed to Messrs. Beal and Simpson, your associates, from yourself, and ask you to tell me whether that is a true and correct copy of such memorandum in your possession. Will you examine this and tell me whether you recognize that as a memorandum which you drafted or dictated, as the case may be?

Mr. FULLER. Yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now, following your discussion with Mr. Crispell, Mr. Dulles' partner, you wrote to your associates, Messrs. Beal and Simpson, as follows [reading from "Exhibit No. 1968"]:

Mr. Crispell was very cautious and reserved because he has commitments to so many interests in this situation, and he would not discuss the terms of the agreements at all without clearing with all his principals, who include others besides Victor Emanuel. I told him if it became necessary to get an official opinion from Sullivan & Cromwell, we might later approach him to get a clearance, but for the time being our telephone conversation would suffice.

He says that the two gentlemen's agreements—

Now, can you tell me to which two gentlemen's agreements reference is made here?

Mr. FULLER. I assume the one you have been referring to.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. December 21, 1929, being committee "Exhibit No. 1931"?

Mr. FULLER. Yes. I don't know what the other one was unless there was some parallel document at the time.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Neither do I, and that is why I was somewhat puzzled as to what the reference to the two agreements is. Shall we assume—

Mr. FULLER (interposing). You must remember at this time I had never seen these agreements, and I may have been mistaken in interpreting his conversation as to there being two, and they might have been all in one.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Am I correct in assuming this is it? (Holding up "Exhibit No. 1931.")

Mr. FULLER. Yes.

Acting Chairman KING. Had you seen the agreement at that time?

Mr. FULLER. I don't think so; we had not seen it.

Acting Chairman KING. Do you know its contents?

Mr. FULLER. I knew there was such an agreement, and I knew what it was about. I may have seen it; about this time the new deal came along.

Senator KING. Have you any recollection whether you had seen it at that time you made the memorandum to which counsel has referred?

Mr. FULLER. I don't offhand; I don't think I had.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I repeat the early part of that sentence that [reading from "Exhibit No. 1968"]:

the two gentlemen's agreements are not legally binding, as we already understand, but that they have worked perfectly and will continue to do so as long as they are between people who have confidence in each other and who wish to play ball. In general such agreements have been difficult to enforce.

May I pause for a moment and ask you, Mr. Dulles, are you familiar with many such agreements that are operative or that have been entered into between investment banking firms?

Mr. DULLES. Not recently; no. I knew of certain in the days 1928, 1929, and 1930; I don't know that I could recall many by name.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Were you in the room by chance this morning when I offered in evidence some 30 agreements¹ which have been entered into by investment banking firms with issuers at various times, some of which are still operative? In fact, I think the bulk are still operative, the rest of which have lapsed.

Mr. DULLES. I was in the room; I didn't know what the agreements were, but I heard the testimony.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. In your experience do you know of a single situation where there has ever been any litigation concerning such agreements?

Mr. DULLES. I don't recall any; no.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I know members of my staff have been very much interested in that. We have been searching the reports to see if we could find a single instance where such an agreement had ever been brought to the courts for enforcement, and we can't find any such thing.

I now continue reading from your memorandum, Mr. Fuller.

Senator KING. You mean for enforcement or for breach.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Or for breach. [Reading further from "Exhibit No. 1968":]

In general such agreements have been difficult to enforce, although he can conceive of such agreements being made and being enforced if based upon a definite long-term program of specific financing.

So that in this particular instance your partner, Mr. Crispell, did appear to indicate there was some possibility of such agreements being enforceable and having legal effect provided there was a long-term range in the financing.

However——

he continues——

since the latter would involve the question of price which obviously cannot be set long in advance, as a practical matter it is difficult to see how such a contract could actually be drawn up in practice.

The charter and by-law provisions of Standard Power and Standard Gas are presumably legal documents, which would stand regardless of the position of U. S. Electric, but some outside lawyers have questioned even that situation.

I offer in evidence, Mr. Chairman, the memorandum identified by Witness Fuller from which I have been reading.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. It will be received.

(The memorandum referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1968" and is included in the appendix on p. 12896.)

NATURE OF AND PARTIES TO THE BANKING MEMORANDUM

Mr. O'CONNELL. I am not at all clear at all times we have been talking about the same type of contract. This most recent one, is it a contract between underwriters distributing future business of an issuer, or a contract between underwriters on one hand and issuer on the other?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. It is, sir, the former, a contract entered into—it is not altogether that, it is a contract between investment bankers and a utility company, the largest stockholder of the system. The company that we have been referring to here as Usepco. It combines elements of both.

Mr. O'CONNELL. Combines elements of both; it is not strictly speaking a contract between underwriters or between underwriters and issuing corporations?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. That is my understanding.

Mr. O'CONNELL. Is that your understanding, Mr. Dulles? You seem a little perturbed.

Mr. DULLES. In this particular picture we are discussing, as I understand it, Usepco had dropped out at this time because when the notes were foreclosed, Usepco had no further assets and was a shell, and so any agreement with Usepco seems to me would be so far as Usepco was concerned, certainly a nullity and probably as regards all the parties.

Mr. O'CONNELL. It was a nullity before, as I understood you.

Mr. DULLES. Probably not a nullity, but unenforceable.

Mr. O'CONNELL. It remained unenforceable after Usepco lost the stock?

Mr. DULLES. What I understood was being presented to me here at this time, as to the best of my recollection after four years, was the question of a validity of an agreement between underwriters.

Mr. MILLER. In your opinion, was Usepco ever an issuer?

Mr. DULLES. No.

Mr. MILLER. Was it a utility company?

Mr. DULLES. How do you mean, issuer? It issued its own security; it didn't issue other people's securities.

Mr. MILLER. I mean an issuer in the sense that it was used by Mr. Nehemkis in referring to these contracts that were presented this morning, financing contracts with issuers, borrowers.

Mr. DULLES. I didn't catch that last.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Nehemkis presented a group of agreements between banking houses and issuers, companies who did financing, and these bankers did the financing for them. Do you classify Usepco in that category?

Mr. DULLES. Not entirely. I may say that I am not at all familiar with these agreements involving Usepco, and when I gave my opinion here as to the invalidity and unenforceability of agreements, I was directing myself solely to agreements as among other underwriters to control some underwriting business.

Mr. FULLER. Perhaps I can clarify Mr. Miller's understanding by pointing out that Usepco never issued to the public any of its own securities that were underwritten. Does that help?

Mr. MILLER. Yes.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. Was it ever an underwriting company?

Mr. FULLER. In those days, or under the present definition of underwriter?

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. At any time.

Mr. FULLER. In those days it was never considered an underwriter; no.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. I have had the impression here during all this time that here was an issuer on the one hand and the investment bankers or the underwriters on the other hand who signed this contract. That is the impression I have had from this testimony that has gone on here all the time about this agreement.

Mr. HENDERSON. As to the old agreement,¹ maybe counsel can tell us what flowed out of the agreement between Usepco and Byllesby. There was a 75-25 division. Who got the financing that flowed out of that?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I introduced a table this noon which set that forth; and if one of my assistants will give it to me, I can give you your answers very precisely, sir.

Mr. HENDERSON. You remember it, do you not?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Generally speaking, the investment banking houses which benefited from the agreement entered into as of December 21, 1929, being committee "Exhibit No. 1931," with those banking houses that had associated themselves with the Emanuel interests.

Mr. HENDERSON. And had formed Usepco.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And through various exchanges, and so on, had been instrumental in forming Usepco. For example, Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. had a very potent interest in the earlier historical underwriting syndicates and you will recall the testimony shows that Ladenburg, Thalmann had to be bought out and cash was paid to them, and it was as a result of that heavy payment in cash that the Emanuel group ultimately got into difficulties because they had to pledge the collateral with the banks in order to get the cash to pay Ladenburg, Thalmann.

Mr. MILLER. You said Usepco was an issuer. It was the principal stockholder.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. My question was, who are these parties that signed this original agreement, whether they are investment houses, underwriters, or whether there is one of them an issuer and the other two are underwriters.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I would say, sir, that the answer to your question is as follows: If I correctly understand the testimony—

Senator KING. Pardon me, I hope Mr. Fuller listens so we can get his views.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. H. M. Byllesby & Co. at the time it entered into this contract would be considered an investment banking house. Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. at the time it entered into the contract would be considered an investment banking house. United States Electric Power Corporation, referred to throughout the testimony as Usepco, was a holding company that held the stock of underlying corporations, and was a signatory to the agreement. Now, it is true, Mr. Miller, that Usepco was not an issuer. The issuers were the underlying corporations, but as Mr. Miller well knows, the underlying corporations couldn't issue without the consent and approval of Usepco.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. It certainly was not an underwriter.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. No, sir; by no conceivable stretch of the imagination.

Senator KING. Is that your view, Mr. Fuller?

Mr. FULLER. From the time I have known much about this agreement I have always in my own mind, not being a party to it, you understand, considered it as an agreement amongst bankers and for convenience I thought that certain of the underwriting bankers interests were concentrated in Usepco, and I think you will cut through all of this by going down to the division under the Usepco percentage mentioned. In essence it was a banking underwriting arrangement rather than an issuer-banking contract, in my opinion.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Undereath Usepco you had Hydro.

Mr. FULLER. We had a whole group. As a matter of fact, I don't think Hydro participated in that financing at that time.

Mr. O'CONNELL. May I ask a question of Mr. Dulles? This is a question you may not be in position to answer, but I am curious to know whether in your experience you have ever had any occasion to pass on the enforceability of a contract for future financing over an indefinite period of time and without a very definite term between investment bankers and issuing concern.

Mr. DULLES. I recall one—I would rather not mention the name—where a banking house had an option on the financing of the particular issuer over a certain period of time. There were several issues by the banking house pursuant to that contract, and then the company desired to cancel it and it was canceled, as I recall, for a relatively small consideration. That is the only instance that I recall.

Mr. O'CONNELL. I was more interested in the general legal propriety of an issuing concern contracting for general future financing with a group of underwriters.

Mr. DULLES. It was done a good deal and there is a good deal to be said, I think, pro and con.

Mr. O'CONNELL. You mean speaking of the legality.

Mr. DULLES. As far as the legality is concerned, I think it would be very difficult to enforce such a contract because it isn't precise enough. There is no agreement as to the terms of the future financing, and if the particular banking house that has the contract with the issuer is not prepared to do the financing, and some other house is, it seems to me almost inconceivable that that banking house could enforce the contract and prevent the issuer from financing under those conditions.

Mr. O'CONNELL. If the terms were reasonably precise and a formula were set up for determining the price of the securities to be issued by the issuing house and the contract were entered into with the approval of a given board of directors for an indefinite period of time or for a given number of years, and assuming that the issuing house wished to change its banking connection and that the former banking connection wished to assert its right under such an agreement, do you have any opinion as to whether such an agreement would be enforceable?

Mr. DULLES. I could conceive that an agreement could be made for a first refusal which might be enforceable. That assumes, of course, that the banking house that the issuer approached, was ready and willing to do the financing on the same basis as anyone else would.

(Senator KING assumed the Chair.)

Mr. O'CONNELL. I heard something said some time, I think, during the hearing about whether or not a given board of directors could bind a corporation that they represent over such a period of time.

Mr. DULLES. On that point I think it is extremely doubtful as to whether one board of directors could bind the judgment of another board of directors for any long period of time. Of course, if all you have is a first refusal, you haven't bound the company to anything very serious.

Mr. O'CONNELL. It is exactly the same situation as the one, I assume, in which the issuing house want to change their house, that the investment house want certain rights to its securities, because that is the same as the right to first refusal. It is exactly the situation that I assume because I am assuming the former investment house want to keep the connection so the refusal would be in effect exactly the same as the right to enforce the agreement.

I see no distinction between those two, do you?

Mr. DULLES. Except that the one contract might be bad for indefiniteness, whereas the first refusal contract might not be bad on that ground. It might well be as being an improper delegation of authority by assumption of authority by one board of directors.

Mr. O'CONNELL. That is the point I had in mind, that one you just mentioned.

"MORAL FORCE" OF THE BANKING MEMORANDUM

Mr. NEHEMKIS. About the time that we are discussing, Mr. Fuller, you had occasion to write a memorandum in which you set forth your understanding of these various agreements and the agreement in particular. I ask you to identify this memorandum for me, if you will.

Mr. FULLER. That seems to be from our files.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. You stated this, Mr. Fuller, as your understanding of these arrangements [reading from "Exhibit No. 1969"]:

Upon the formation of U. S. Electric Power Corporation, three agreements were entered into between H. M. Byllesby & Co. and Usepco, copies of which were in Mr. Fisher's possession. Only one of these is considered a legally enforceable, signed contract, under which Byllesby gives Usepco an option on its holdings of Standard Power & Light stock in case Byllesby wishes to sell. It includes a provision that if Usepco declines at the price offered, and Byllesby sells elsewhere, then Byllesby will execute an irrevocable proxy for the shares to Usepco.

The other two documents are merely gentlemen's agreements with no binding force in law, which was understood at the time of their negotiation. The one called the "Dividend Agreement" is signed by the parties and obligates them to confer on dividend policy, awards 50% of the system's bank deposits and all fiscal agency functions to Usepco's nominees, covers publicity, public relations, etc.

The other, called the "Financial Agreement," is merely initialed.

But you were in error about that as you have already testified because you had not seen the agreement, which was not initialed but which contains the signatures. [Reading further from "Exhibit No. 1969":]

It is this agreement which divides the financing 75% to Usepco and 25% to Byllesby, with certain other provisions.

And it is over that division of financing that the struggle that we have been describing this afternoon concerned itself, is that not correct?

Mr. FULLER. Yes; as I understand the question.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. [Reading further from "Exhibit No. 1969":]

While arrangements as to Standard Gas financing are thus not on a legally enforceable basis, they have worked without difficulty since 1929—

You were referring to these arrangements covered here? [Holding up "Exhibit No. 1931."]

[Mr. Fuller nodded in agreement.]

Mr. NEHEMKIS (continuing):

and are similar to many other such arrangements, all of which operate as long as the parties thereto are reliable.

I take it that at the time you wrote this, you were of your own knowledge familiar with other such arrangements, were you not?

Mr. FULLER. I am trying to recall any specific examples. I assume I was because it was fairly common knowledge.

Mr. HENDERSON. Were you relying on Mr. Crispell's advice?

Mr. FULLER. Not necessarily so. I think out of my own experience I had heard of such agreements, and I had certainly heard of them in foreign banking and other fields. Offhand I couldn't cite many examples.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Of your personal experience, do you know of any instance where an agreement such as we have had occasion to discuss, which is not legally enforceable, but which has evidently moral effect, has ever been breached and where suit has been brought to enforce the terms of the agreement?

Mr. FULLER. I can't recall where suit has been brought to enforce the terms, but I recall an indirect breach of such contract in a foreign financial field where a certain house had a time agreement on the financing and the foreign state breached that by setting up its financing in such a way that technically it didn't come under the agreement, although it should have. There was no suit about it because you can't very well sue a foreign entity on such grounds.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. But you know of no instance where an agreement of this nature has been breached here in America?

Mr. FULLER. With the following suit?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Yes.

Mr. FULLER. I don't recall offhand. Of course, I might explain from the banker's point of view I think I personally, and certainly a good many of my friends, feel these agreements are a good "foot in the door," a chance to negotiation. We never considered that it really gave us a firm hold on the business.

Mr. HENDERSON. Mr. Emanuel, at the time the loan was under water how did the bank regard this gentlemen's agreement?

Mr. EMANUEL. I don't recall that they particularly had any regard for it.

Mr. HENDERSON. Didn't they ask that while the loan was under water, any consideration of financing should be taken up with them and did not Usepco write a long letter to them explaining their understanding as to this?

Mr. EMANUEL. I can't presently recall, Mr. Henderson. It is quite possible, though. It is so long ago I can't recall.

Mr. HENDERSON. I can assure you that is the case, and if it gets important, I will introduce the document.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Henderson, my associate calls——

Mr. EMANUEL (interposing). I don't say it isn't true.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. My associate calls my attention to a document which I had intended to offer a little later, but which bears on your point. This is the understanding of Smith, Barney & Co., concerning this whole arrangement, and they write as follows concerning the matter you have asked the witness:¹

General arrangements pursuant to which investment bankers are selected for companies comprising the Standard Gas & Electric Company System:

As of March 2, 1933, U. S. Electric Power Corporation had demand bank loans totalling $12,500,000 (of which Chase National held 50% or $6,250,000— and so on, they outline the bank holdings.

These $12,500,000 U. S. Electric Power Corporation secured demand notes (dated March 1, 1933), were given to the three banks pursuant to a written agreement between U. S. Electric Power Corporation and the banks dated and executed on March 1, 1933, and all but a small part of them are still outstanding and unpaid.

Note the following paragraph, if you will, sir.

Among other things, that March 1 agreement contained a provision that U. S. Electric Power Corporation would furnish the banks with a certified list of all contracts to which they were then a party (except those covering ordinary current operations) and agree (so long as any of the $12,500,000 demand notes remained unpaid) not to change any such contracts without the consent of the banks. The March 1, 1933 agreement also provided that U. S. Electric Power Corporation (recognizing that those contracts were assets which should be available to creditors) agreed in so far as possible to give the three banks the benefit of such contracts and pay over to them any consideration received by U. S. Electric Power Corporation therefrom.

And the following very important provision:

One contract covered by the foregoing provision is a Memorandum dated December 21, 1929—

This is the agreement we have been talking about—¹

signed by H. M. Byllesby & Co., U. S. Electric Power Corporation and Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co., which sets forth the manner in which the investment bankers to handle securities issues of the Standard Gas and Electric Company system are to be selected. Subject to certain exceptions (including particularly the financing of the Philadelphia Company and subsidiaries) the general arrangement contemplates that financing shall be undertaken as to interest and liability, at original cost, as follows:

U. S. Electric Power Corporation, 75%.

H. M. Byllesby & Company, 25%—

And that is the old 75-25 thing that I have been speaking about all afternoon and morning.

And then they continue as follows:

In connection with the March 1, 1933 bank loan negotiations, Mr. Lewis H. Seagrave, Chairman of the Board of U. S. Electric Power Corporation, verbally confirmed to R. L. Garner, Vice-President and Treasurer of the Guaranty Trust Company, that U. S. Electric Power Corporation would consult the banks (which are parties to the March 1, 1933 bank loan agreement) in connection with subsequent financing of the Standard Gas and Electric Company system.

In connection with specific financing for any part of the Standard Gas and Electric Company system, reference should be made to the December 21, 1929 Memorandum signed by H. M. Byllesby & Company, U. S. Electric Power Corporation, and Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co., but the more important provisions of that Memorandum are summarized in the general outline set forth on the following page hereof.

Mr. EMANUEL. I think that is true, Mr. Henderson.

Mr. HENDERSON. I seemed to remember it as such.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I offer in evidence the document which Mr. Fuller was good enough to identify a moment ago.

Acting Chairman KING. It may be received.

(The memorandum referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1969" and is included in the appendix on p. 12897.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And will you be good enough to identify the following document for me, Mr. Fuller, which purports to come from your files?

Mr. FULLER. I identify it.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. This is a letter from Mr. Simpson to Mr. Frank Common, who was associated with Hydro-Electric. Is that correct, sir?

Mr. FULLER. Yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I want to read Mr. Simpson's understanding of this matter which was discussed at the time and which bears the same date as the previous discussions. Mr. Simpson wrote as follows [reading from "Exhibit No. 1970"]:

The legality of the contractual arrangements with Byllesby.

We have gone into this question carefully, both with Sullivan & Cromwell and Victor Emanuel, and Carl Fuller has prepared a memorandum as of today's date which sets forth the position. It confirms your view that the financial agreement is not legally binding. On the other hand Victor Emanuel feels strongly that the agreement has moral force, has in the past been adhered to, and is playing a role in the present negotiations. By this last I mean that he states that all parties concerned, including Byllesby, Harrison Williams and the banks, recognize the force of the Byllesby-Usepco financial agreement.

And that confirmation incidentally is what Smith, Barney recognized.

He contends that everybody feels Usepco's position in this respect is strong enough so that account must be taken of it, and that Byllesby have taken this attitude with all parties concerned.

Mr. Fuller, you will recall that it was on the basis of that interpretation of this agreement that Hydro put its money into this venture.

Acting Chairman KING. Is that right?

Mr. FULLER. Not entirely true. Of course there is a long period of cable correspondence, visits back and forth, and any number of other considerations involved. That was one consideration amongst many.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And it was because of that important consideration that Schrodpriv cabled to Schrobanco's attention requesting it to obtain legal opinion?

Mr. FULLER. That is quite right.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. In order to find out whether it was legally enforceable.

Mr. FULLER. That is quite right. They were very careful.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I offer this in evidence.

Acting Chairman KING. It may be received.

(The letter referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1970" and is included in the appendix on p. 12897.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. My associate, Mr. Chairman, advises me that inadvertently a document which had been identified by the witness was not offered. I ask that it be admitted at this time and I will advise the reporter of the exact place it should appear.

Acting Chairman KING. No objection.

(The document referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1971" and is included in the appendix on p. 12899.)

Acting Chairman KING. Have you anything you gentlemen would like to say? The witnesses are excused and we will recess until 10:30 tomorrow morning.

(Whereupon at 5:20 p. m. the committee recessed until 10:30 o'clock Friday morning.)

INVESTIGATION OF CONCENTRATION OF ECONOMIC POWER

FRIDAY, JANUARY 12, 1940

UNITED STATES SENATE,
TEMPORARY NATIONAL ECONOMIC COMMITTEE,
Washington, D. C.

The committee met at 10:40 a. m., pursuant to adjournment on Thursday, January 11, 1940, in the Caucus Room, Senate Office Building, Representative Clyde Williams presiding.

Present: Representative Williams (acting chairman), Messrs. Henderson, O'Connell, Lubin, and Brackett.

Present also: Clifton M. Miller, Department of Commerce; Thomas C. Blaisdell, Jr., National Resources Board; Peter R. Nehemkis, Jr., special counsel; David Ryshpan, financial analyst; Oscar Altman, associate financial economist; Howard V. McEldowney, accountant investigator, Securities and Exchange Commission.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. The committee will be in order.

Mr. HENDERSON. Mr. Chairman, in line with our previous practice of trying to give a bare outline of the day's presentation, I have this to say: Today, as the Investment Banking Section of S. E. C. relies again on the case method of presentation. Today we are concerned with certain investment-banking practices as exemplified by the financing of Shell Union Oil Corporation.

The committee will recall that there was placed in the record a table¹ indicating the experience of Morgan Stanley with about 70 issues, and if my memory serves me correctly, on all the issues which Morgan Stanley managed, they had the proud record of not a single loss. In this particular case, I believe Morgan Stanley was a participant in the underwriting for Shell Union, and I believe the record will show that some of the participants, some underwriters, distributors, did suffer some disadvantages, due, I think the publicity stated, to the overpricing of the issue—I believe that is the term.

We are concerned today with the presentation of the type of negotiation that went on between the issuer and those who handled the issue in the investment-banking field, and it will be necessary to go back into some of the previous issues which were brought out by American investment-banking firms. We are hoping that the testimony today will indicate not only the nature of the negotiations between the issuer and the investment-banking house, but the nature of the understandings and the practices and the type of contractual provisions that exist between the underwriter and those participating with him in the diffusion of the risk attendant upon bringing out an issue.

The other day Mr. Nehemkis put into the record ¹ some data indicating how the day loan operates. I think it was apparent to the committee that in many cases, practically every case, and as the later information concerning the financial resources of underwriting houses will show the issues are far larger, of course, than the total capital of the principal underwriter and in some cases exceed the total resources of all the underwriters concerned.

I think we ought to note again that the Investment Banking Section selected this particular case many months ago for presentation, that no one of the questions which will be addressed to witnesses was formulated by anybody connected with the S. E. C., and I particularly want the record to show that I did not suggest any part of the questions.

I say this, Mr. Chairman, because I have to note again that the S. E. C. has before it in a quasi-judicial capacity a pending issue in which Morgan, Stanley is interested. Therefore, again I will be inhibited from asking some questions about which I believe logically I would be prepared to interrogate the witness.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. You may proceed, Mr. Nehemkis.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Will Mr. S. W. Duhig be good enough to take the witness stand, please?

Mr. HENDERSON. One other thing, Mr. Chairman. I think the record ought to note that some of the witnesses, particularly Mr. Stanley, have very graciously consented to come back from well-earned vacations to take part in this hearing at the convenience of the committee.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. Do you and each of you solemnly swear that the evidence you are about to give in this matter will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. I do.

Mr. DUHIG. I do.

TESTIMONY OF R. VAN DER WOUDE, PRESIDENT, AND S. W. DUHIG, VICE PRESIDENT AND TREASURER, SHELL UNION OIL CORPORATION, NEW YORK CITY

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. van der Woude, will you state your full name and address, please?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. R. van der Woude—v-a-n d-e-r W-o-u-d-e. I am president of the Shell Union Oil Corporation, 50 West Fiftieth Street, New York.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. What office do you hold with the Shell Union Oil Corporation?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. I am the president.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. You are the president of the company?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. Yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Duhig, will you state your full name and address, please?

Mr. DUHIG. Stanley W. Duhig, 50 West Fiftieth Street, New York.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And what position do you hold with the Shell Union Oil Corporation, Mr. Duhig?

Mr. DUHIG. I am vice president and treasurer of the corporation.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And will you describe briefly the nature of your duties?

Mr. DUHIG. The usual duties that you would assign to a treasurer of an oil company in looking after the conservation of the company's cash and the financing of operations as needed, budgetary work, and so forth.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Do you not, as part of your duties, specifically concern yourself with securities matters, that is to say, do you not make a study of market trends, questions of price as they appear on other offerings? Do you not concern yourself in general with financial and corporate problems so that you may better execute your official duties?

Mr. DUHIG. I would say that that is an important part of my duties.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And will you describe briefly the kind of business that the Shell Union Oil Corporation is engaged in?

Mr. DUHIG. Shell Union Oil Corporation is a holding company having 100 percent subsidiaries engaged in the United States in producing, refining, and marketing petroleum products, with some interests in Canada.

SYMBOLS AND ABBREVIATIONS USED IN DOCUMENTS

Mr. NEHEMKIS. May I, for the sake of convenience, Mr. Duhig and Mr. Van der Woude, refer to Shell Union Oil Corporation hereafter in the hearings as "Shell"? Will that be agreeable?

Mr. DUHIG. Yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. We will have occasion, Mr. Duhig, to discuss a number of cablegrams between New York and London, and these cablegrams bear certain code addresses, such as Condeteck, Deterding, and so on. Will you briefly describe to the committee the meaning of the various code symbols?

Mr. DUHIG. Yes; code addresses for cablegram purposes are used both in sending and receiving communications to and from London. It happens that of our 12 directors, 4 of them at the present time are resident on the other side, although 3 of those 4 have been former officers and directors in this country of Shell, and it is common practice to arrive at unanimous decisions of the board by conferring with those members who are on the other side by cablegram. Naturally, for the sake of convenience and economy, we use cable addresses, code addresses, and I confirm those are the ones you refer to.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. When you and I have occasion to refer to Condeteck, as we shall, what will the committee understand?

Mr. DUHIG. That would be a cable from Shell Union New York office to the directors in, well, it would be from van der Woude to his fellow directors on the other side of the Atlantic.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And when we have occasion to refer to Deterding, what shall the committee understand to be the meaning of that code symbol?

Mr. DUHIG. Similarly. It is just another code to cover the same purpose.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And occasionally we shall refer to Vanwood. What will the meaning be that is accorded to that symbol?

Mr. DUHIG. That is another confidential code symbol from Mr. van der Woude to the London office.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Chairman, may it please the committee, I intend to offer some 37 letters, memoranda, and cables between New York and London and others. If I were to ask that Mr. van der Woude or Mr. Duhig identify each cable before offering, we would probably be here much longer than I hope will be necessary. Accordingly I have asked Mr. Duhig to enter into a stipulation with me identifying each and every cable which will be offered to the committee this morning.

Mr. Duhig has been good enough to do so, and I show you, sir, the stipulation, with the documents which will be offered, and I respectfully request that the Committee permit me to offer these documents through the stipulation without the identification of each cable as the occasion arises.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. This stipulation, I assume, identifies the various cables by number, so they can be designated?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Correct, sir. You will find attached to the stipulation the list of the cables and their numbers, and in that order they will be submitted to the reporter.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. That may be done.

(The stipulation referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1972" and is included in the appendix on p. 12903.)

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. Now that the record may be clear, do I understand this stipulation covers all the documentary evidence you propose to offer with reference to these witnesses?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Correct, sir.

Mr. Duhig, on June 1935 and thereafter, did not Shell negotiate toward raising $50,000,000 to $60,000,000 in order to refund its outstanding 5-percent debentures?

Mr. DUHIG. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Were not negotiations carried on with a number of investment bankers at this time?

Mr. DUHIG. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Did not Shell discuss its financing needs with Lee Higginson Corporation and Hayden, Stone & Co.?

Mr. DUHIG. They did; yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I offer a letter from Mr. J. C. van Eck to Mr. F. Godber, dated June 7, 1935.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. It may be received, and all of those will be received without formal declaration because they are covered by a stipulation.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. May I then just pass them directly to the reporter?

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. Unless you want them back.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. No.

(The letter referred to was marked "Exhibit No 1973" and is included in the appendix on p. 12904.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Lee, Higginson & Co. was the predecessor of Lee Higginson Corporation, was it not?

Mr. DUHIG. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And Lee, Higginson & Co. had headed all of the public offerings of Shell securities from the time of its first public financing in 1927?

Mr. DUHIG. The first public financing in 1922.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. 1922; yes.

Mr. DUHIG. I think that is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I offer a table compiled by the staff of the Securities Exchange Commission from information appearing in Moody's Manual, showing various public offerings of Shell Union securities prior to the year 1935.

(The table referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1974" and is included in the appendix on p. 12905.)

DISCUSSIONS WITH BANKERS LEADING UP TO 1936 FINANCING

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Hayden, Stone & Co. had been one of the principal underwriters associated with Lee, Higginson in the underwriting of Shell securities, had it not, Mr. Duhig?

Mr. DUHIG. I think that is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Shell had also negotiated with Dillon, Read & Co. at this time. Is that not also correct, sir?

Mr. DUHIG. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I offer in evidence at this time a letter from Mr. S. Belither to Mr. Van Eck, dated July 22, 1935, and a cable from Condeteck to Deterding dated August 14, 1935.

(The documents referred to were marked "Exhibits Nos. 1975 and 1976" and are included in the appendix on p. 12905.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. At this time, Mr. Duhig, did Shell not also discuss the proposed financing with Brown Harriman & Co.?

Mr. DUHIG. I think that they did; yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And do you recall whether this financing was also discussed with Lazard Frères & Co.?

Mr. DUHIG. It was.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I offer a cable from Deterding to Mr. Van Eck, dated October 14, 1935, and a cable from Deterding to Condeteck dated July 29, 1935, and in connection with that last cable, I should like to read into the record the following [reading from "Exhibit No. 1978"]:

We entirely agree every possible avenue must be investigated but anxious not to appear in any great hurry as we are satisfied with time our side.

(The cables referred to were marked "Exhibits Nos. 1977 and 1978" and are included in the appendix on p. 12906.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. In undertaking these discussions, Mr. Duhig, was it not Shell's intention to consider proposals from various firms in order to determine the best terms obtainable in the market?

Mr. DUHIG. I would say that Shell did not go around soliciting different proposals; rather bankers offered proposals as to what might be done to meet Shell's situation, all of which we were very glad to consider and compare.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And the purpose or interest, shall I say, of Shell in examining these various proposals was to obtain the best possible terms that the market made possible at the time?

Mr. DUHIG. That is correct.

Mr. MILLER. May I ask a question of the witness? You say that you were not soliciting proposals from the bankers. How did they know that you were in the market for financing? Did they come to you without any solicitation—maybe that isn't the word—without any approach from you?

Mr. DUHIG. Well, that is rather hard to make a general answer to, because naturally in following the financing business one becomes acquainted with bankers and discusses the subject of corporation finance on various occasions. I think that in most cases the investment bankers are sufficiently on their toes that they sense the possible needs of the corporation and inquire as to what might be worked out to improve the financial structure.

Mr. MILLER. These were all voluntary approaches, then, to you and your associates from the investment banking firms?

Mr. DUHIG. As I said, that is very difficult to answer. I myself dropped in in investment bankers' offices to discuss finance in general, or to discuss what some other oil company was currently doing as a matter of interest.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. On November 1, 1935, had not Dillon, Read made a tentative proposal to Shell?

Mr. DUHIG. Yes; they had.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And on November 1, 1935, Condeteck sent the following cable to Deterding in London, from which I read a part [reading from "Exhibit No. 1979"]:

If indicated terms acceptable as basis for further negotiations would recommend we give other banker friends opportunity to indicate their terms stop Bankers whom we think should be given opportunity are

First Lee Higginson and Hayden Stone

Second Lehman Bros.

Third Lazard Freres.

I offer it in evidence.

(The cable referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1979" and is included in the appendix on p. 12906.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. After further discussion with the various bankers, Mr. Duhig, did not Shell, in December, advise Dillon, Read as to the terms on which Shell was prepared to sell the proposed issue?

Mr. DUHIG. I think the answer to that is that we probably indicated the terms at which Shell felt they could make a profitable deal and that anything less than that would not be worth doing.

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. They quoted terms at which they thought they could make a deal with us.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Let me read you from the letter from Dillon, Read & Co. to Shell, dated December 16, 1935 [reading from "Exhibit No. 1980"]:

You have informed us that you are preparing a registration statement and a prospectus for an issue of $50,000,000 3½% Fifteen-Year Debentures of your Company to refund your outstanding Twenty-Year Sinking Fund Debentures—and so on.

"We understand that you are prepared to sell the issue at a price of 97% of the principal amount plus accrued interest. This price does not take into consideration the expenses to be borne by your Company in connection with the financing including the fees and disbursements of counsel and other experts and travelling, telephone, telegraph, and other similar out-of-pocket expenses (except selling expenses) of the underwriters. . . .

It is understood that this letter is not to be construed as a commitment, either legal or moral, on our part or on the part of your Company.

(The letter referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1980" and is included in the appendix on p. 12907.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now, on December 16, 1935, Dillon, Read wrote to Shell Union confirming these terms and stating that they were prepared to proceed with an investigation in the belief that they would be able to purchase the issue at the price mentioned. Is that not correct?

Mr. DUHIG. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And Shell also advised Hayden, Stone and Lee Higginson as to the terms on which it was prepared to do business. Do you recall that, Mr. Duhig?

Mr. DUHIG. That is correct; yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And on December 18, 1935, these two firms jointly wrote Shell stating that as soon as the market made it possible for them to meet these terms, they would communicate with Shell?

Mr. DUHIG. Correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I offer in evidence a letter from Lee Higginson Corporation and from Hayden, Stone & Co. to the Shell Union Oil Corporation dated December 18, 1935.

(The letter referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1981" and is included in the appendix on p. 12908.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. However, Mr. Duhig, the price confirmed by Lee Higginson and Hayden, Stone was one-half point higher, was it not, than the price confirmed by Dillon, Read?

Mr. DUHIG. That is according to the record; yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Was this due to their possible misunderstanding, or had you indicated different terms to Lee Higginson and Hayden, Stone?

Mr. DUHIG. We certainly hadn't indicated different terms; it possibly was a question of our not having indicated at all to Lee Higginson and Hayden, Stone or that they assumed something which they put in their letter and which was a surprise to us when we saw it.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I read from a cable by Deterding, London, to Condeteck, under date of January 14, 1936 [reading from "Exhibit No. 1982"]:

Weill telephoned us from Paris today and we recommend you keep in touch with Lazard Freres in New York and consider carefully any proposal more attractive than that of Dillon Read's.

For the sake of the record, "Weill" refers to the Paris partner of Lazard Frères & Co.

I offer the cable in evidence.

(The cable referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1982" and is included in the appendix on p. 12908.)

During this period, after the proposals had been received from Hayden, Stone and Lee Higginson and Dillon, Read, Shell continued to consider proposals from other bankers, did it not, Mr. Duhig?

Mr. DUHIG. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And on January 13, 1936, did not Mr. Clarence Dillon advise Shell verbally that his firm could now pay 97, this being the price at which Shell had indicated to Dillon, Read that it was prepared to sell the debentures?

Mr. DUHIG (to Mr. van der Woude). Can you answer that?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I offer in evidence a cable to Condeteck, London, under date of January 3, 1936, and I read the second paragraph of this cable, marked "Confidential" [reading from "Exhibit No. 1983"]:

In order to make progress my opinion we should now obtain from all parties interested offer in writing say by next Thursday for alternative $50,000,000 with obligation refund one of present Shell Union Oil Corp. issue or $60,000,000 with obligation to refund both Shell Union Oil Corp. and Shell Pipe Line Corp. issues stop

What is your opinion

PURPOSE OF PREVIOUS NEGOTIATIONS TO PAVE WAY FOR FORMAL BIDS

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Duhig, was not the purpose of the previous negotiations to pave the way for a later request to the bankers to submit formal bids?

Mr. DUHIG. That is correct.

(The cable referred to was marked "Exhibit 1983" and is included in the appendix on p. 12908.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. But the idea of obtaining competitive bids from all the interested parties was discarded, was it not?

Mr. DUHIG. Yes; it was.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And in a cable to Deterding, London, by Condeteck, under date of January 22, 1936, there appears the following [reading from "Exhibit No. 1984"]:

As contemplated procedure of competitive bidding caused undesirable complications we have had discussions with view bring bankers possibly together without injury to our interests and understanding between two groups now arrived at on basis Dillon Read Hayden Stone will be joint syndicate managers both houses to head prospectus but Dillon Read to keep syndicate books.

I offer in evidence the cable previously identified.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Will you tell me, if you will, Mr. Duhig, what undesirable complications would have resulted from the contemplated procedure of competitive bidding?

Mr. DUHIG. Well, we were faced with a multiplicity of plans, to begin with, trying to compare apples and oranges, you might say, and decide which was preferable, and we felt that our relations with all of the bankers being very cordial, there was nothing to be gained by trying to set one off against the other, because as the exhibit you have entered states, it was felt that there would be no disadvantage to the corporation in the terms by bringing them together and getting them jointly to enter into negotiations for this financing.

Mr. HENDERSON. Mr. Duhig, you weren't comparing apples to oranges but comparing oranges of different kinds or apples of different kinds. It all related to the specific issue.

Mr. DUHIG. They all related to that, some of which suggested the possibility of convertible debentures or attaching warrants; some had different ideas from others as to what was the right call price or sinking fund terms, and as I remember it, and as you might naturally expect, each proposal slightly differed from the other because they had not been made up in the same office.

Mr. HENDERSON. You had had no difficulty in wading through the relative advantages to the company. Did you have these different proposals? You are an experienced financial officer.

Mr. DUHIG. I think not as experienced, however, as the bankers are in such matters.

Mr. HENDERSON. I think the record here shows that you rather outsmarted the bankers, does it not? I don't want to get ahead of the story. I like modesty in its proper place, but it would seem to me you are a little too modest.

Mr. DUHIG. I think that is something not borne out by the record, Mr. Henderson.

Mr. HENDERSON. I think we will have to let the committee judge from the record.

SHELL PROCEDURE IN ISSUING SECURITIES

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Duhig, was not Shell's final procedure designed to obtain the best competitive price while at the same time utilizing the accepted forms of banker-corporation relationships?

Mr. DUHIG. That is correct, if you mean by best competitive price not necessarily the highest price for the interests of the corporation.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. In other words, Mr. Duhig, Shell was trying to eat its cake and have it, too. Is that not so?

Mr. DUHIG. I don't understand what you are referring to.

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. You don't blame us for that, do you?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. No.

Mr. Duhig, how did you manage to bring the two groups together without injury to your interests?

Mr. DUHIG. I think the answer to that is that we had our own idea as to what would be a profitable deal, and the line which we couldn't cross for fear of the deal not being worth doing at all.

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. May I say more as a matter of policy, you have to go back a little bit. The record shows we used to have our financial transactions with Lee Higginson. You know that Lee Higginson had certain misfortunes, and as a result they were no longer in the same situation as they had been before. Hayden, Stone also were in close relation with them, and also Mr. Charlie Hayden, a senior partner of Hayden, Stone, was upon the board of our company. So for a while Lee Higginson was in a different position from what they were before, and Dillon, Read, at that time, in '35, made proposals for financing, and we, of course, considered it, which came, as Mr. Duhig pointed out, to other bankers, and different propositions from other bankers, and then it finally came to deciding how we would deal with the situation, and we felt that Dillon, Read having come first, and there was an opportunity of doing solid financing, we naturally felt that Dillon, Read should be given preference and should be given a chance of getting it.

Two or three had been soliciting our business in line with their own ideas. There wasn't much difference in the different offers. I think you are right in saying it was comparing oranges with oranges or apples with apples. It was just a question on what basis we preferred to do our financing. Finally we thought the basis of Dillon, Read was a more acceptable one, and it was logical to do business with our old friends.

FORMATION OF THE 1936 SYNDICATE

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Dillon, Read and Lee Higginson were selected to be joint managers, were they not?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I think you have already indicated, but I would like the record to show at this point again, were not all of the investment bankers with whom Shell had negotiated included in the syndicate?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. I think they were; yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I offer a list of the participations, the dollar amount of the participations of the Shell Union group dated February 10, 1936. (The list referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1985" and is included in appendix on p. 12910.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Also, Mr. Duhig, all of the investment bankers that had been principal underwriters in previous Shell issues were also included, were they not?

Mr. DUHIG. I think that is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. In addition, other investment bankers were also included, but these bankers were selected by Dillon, Reed, and Hayden, Stone, subject, of course, to the approval of Shell?

Mr. DUHIG. That is right.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Among such bankers chosen were Morgan, Stanley & Co. for a participation of $5,000,000 of debentures, is that correct?

Mr. DUHIG. That is correct; yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. On March 6, 1936, did not Dillon, Read endeavor to induce Shell to reduce the price from 97 to 96½, despite the fact that a firm commitment had been made?

Mr. DUHIG. I think Mr. van der Woude can answer that.

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. That is correct. Of course, they hadn't made a firm commitment. All they did was to indicate what conditions were at the time of the issue, then the price would be so and so. If I remember the letter of Dillon, Read, they did not make a firm commitment.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. What did you understand it to be?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. We understood that is what it would be unless there was a change in the market.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. In other words, you understood what my question implied, that it was a firm commitment, despite the provisions that surrounded the transmittal letter, which I read into the record, that this didn't have any moral or legal effect, is that not correct?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. I think in our minds, yes; because we subsequently told Mr. Dillon that we considered it definitely indicated a firm price, and he had to adhere to it.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And may I now repeat my question so the record will be clear. Is it not a fact on or around March 6, 1936, Dillon, Read endeavored to induce Shell to reduce the price from 97 to 96½, despite the fact that a firm commitment had been made? May I have your answer to that?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. It is correct he endeavored to reduce it.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I offer in evidence a telegram to Godber from R. van der Woude.

(The telegram referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1986" and is included in the appendix on p. 12910.)

Mr. MILLER. May I ask a question, Mr. Nehemkis? Mr. van der Woude, why did Dillon, Read & Co. wish or suggest a reduction in the price from 97 to 96½?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. Because they thought the market couldn't stand the price which they had indicated.

Mr. MILLER. Had the market changed in their opinion?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. Apparently, in their opinion; in our opinion, it had not.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And Shell, of course, saw no reason to accede to this request?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. No.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I offer in evidence a telegram from Godber to van der Woude dated March 6, 1936.

(The telegram referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1987" and is included in the appendix on p. 12911.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. On March 7, 1936, Mr. Duhig, was not a purchase contract entered into by Shell with 29 underwriters?

Mr. DUHIG. I think that is the correct date.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And did not Shell agree to sell to the 29 underwriters $60,000,000 15-year 3½ percent debentures due March 1, 1951?

Mr. DUHIG. At 97—that is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And the underwriters agreed to purchase severally specified amounts of debentures as you have indicated at 97, plus accrued interest?

Mr. DUHIG. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The public offering price, therefore, was to be 99 and accrued interest.

Mr. DUHIG. Correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And was not a selling group formed to purchase severally a portion of the debentures from the underwriters at a concession of 1¼, less expenses not to exceed one-eighth percent?

Mr. DUHIG. That is my recollection.

Mr. O'CONNELL. May I ask a question? Mr. Nehemkis said, "And therefore the offering price by the underwriters would be 99." Is that by virtue of your agreement with the underwriters, the spread of two points?

Mr. DUHIG. It was agreed that the spread would be two points; yes, sir.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Chairman, I wish to comment at this moment that the document I now propose to offer is not covered by the stipulation. It is a copy of the purchase contract which Dillon, Read have been good enough to submit to us, and I ask no one to identify it, because there is a letter of transmittal accompanying the document.

May it be received in evidence?

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. It may be received.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I beg your pardon, my associate tells me I inadvertently referred to it as the purchase contract. It is the underwriting agreement.

(The document referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1988" and is included in the appendix on p. 12911.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The public offering was made on March 11, 1936, at 99; is that correct, sir?

Mr. DUHIG. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And is it not also correct that the debentures moved slowly?

Mr. DUHIG. They did.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I offer in evidence a telegram to Mr. Duhig from J. W. Watson under date of March 11, 1936.

(The telegram referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1989" and is included in the appendix on p. 12914.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I offer a telegram from Mr. van Eck to Mr. Godber under date of March 11, 1936, and I read from this message to Mr. Godber at Mexico City [reading "Exhibit No. 1990"]:

Understand sale of issue going very slowly and first day only about 50% of issue sold (stop) Am afraid will take some time before whole issue absorbed.

I offer this in evidence.

(The telegram referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1990" and appears on this page.)

WAIVER OF MANAGEMENT FEE

Mr. NEHEMKIS. For the convenience of the committee, Mr. Chairman, we have prepared a memorandum which gives in great detail the technical steps that took place in this early issue. If we were to go into them at this time, it would take too great a time. Accordingly, we have prepared as I have indicated, our memorandum of the understanding of the facts.

We have submitted this memorandum to Messrs. Dillon, Read & Co. for their understanding as to whether our statement of the facts and interpretation is correct, and I have here a letter from Mr. Harry H. Egly, an officer of that firm, addressed to me, in which he indicates that his firm accepts the data. So that there may be no misunderstanding, I ask leave of the committee to read this letter. As I say, it is addressed to me. [Reading from "Exhibit No. 1991-1":]

As you have requested, we have looked over the memorandum prepared by your office, which was enclosed with your letter of November 27, 1939, and which is headed "Re: Distribution of Shell Union 3½% Debentures in 1936." In general the data appear to be correct.

For your information, the amount of Debentures offered to the Selling Group was $27,480,000. This figure was left blank in your memorandum.

We had requested them to fill that information in because we didn't know what it was.

You have asked why no management fee was charged although it was originally contemplated that each of the Managers was to receive ¼ of 1%. In view of the general market uncertainty which existed just prior to the offering date and of the unwillingness of the Company to meet our recommendation in pricing the issue, it was decided to waive the fee in this instance thus permitting the full discount to be divided among all underwriters and selling group members.

I offer, sir, the letter of transmittal and the memorandum to which reference has been made.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. It may be received.

(The documents referred to were marked "Exhibit No. 1991-1 and 2" and are included in the appendix on p. 12915.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. On April 3, 1936, Mr. Duhig, were not most of the underwriters still left with large amounts of unsold debentures?

Mr. HENDERSON. Mr. Neheimkis, has that memorandum been submitted to the Shell Union people also?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. No, sir; we did not feel it was necessary to do that, because the Shell Union people really had no knowledge of these transactions. They are the specialized transactions that only a manager of a syndicate would know about, since the information must come of necessity from the manager's own syndicate books. Obviously, we felt that the Shell people would not know about those facts.

Mr. HENDERSON. I suggest if Mr. Duhig wants a copy, we will be glad to mail it to him.

Mr. DUHIG. Thank you very much.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I offer in evidence a letter from Mr. van Eck to Mr. G. Legh-Jones at London, dated April 3, 1936.

(The letter referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1992" and is included in the appendix on p. 12918.)

DISCUSSIONS WITH BANKERS IN 1937 FOR REDEMPTIONS OF OUTSTANDING PREFERRED STOCK

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And now, Mr. Duhig, I would like you to turn with me, if you will, to the events leading up to the negotiations of 1937. In January of the following year, that is to say, 1937, did not Shell commence negotiations for the refunding of $34,350,000 5½-percent preferred stock then outstanding?

Mr. DUHIG. I wouldn't call them negotiations, Mr. Nehemkis, because as a matter of fact no such operation has ever been carried through as the refunding of that preferred stock, but we did have discussions with various parties regarding the refinancing of that preferred stock.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I offer in evidence a cable to Vanwood, London, under date of January 20, 1937.

(The cable referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1993" and is included in the appendix on p. 12919.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And were not discussions held with Dillon, Read & Co. and Hayden, Stone about this matter?

Mr. DUHIG. In January 1937?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. On or about the beginning of January or the early part of January 1937.

Mr. DUHIG. Yes; I believe that the proposal was talked over with Dillon, Read; Hayden, Stone; and others; Lazard; and Lee Higginson.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And Lee Higginson.

Mr. DUHIG. Correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And had not Lee Higginson and Lazard Frères actually made some tentative proposals?

Mr. DUHIG. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. So that by the time the proposals were received from Lee Higginson and Lazard, the scene had shifted somewhat, shall we say, from discussions to, perhaps, negotiations, although not consummated?

Mr. DUHIG. I think you could call them negotiations; yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I offer in evidence a letter from Mr. van der Woude to Mr. van Eck, dated February 4, 1937.

(The letter referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1994" and is included in the appendix on p. 12919.)

Mr. HENDERSON. Mr. Chairman, I would like to advert back to a letter of April 3, 1936, which has been offered in evidence, which was evidently sent by Mr. van Eck to Mr. Legh-Jones. Mr. van Eck says [reading from "Exhibit No. 1992"]:

Most of the other underwriters and dealers have either been able to dispose of their bonds or only have a very nominal amount on hand.

Then he says a survey shows what certain houses still had on hand. I would like to indicate that in my opinion, that is not a nominal amount. Just roughly, in some cases the amount on hand represented as much as one-third of the total underwriting resources of some of the underwriting houses, and does indicate how underwriting capital can get frozen if there is an issue which is overpriced or hits a sticky market.

Mr. MILLER. I would like to ask a question. According to this letter of April 3, the price on that date which the bonds were quoted was 95½, and as I understood, the issue price was 99?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. That is right, yes.

Mr. MILLER. The public who had purchased these bonds at 99—apparently most of the issue had been distributed to the public at this date—suffered a loss in the quoted value of their securities.

Mr. van der WOUDE. Not if they kept them.

Mr. MILLER. At this stage?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. If they had sold them at that stage, yes.

Mr. MILLER. Did you think they were happy about that, these purchasers, public investors? I mean from the issuer's standpoint, Mr. van der Woude, is there reason for the issuer to be concerned for the welfare of the public who had purchased your securities?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. I should think so. We have often been told that it is not to our interest to make an issue that goes down directly after the issue, but in most cases I think prices have come back again.

Mr. MILLER. In other words, it is harmful to the issuer.

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. We have never felt ourselves it was harmful to us if we made an issue that went down in price. We have never felt it as such, certainly. We have never felt it in subsequent financing transactions. In whatever subsequent deals we made, the investment houses and the public were always anxious to take them up.

Mr. MILLER. In other words, you feel it hasn't hurt your future borrowing credit with the underwriters or the public.

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. All I can say is that experience has shown it did not.

Mr. MILLER. Then you feel from a public standpoint that the issuer really isn't concerned with what happens to the public's bonds?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. Certainly he is, but I don't think you can take a short interval. For instance, in the investment of our pension funds we buy bonds all the time, we don't look every day to see whether those bonds have gone up in price or gone down. We see that it is a good bond and we don't look every day to see what it closed at on the stock exchange. There are so many considerations—there may be a war in Europe or something that may be quite unforeseen. But it doesn't mean that subsequently the bond isn't good. I generally buy bonds and lay them aside and when they fall due, you get the full price, if you have bought bonds in a company that is a good company.

Mr. MILLER. Suppose it was the general experience that every time there was a new issue, there was an immediate price decline and that became general, do you think the public would be anxious to purchase new issues?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. I can't tell you. The only thing I can give you is our experience, the fact that the investment bankers have told us that we are apt to drive too hard a bargain, but we have always found when the next issue came, they were always anxious to make the issue and the public was anxious to buy it.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Chairman, may I offer in evidence a cable to Vanwood under date of March 5, 1937.

(The cable referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1995" and is included in the appendix on p. 12922.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I read from that cable to Vanwood [reading from "Exhibit No. 1995"]:

Furthermore in my opinion best not to disturb grouping of bankers as was formed under last year's bond issue in fact I understand Dillon Read Hayden Stone and Lee Higginson have already come to such understanding amongst each other (fullstop) My reasons are:

Firstly. We should avoid running into same complications as last year

Secondly. Neither Hayden Stone nor Lee Higginson would in my opinion be suitable leaders

Thirdly. We could not very well switch over to entirely new leaders without first giving last year's group their opportunity (fullstop)

My idea is therefore to give last year's leaders in Dillon group an opportunity of jointly making us an offer along the lines as per your cable (fullstop) If their offer is unsatisfactory to us I would favour inviting Lehman Bros. to make us an offer (fullstop) They are anxious to take leading position and I personally feel as you know that a closer connection with them would be advantageous (fullstop) Presumably they would handle matter in conjunction with Kuhn Loeb (fullstop)

On March 16, was not a banking group composed of Dillon, Read & Co., Lee Higginson & Corp., Hayden Stone & Co., and Lehman Brothers prepared to underwrite a preferred stock issue for Shell, Mr. Duhig?

Mr. DUHIG. Yes, that is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And in a memorandum prepared by you, Mr. Duhig, under date of March 16, 1937, you wrote as follows [reading from "Exhibit No. 1996"]:

On March 16th bankers called at the Shell Union office for the purpose of stating the proposition which they and their group were prepared to make in connection with refinancing the present Shell Union preferred stock and raising additional money, if necessary. Dillon, Read & Co. were represented by Mr. Dean Mathey and Lee Higginson & Co. by Mr. E. N. Jesup.

In opening their discussion they stated that they had agreed among themselves that the group would be approximately the same as the 1936 group and that the group management would be shared in the following proportions:—

And there you list the proportions.

I offer in evidence the memorandum from which I have been reading.

(The memorandum referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1996" and is included in the appendix on p. 12923.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Did not Shell advise this group that the offer was unsatisfactory, Mr. Duhig?

Mr. DUHIG. Shell advised the group that the offer was disappointing and unsatisfactory.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I offer in evidence a cable to Vanwood from Mr. van der Woude.

(The cable referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1997" and is included in the appendix on p. 12924.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. On March 17, 1937, the following cable was sent to Vanwood in London by Mr. van der Woude [reading from "Exhibit No. 1998"]:

Referring my cable 24 consider we should give Dillon group every opportunity of revising their offer and propose to set limit of time say 10 days.

At the end of this period in case the revised offer if any is not acceptable we to notify them that we consider ourselves entirely free to approach others.

I understand that provided it is made clear negotiations with Dillon have come to an end members of group then free to deal with us.

Mr. van der Woude, that was your understanding of the customs of the Street, was it not?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. Yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I now continue reading from the cable [reading further from "Exhibit No. 1998"]:

In aforementioned event suggest we consider Kuhn, Loeb/Lehman combination or Morgan Stanley as leaders.

I offer in evidence the cable from which I have been reading.

(The cable referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1998" and is included in the appendix on p. 12924.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Due to unfavorable market conditions, Mr. Duhig, negotiations regarding public financing were discontinued until some time in January of 1938; is that not substantially correct, sir?

Mr. DUHIG. You said for public financing?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Correct.

Mr. DUHIG. That is correct; yes.

NEGOTIATIONS WITH MORGAN, STANLEY & CO. INC.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. At this time, that is to say in 1938, was it not determined to begin negotiations with Morgan Stanley & Co.?

Mr. DUHIG. It was.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I offer in evidence a letter from Mr. van Eck to Mr. van der Woude under date of January 18, 1938.

(The letter referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 1999" and is included in the appendix on p. 12925.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. van der Woude, was not the reason that your company at this time decided to open up negotiations with Morgan Stanley due to your dissatisfaction with Dillon Read's leadership of the previous financing?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. No; I can't say that. It was a combination of circumstances. Previous to 1936, Mr. van Eck who is here referred to so often was in New York and was chairman of our company, and he dealt chiefly with our finances, so that naturally I was informed of what he was doing. After he left, about in 1936, I more or less took direct charge of our financing.

As to our connections and what possibly happened in the past, it is very difficult to say exactly what the reason was. You have to bear in mind that Dillon, Read was not a long standing connection of the Shell Union here in this country, that our older, standard connection was Lee Higginson and Hayden, Stone, and the only transactions we had ever made with Dillon, Read was the issue of 1935 or '36 of $60,000,000. I had been acquainting myself with both conditions and people, and generally forming my own views, and for various reasons I came to the conclusion that I would like to see our company get a connection with Morgan Stanley.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Thank you very much, sir, for your explanation.

Mr. Chairman, may it please the committee: In connection with the next document that I propose to offer in evidence, I have asked Mr. Charles B. Stuart of Halsey, Stuart & Co., Inc., New York, to enter into a stipulation with me concerning the identification of the document, purely so that Mr. Stuart would not have to come down here to identify this document, and as I offer it to you, sir, I ask you, if you will, sir, to examine the stipulation.

I read to you from an office memorandum dated May 11, 1938, from the New York office of Halsey, Stuart to Mr. H. L. Stuart at the Chicago office. [Reading from "Exhibit No. 2000-2"]:

I understand Morgan Stanley are working on a good size bond deal for Shell Union Oil. I further understand that Dillon Read, who handled the last issue, made such a botch job of it, the Company will have nothing further to do with them.

I offer this in evidence.

(The documents referred to were marked "Exhibits Nos. 2000-1 and 2000-2" and are included in the appendix on pp. 12925 and 12926.)

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. I would like to add one thing to what I said, that I think you will find amongst the records which you have got there that on more than one occasion I pointed out to Dillon Read that we did not look upon them as our permanent banking connection. On two or three occasions I made it quite clear that we considered ourselves entirely free. That in itself shows that our mind was open, and that was not to be interpreted as anything definite that had happened between the two of us.

Mr. HENDERSON. Mr. van der Woude, do you in any of your world-wide enterprises regard any group as your bankers?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. In other countries, you mean? Before I answer, you have to bear in mind that our company here is an entirely separate company from our various companies in the rest of the world. But as far as conditions in other countries are concerned, I think the situation is—I am not sure because I haven't been there for a long time, but I think we have got certain banking houses that in the ordinary course of events would do our financing. It might quite well happen that there might be a financing transaction with another firm.

Mr. HENDERSON. There would be a continuing relationship, as the expression is here?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. Yes. In this business as in the case of lawyers, doctors, and so on, you get to know each other. It is very important in a financial house that you know in what way you do your business. You ought to build up certain confidence, and certainly you ought to know what way the business is being conducted.

Mr. HENDERSON. You used to regard Lee Higginson as your bankers here?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. Yes, they were the people we would look to first.

Mr. HENDERSON. Do you regard Morgan Stanley as your bankers now?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. Yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. As your permanent bankers?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. Who can say what is permanent? It depends a good deal on how Morgan Stanley can do the work for us.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And depending upon market conditions and subsequent opportunities at a later time.

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. Yes; and a great number of other things.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Nehemkis, I wanted to ask a question which I think is related to Mr. Henderson's. What is the relation of the Royal Dutch Co. to Shell Union Co.? Do they own stock in Shell Union?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. Yes; the relationship is that they own approximately 64 percent, and we have three or four of their representatives on the board of the Shell Union, and that is the reason why you see a certain number, not very many but a certain number of cable exchanges take place on matters of financing or policy, seeing that three or four members of the Royal Dutch Co. are on the board of the Shell Union in America.

Mr. MILLER. Did Dillon, Read ever do any financing for Royal Dutch in this country?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. Not in this country, but on the other side they did.

Mr. MILLER. It seems to me I recollect there was an issue in this country.

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. I don't think so.

Mr. DEAN MATHEY (Dillon, Read & Co.). We did two issues in this country, one for the Batavia and one for the Royal Dutch direct in dollars in this country.

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. I got confused. Actually it was closed on the other side, wasn't it? I perhaps ought not to do this because I have information only with regard to Shell. My recollection with regard to the dealings of Royal Dutch Shell with Dillon, Read was that about 10 years ago, or 12 years ago, they made an issue for them which was entirely negotiated in The Hague or London, but it was a dollar loan. Mr. Mathey ought to be able to answer the question better than I, because I was certainly not in on the financing operations for the Royal Dutch in London or The Hague.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. van der Woude, do you recall that in April of 1938, more specifically April 13, 1938, you had occasion to write to Mr. van Eck at London, in which you said the following [reading from "Exhibit No. 2001"]:

On the question of finance we have had some preliminary discussions with Morgan, Stanley with a view to enabling them to familiarize themselves somewhat with our activities, and judging from the discussions I have had with them I do not anticipate any difficulties such as you referred to in your letter of the 18th January. Morgan Stanley seem to be very pleased to get an opportunity of establishing a connection with us.

Do you recall that?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. I recall that.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The letter is offered in evidence.

(The letter referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2001" and is included in the appendix on p. 12926.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. In other words, at the time we have now reached, the door was open for full discussion with Morgan Stanley?

NEGOTIATIONS WITH EQUITABLE LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Duhig, while carrying on negotiations with Morgan Stanley, did not Shell at the same time also carry on negotiations with the Equitable Life Assurance Society?

Mr. DUHIG. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And these negotiations led, did they not, to a private placement of $25,000,000 of 3½% debentures in June 1938?

Mr. DUHIG. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And was not the only difference between the proposition that Morgan Stanley finally advanced to you, and the proposition that you finally agreed upon with Equitable, the 2-percent underwriting fee that Morgan Stanley would have had to have been paid?

Mr. DUHIG. I don't know that mathematically that is strictly correct; I certainly have it distinctly in mind that the arrangement we made with Equitable direct, and without any commission, was a better one than we would have negotiated at that particular time through underwriters.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Do you recall, Mr. Duhig, on April 22, 1938, you made a memorandum regarding a number of your discussions with Mr. Lafferty, of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, as well as details of your discussions with Morgan Stanley?

Mr. DUHIG. Yes; that is right.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I now read to you from that memorandum, and I quote [reading from "Exhibit No. 2002"]:

Incidentally, this is approximately the same proposition as suggested tentatively by Morgan, Stanley & Co., except that they would charge 2 percent for underwriting.

I offer in evidence the memorandum from which I have just read.

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. May I see this?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. This is a memorandum written by Mr. Duhig on April 22, 1938, identified by Mr. Duhig, and covered in the stipulation which has been offered to the committee. Do read it.

Mr. O'CONNELL. May I ask a question? Do I understand, then, that the price that your company received from the Equitable was substantially the price at which Morgan Stanley would have offered?

Mr. DUHIG. That is my recollection. They would have done a similar deal.

Mr. O'CONNELL. The net result was your company got two points more for the bonds?

Mr. DUHIG. That is approximately correct. I don't think you can ever say two deals are identical.

Mr. O'CONNELL. I understand. I mean substantially.

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. I think there is a misunderstanding here. It is awfully hard to go back, with so many things happening, to exactly what happened, but I did discuss the matter personally with Morgan Stanley before we closed the deal with the insurance company. You have to bear in mind here this is just a memorandum, perhaps not too carefully written, for office use. But it says here [reading from "Exhibit No. 2002"]:

Arrange a loan to Shell Union of say 20 to 25 million dollars for ten years, at 3½%, for which they would pay us 99.

We were dealing with Morgan Stanley on the basis of 15 years, and my recollection is that Morgan Stanley, when I discussed this with them, before we decided to go to the insurance company, they quoted different rates, and that the difference between the two offers was not just the commission that Morgan Stanley would get; it was smaller than that.

We were comparing really different things here in this memorandum.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Oranges and apples this time?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. No; all oranges, perhaps large and small ones, and of a different color. There is a confusion between 10 and 15 years, and also a confusion of interest, because we closed with the insurance at 3⅝.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And the writer of the memorandum was confused?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. I wouldn't say that, but it certainly doesn't give the facts exactly as they were.

Mr. DUHIG. As I tried to say a moment ago, there are no two deals alike.

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. I had a discussion with Morgan Stanley before we closed the deal with the insurance company, and unless I am very much mistaken the difference was much smaller than the commission was.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. You wish the record to show at this time that the difference between the deal with Equitable and the deal with Morgan would not have been the two percent underwriting commission?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. That is my recollection. I can't vouch for that, but that is distinctly in my mind.

"SHOPPING AROUND"

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I now offer in evidence the memorandum previously referred to, and I also offer in evidence a cable to Vanwood, London, by Mr. van der Woude under date of April 30, 1938.

(The documents referred to were marked "Exhibits Nos. 2002 and 2003" and are included in the appendix on p. 12927.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Duhig, was not the effect of negotiating simultaneously with Morgan, Stanley and Equitable to "shop around" and obtain the best price possible for Shell?

Mr. DUHIG. I think you can put several interpretations on that term "shop around." We wouldn't like to give the interpretation that we went first to one and then the other and said, "Now, look what we can do. Can't you do better, and so on?" I think we sought those two sources of financial advice to see which one was most profitable to the Shell stockholders.

Mr. O'CONNELL. Do you think it was proper to "shop around," as you define it here?

Mr. DUHIG. I wouldn't feel comfortable about it or feel it tended to promote friendly relations with the people that we were looking to for advice to offset one against the other and run back and forth between the two offices offsetting offers in order to try to beat down the price or anything of that kind.

Mr. O'CONNELL. It would have probably resulted in a better price for Shell.

Mr. DUHIG. A lower price but maybe not a better price.

Mr. O'CONNELL. To me that use of the words is practically synonymous.

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. The use of the words "shopping around" is perhaps exaggerated. What we have in mind is not exactly shopping around.

Mr. HENDERSON. Maybe it is something like this. You remember when Chanticleer rolled an ostrich egg into the henyard and said, "I don't want to offer any complaint, but this is what they are doing in other places." [Laughter.]

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. No, to add to what Mr. Duhig was saying, it is not a question of going around from Morgan Stanley to the insurance company and vice versa. Morgan Stanley knew what we were doing. I told Morgan Stanley we had to negotiate with the insurance company, and I didn't give them definitely what the insurance company offered us, but did tell Morgan Stanley, "What is the best you can do?" and Stanley told us certain terms, and I said, "I am afraid that is not good enough." They said, "If you can do better go ahead. We don't like it, naturally."

Of course, it is to our disadvantage to have a loss in the open market. The price is offered and when the time of offering comes if the market is different the price should be different.

Mr. O'CONNELL. Offhand, I couldn't see anything improper in attempting to get the best price you could get for your securities. I merely wanted to get an idea of what you had in mind. It is a little refreshing to me to find an issuer is really taking a very active part in determining the price at which he can sell securities.

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. I don't see any harm in it. [Laughter.]

Mr. HENDERSON. I think what Mr. O'Connell means by refreshing is that in all the testimony here, some of it concerning financing, for example, in the interim period between divorcement of J. P. Morgan from their underwriting business and the formation of Morgan Stanley, it was plainly evident that many of the issuers took very little part in the arrangements, and other testimony indicated, as I recall, that frequently the banker would suggest that now was the time to finance. Other testimony this week indicated that the underwriters formed the groups and that it was sometimes 2 to 3 months before they went to the issuer. In your case it seems to be at a bare minimum—at least you took the initiative.

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. Yes. I haven't had as much experience in the financial market as many other people here, but after all money is a commodity that has its price. It is more or less fixed. In issuing securities, there isn't very much difference. Money is money, and it has a certain value on a certain date, yet it has a different relative commodity market. So it is just playing one's views against the other man's views and hoping your own views may prevail.

Mr. HENDERSON. You say money has a price, but in the prior issue price was put at 99, and at the time van Eck was writing it was 95½.

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. But there I think you should bear in mind that—at least that is my view—the stock exchange doesn't indicate the true value of money. The stock exchange is in fact subject to all kinds of changes today, and something may happen in 2 or 3 months' time. You may get inflation, and someone may start selling bonds and bonds will go down. My feeling about bonds is you shouldn't look at what your price is today or tomorrow, but should buy bonds from companies you have confidence in, and if you have confidence in the company you can buy those bonds, and that is the extent, whether it is 95 tomorrow and 99 today.

The only investment we have is the pension fund. We have millions of dollars in the pension fund. We don't get every day, the price going up or down. We look to the companies where we have invested our funds.

Mr. HENDERSON. I think I understand the distinction you are making. As a matter of fact, if you got 97 from Dillon, Read, and if you had received and accepted their proposal, you would have got less money for your company, regardless of what did happen in the future in the price of money.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. van der Woude, do you recall that on or about June 1, 1938, you had occasion to write to a member of your organization, Mr. A. Fraser, at St. Louis, Mo., and in connection with that letter you stated to him as follows [reading from "Exhibit No. 2004"]:

I shall appreciate it very much if you will have your people do all possible to expedite this work and at the same time please do everything you can to keep the deal with Equitable strictly under cover. Their commitment to us is entirely contingent on clearance being given by their counsel on all legal phases and therefore it would be very regrettable if word got about which would offend Morgans in any way, seeing that we are still relying on them in case there is a hitch with Equitable, as well as in case of future public financing.

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. Yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I offer in evidence the letter from which I have been reading.

(The letter referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2004" and is included in the appendix on p. 12929.)

SHELL ENDEAVORS TO OBTAIN REDUCTION IN INTEREST RATE FROM EQUITABLE

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Duhig, do you recall that in the latter part of 1938 and the early part of 1939 interest rates had declined appreciably?

Mr. DUHIG. That is true.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And in an endeavor to take advantage of this decline, do you recall that Shell attempted to negotiate an adjustment in the interest rate with Equitable?

Mr. DUHIG. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I offer in evidence a letter from Mr. Duhig to Mr. van der Woude under date of May 23, 1939.

(The letter referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2005" and is included in the appendix on p. 12929.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. At the same time, do you recall, Mr. Duhig, that Shell commenced discussions with Morgan Stanley for the refunding of $60,000,000, 3½-percent debentures?

Mr. DUHIG. That is right.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And in this letter from which I now read, by Mr. Duhig to Mr. van der Woude, under date of May 24, 1939, the following is said [reading from "Exhibit No. 2006"]:

I have just had a talk with Ewing and Perry Hall. They will be sending me some figures in the morning, but this is a summary of what they think we could do at today's market—

And there you cite the information. Continuing with this letter, you state:

Ewing feels we should be able to get Equitable down to today's market on our present $25,000,000 and he does not expect to beat them out on a public issue; but for our $60,000,000 of 3½'s (in which he feels our best interests would be served by putting ourselves in Morgan's hands) they could save about $278,000 per annum on new 15-year bonds (not including registration expense) and about $150,000 per annum on the 20-year.

I offer in evidence the letter from which I have been reading.

(The letter referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2006" and is included in the appendix on p. 12930.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And I will also offer in evidence at this time a copy of the cable to Vanwood, London, by Mr. van der Woude, under date of June 6, 1939.

(The cable referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2007" and is included in the appendix on p. 12931.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Equitable, Mr. Duhig, declined to recognize Shell's request for reduction. Is that not correct, sir?

Mr. DUHIG. They were willing to make some reduction.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. But not quite the interest reduction Shell wanted at the time?

Mr. DUHIG. Not quite what we thought the market entitled us to.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. As a matter of fact, isn't it true that Equitable thought it wasn't quite cricket of Shell to be asking for a reduction in the interest rates so soon after the private deal had been placed?

Mr. DUHIG. They did state that having made a 15-year loan, they thought it was somewhat unusual to be discussing revision of interest 12 months after the deal was made. On the other hand, they had made a very good deal the year before which entailed a million-dollar penalty for calling the loan before maturity, and they did very well on that one year's money they had outstanding, 3½ percent plus a million dollars.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Accordingly, Shell turned to Morgan Stanley for the refunding of both issues. Is that not correct, sir?

Mr. DUHIG. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And on June 26, did not Shell reach a tentative agreement with Morgan Stanley for the public offering of $85,000,000, 15-year, 2½ debentures at 98½?

Mr. DUHIG. To the public. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I offer in evidence a cablegram to Vanwood by R. G. A. van der Woude, under date of June 26, 1939.

(The cablegram referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2008" and is included in the appendix on p. 12931.)

Mr. DUHIG. I don't remember the exact wording of your question, but I think it is quite clear that 2½ percent debenture at 98½ to the public was what they thought they could do a deal for at that time, subject naturally to correction according to the way the market went and without definite commitment.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. That was the meaning of my question, Mr. Duhig. I think we understood each other correctly.

Was not the bankers' commission fixed at $1\frac{3}{4}$ points, making a net price to the company of $96\frac{3}{4}$?

Mr. DUHIG. No; it was not fixed. That also was subject to further settlement later on. It was suggested that the spread would be between $96\frac{3}{4}$ and $98\frac{1}{2}$, as I remember.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. It was tentatively agreed upon,

Mr. DUHIG. Very tentatively, as I recall.

Mr. O'CONNELL. May I ask a question? What was the distinction between the commitment that Morgan Stanley made for these debentures and the commitment made by Dillon, Read in connection with earlier commitment? As I recall, their letter (referring to "Exhibit No. 1980") to you distinctly stated that they were not legally or morally obligated to pay 97.

Mr. DUHIG. Well, the distinction was that the first one was a letter which was written very close, as I remember, to the time the deal was made, whereas what we are now discussing is what might be done at that particular time subject to the market as it progressed during the course of working out the papers.

Mr. O'CONNELL. Dillon, Read definitely stated in a letter they didn't consider it binding. That seems to me about as tentative or similar to the situation which existed in that later date which was Morgan Stanley.

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. It is all based on recollection, but my recollection of Dillon, Read, in the financial discussion, was that Mr. Dillon came, in this case, as a matter of fact, to our people in London. He happened to be on the other side, and he went to the head of our company there. Subsequent to the event, our people said, "You had better talk to our people in New York." At the opening of the discussion the distinct understanding was that our people would pass it on to us.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Morgan Stanley don't write their tentative offers on paper in any event, do they?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. No. The understanding may be due to the fact that they went to our London people instead of coming to us in New York.

Mr. HENDERSON. In other words, there was a market-out in the conversation.

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. In regard to?

Mr. HENDERSON. Morgan Stanley.

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. I wouldn't call it a market-out. Morgan Stanley said, "We think we can do $98\frac{1}{2}$," but emphasized very strongly that the market might change.

Mr. HENDERSON. That is what I meant. I was just reducing it to the language of the underwriter.

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. Yes. I do not make myself clear.

Mr. HENDERSON. Your additional explanation which supplements the record would indicate it was your view, by virtue of something other than this letter of Dillon, Read, that Dillon, Read had made a commitment to you, but prior to your explanation, there was to my mind little distinction between the existing terms.

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. It may have been entirely due to misunderstanding, due to our people in London naturally not being acquainted so well as we are here with the way things are conducted.

Mr. HENDERSON. But you later took the view that Dillon, Read were firmly bound.

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. Yes, we understand also the view that they had made a clear market and they had to stand by it.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. As a result of changes in the market, Mr. Duhig, did not Morgan Stanley inform Shell on July 13 that a successful issue was impossible at an offering price better than $97\frac{1}{2}$?

Mr. DUHIG. That is correct. I don't know as they said impossible. On the 13th of July they stated that after canvassing the situation, they felt that $97\frac{1}{2}$ to the public was the correct price.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And did they not agree to reduce the banker's commission from $1\frac{3}{4}$ to $1\frac{1}{2}$ percent, making a price to the company at 96?

Mr. DUHIG. They had never made it firmly at $1\frac{3}{4}$ percent, so I don't know that you can say they agreed to reduce it, but they did propose on July 13 that the spread should be $1\frac{1}{2}$ percent, whereas first tentative discussions had been on the basis of $1\frac{3}{4}$.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now, on July 13, Mr. van der Woude, do you recall, cabled to Vanwood at London as follows [reading from "Exhibit No. 2009"]:

Morgan Stanley discussed with us today final terms based on present market conditions and general reaction they received from underwriters and prospective large buyers.

Response from latter has been disappointing and contrary to expectations entertained by Morgan Stanley.

Apparently due mainly to weaker government bond market and resistance against $2\frac{1}{2}\%$ rate this being first issue at this new low rate and to some extent due to remembrance limited success our last issue.

Under circumstances Morgan Stanley of opinion successful issue cannot be made at better than $97\frac{1}{2}$ with commission $1\frac{1}{2}\%$ other terms unchanged.

Judging from discussions doubt whether can hold out much hope obtaining better terms though of course after receiving your views we would try to do so.

And as follows:

Our own inclination would ordinarily be to hold out for 98 but we doubt whether it is really case of bargaining and believe Morgan Stanley sincere in their opinion issue could not at present be successful at higher than $97\frac{1}{2}$ and therefore would not undertake issue at higher rate.

I offer in evidence the cable from which I have been reading.

(The cable referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2009" and is included in the appendix on p. 12932.)

EXECUTION OF PURCHASE CONTRACT WITH MORGAN, STANLEY & CO., INC.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Was not the purchase contract, Mr. Duhig, signed on July 17, 1939?

Mr. DUHIG. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And the price was $97\frac{3}{4}$ with a $1\frac{1}{2}$ -percent commission.

Mr. DUHIG. It was.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. So that it was $96\frac{1}{4}$ to Shell.

Mr. DUHIG. Correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I offer in evidence a telegram¹ from R. G. A. van der Woude to Belither, San Francisco, under date of July 17, 1939. (The cable referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2010" and is included in the appendix on p. 12933.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Duhig, I show you a copy of a purchase contract covering the $85,000,000 Shell Union offering, dated July 17, 1939. I ask you to examine this contract and tell me whether you recognize it to be a true and correct copy of an original which was signed by the Shell Union officials in question. This is not covered by the stipulation; that is the reason for the identification.

Mr. DUHIG. This appears to be a copy of the signed document.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I offer in evidence a copy of the contract identified by the witness.

(The contract referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2011" and is included in the appendix on p. 12933.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Did not the issue meet with poor success, Mr. Duhig?

Mr. DUHIG. It did.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And on July 20, 1939, do you recall Mr. van der Woude cabling Vanwood at London as follows [reading "Exhibit No. 2012"]:

Yesterdays issue met with slow response and rough estimate indicates underwriters out of $56,000,000 sold about half while of $29,000,000 dealer accounts about $6,000,000 were not taken up and returned to underwriters.

Morgan Stanley disappointed at result but not worried Fullstop.

They expect buying will come in after a while especially if price drops somewhat below issue price though for the present they are supporting the market.

I offer in evidence the cable which I have just read.

(The cable referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2012" and appears in full in the text on p. 12650.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. May it please the committee, I ask that the witnesses be dismissed and that I call at this time Mr. Dean Mathey, of the firm of Dillon, Read & Co.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. You mean now you are through with these witnesses?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I am through, finally and for all time.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. Mr. Miller has a question before you excuse them.

Mr. MILLER. This question, Mr. van der Woude, relates to a previous question I asked you about the former issue, $50,000,000 debentures. As I get it here, about half of this issue was unsold. This is the issue you referred to in this memorandum. You state here of $56,000,000 bonds, about half were sold, while of $29,000,000 dealer accounts, about $6,000,000 were not taken up or returned to underwriters.

What happened to the price of that issue in the market of these unsold bonds?

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. They went down.

Mr. MILLER. Do you remember, Mr. Duhig, to what level they went within the next 30 or 60 days?

Mr. DUHIG. My recollection is that they went to as low as 90.

Mr. MILLER. Went as low as 90.

Mr. DUHIG. That is my recollection; I haven't refreshed my recollection on it.

Mr. MILLER. Were these underwriters finally able to dispose of their unsold balances?

Mr. DUHIG. I don't know.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Duhig, may I interpose, Mr. Miller? Do you recall that the war had taken place and that the debentures went down one point?

Mr. DUHIG. Yes. They are 96 at the present moment, approximately.

Mr. MILLER. This is July 20; the war hadn't started in July 1939.

Mr. VAN DER WOUDE. They went down. I don't remember how low they went, because I left for England. I was away directly after the issue was made. I went to England for about a month. That is why I can't answer how low they went. They did go down, that is true.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. The witnesses are excused.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Thank you very much, Mr. van der Woude, and you, too, Mr. Duhig, for all your help to us.

(The witnesses, Mr. van der Woude and Mr. Duhig, were excused.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Will Mr. Dean Mathey take the witness stand, please?

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. Let me inquire how long it will take.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Twelve minutes, sir. I will be through at 12:30. I think it would be more helpful to the committee if we could hear this witness' testimony, because Mr. Stanley, who follows, will proceed on a technical level of discussion.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. Do you solemnly swear that the testimony you are about to give in the matter now pending will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. MATHEY. I do.

TESTIMONY OF DEAN MATHEY, VICE PRESIDENT, DILLON, READ & CO., NEW YORK, N. Y.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Chairman, may it please the committee, I ask you to admit in evidence a stipulation entered into between Mr. Arthur Dean, partner of Sullivan & Cromwell and counsel to The First Boston Corporation, and myself, covering a memorandum by Mr. H. M. Addinsell, dated March 10, 1937.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. Will you enlighten the committee as to the substance of this exhibit?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. This exhibit which I offer to you purports to contain the results of a conversation between witness Mathey and Mr. H. M. Addinsell, and it is my intention to examine this witness on the subject matter of that conversation, and as you will see, the evidence that this witness will offer is pertinent to the testimony previously given.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. You are offering this for the record?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I am, sir.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. It may be admitted.

(The documents referred to were marked "Exhibits Nos. 2013-1 and 2" and are included in the appendix on p. 12942.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Mathey, will you state your full name and address, please?

Mr. MATHEY. Dean Mathey, Princeton, N. J.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And you are a partner, are you not, Mr. Mathey, of Dillon, Read & Co.?

Mr. MATHEY. I am vice president and director of Dillon, Read.

THE MATHEY-ADDINSELL CONVERSATION

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I beg your pardon, that is true. I should like to read to you, if I may, Mr. Mathey, a memorandum by Mr. H. M. Addinsell, of the First Boston Corporation, which purports to contain the gist of a conversation that Mr. Addinsell had with you [reading from "Exhibit No. 2013-2"]:

I lunched today with Mr. Mathey of Dillon Read who advised me that the Shell Union Oil Company proposes to issue $60,000,000 convertible preferred stock, the existing preferred stockholders having the first call to the extent of the amount outstanding: namely $38,000,000.

The company is having preliminary conversations with Dillon Read & Co. on behalf of the old syndicate, which will be substantially the same although for certain reasons Lee Higginson will be managers of the account along with Dillon Read and Hayden Stone. The company has advised Mr. Mathey they would like to see a 4% preferred stock with a conversion beginning at 40, and Mr. Mathey asked my opinion as to whether this could be done, to which I definitely replied in the negative. He agreed to this and said he thought that if the company would make a 4½% preferred and make it convertible for the first two years right close to the market (33) at, say, 35 he thought it would be doable at a price depending on conditions at the time the issue came out at somewhere between par and 105. I indicated that I thought a 4½% preferred with a conversion right close to the market should be doable at an appropriate price, depending on market conditions at the time. If the negotiations go forward the issue would probably not come for at least six weeks.

Having in mind the tremendous trading proclivities of the management and the experience with the debenture issue, Mr. Mathey is determined to avoid being crowded up by the company with regard to the terms of the set-up and the price.

By "tremendous trading proclivities," Mr. Mathey, you meant Shell's habit, shall I say, of "shopping around?"

Mr. MATHEY. Well, I guess that is as good a way to put it as any. They had been very difficult to work with and to work out our previous deal.

DESIRE FOR "A SOLID FRONT"

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Continuing Mr. Addinsell's memorandum [reading from "Exhibit No. 2013-2"]:

He—

feels, especially in view of the fact that the Shell is not as favorably regarded as some of the other oil companies in spite of what he says is its better statistical position as compared, for example, with Texas and Tide Water, and in view of his experience with the note issue, that it is absolutely essential to a successful offering that it be put out on an obviously attractive basis.

He is sure that the company will be shocked at the proposal he has in mind making, and that their first impulse will be to try to go somewhere else. You will recall that the syndicate in the last issue was a pretty comprehensive one and he thinks that the only possible place they might go to is Kuhn Loeb, and there are probably reasons why they would not go even to them. He is anxious, however, to have his group present a solid front to the company and, in effect, to agree that if the Shell Union does not trade with the Dillon Read-Hayden

Stone-Lee Higginson group, the members of this group will not join any other bankers who may attempt to form a group to figure on the business. In view of the well-known trading proclivities of the Shell people, I have agreed in principle to Mr. Mathey's suggestion on the theory that if our large and strong group cannot get the business on terms that we feel attractive, we will be better off to be out of the business.

I submit, Mr. Chairman, may it please the committee, that if Mr. Addinsell correctly understood Mr. Mathey, that Mr. Mathey's suggestion came perilously close to constituting a conspiracy in restraint of trade.

Did Mr. Addinsell correctly understand your suggestion, sir?

Mr. MATHEY. Well, now, I think I remember that conversation with Mr. Addinsell, and if I can review the facts there, I would like to present them. Mr. van der Woude came to my office a few days—may I ask the date of that letter?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Yes. Perhaps you would like to see it. It is March 10, 1937.

Mr. MATHEY. We were negotiating for a preferred stock deal. Mr. van der Woude came to Dillon, Read & Co.'s offices, and I saw him, and he said they wanted a proposition from us and asked us if we would take it up with our group, which consisted of various people he had mentioned, approximately the same group as the previous bond issue.

I discussed this with Mr. Addinsell, who was a member of our group. I felt that they felt by the very situation I was the negotiator for that group, and to be a negotiator for them I had to have them all together with me, I couldn't have them going out on the side talking to them; it was a perfectly normal business transaction amongst partners, they were our partners in this, and as I recall that conversation, it might well have taken place, just as he said, but as I recall it, I said to Addinsell, "Well, now, we are going to sink or swim together on this thing; if you are ready to go ahead, I will go and negotiate."

Mr. NEHEMKIS. That is the reason why you felt that you just had to have a united front, or in view of the well-known "trading proclivities"—I quote from Mr. Addinsell—of Shell you would just sink.

Mr. MATHEY. Well, it would be impossible for us to work out a deal that would be properly offered to the public.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Mathey, did you inquire of Morgan Stanley & Co., who was a member of your group, a partner, shall I say, whether they would join you in this united front?

Mr. MATHEY. To the best of my recollection I didn't, and I don't think I talked to many people on that.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Did you consider it probable that Morgan Stanley might be approached directly by the company at this time?

Mr. MATHEY. No; I didn't.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. When did you first hear that Morgan Stanley was negotiating directly with the company?

Mr. MATHEY. Well, I can't give that information, something prior to the time they negotiated with me, negotiations of the $25,000,000 issue that the company finally did with the Equitable referred to.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And from whom did you learn that Shell was negotiating with Morgan Stanley, do you recall?

Mr. MATHEY. No; I think the first time I heard it, it was a matter of Street gossip.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. When Morgan Stanley & Co. invited you to participate in the $85,000,000 underwriting in July of 1939, under their leadership, did you not decline to accept a participation?

Mr. MATHEY. Yes; we did.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And do you recall, Mr. Mathey, that all the other members of the 1936 group did accept participations?

Mr. MATHEY. I do, substantially so as I recall the list as I saw it in the paper.

THE CUSTOM OF "CLEARING"

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Mathey, I don't know whether or not you have been following the testimony which this committee has patiently been hearing for the past several weeks, but the testimony would appear to indicate that it is the custom on the Street for one banking house to decline to hold discussions with a company whose financing has been headed by another banking house without first clearing, and that appears to be the word of art, with the banker who headed the previous issue. Mr. Mathey, did Morgan Stanley clear with you before opening up discussions with Shell?

Mr. MATHEY. I don't know exactly whether you would call it clearing. I can answer your question—

Mr. NEHEMKIS (interposing). May I just interrupt? Am I correct that "clear" is the word of art used on the Street in reference to such matters?

Mr. MATHEY. I think it is. It is used in a general way; they cleared in this respect: Mr. Stanley, and I believe Mr. Hall, called on Mr. Forrestal.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Perry Hall?

Mr. MATHEY. Mr. Perry Hall. It might have been just Mr. Stanley. Now, this is the conversation that Mr. Forrestal, as I recall, repeated to me. He said that the Shell people had approached them and wished them to be their permanent bankers and he just thought as a matter of courtesy they should tell us about it, and wanted to know how we felt about it. We said we weren't very happy about it, there was no idea it wasn't cleared one way or the other, it was a courtesy call, they asked us how we felt about it. We said we weren't very pleased with it.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Would I be correct in understanding that the use of your word "happy" should be regarded as, perhaps, an understatement?

Mr. MATHEY. Well, I think it could be; yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I'm sorry, Mr. Chairman, I have run 4 minutes over the time I promised you. I have no further questions of the witness.

Mr. HENDERSON. I have a question, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Mathey, we had some discussion the other day which led to an interchange between members of the committee, and I think it was Mr. Swan of Smith, Barney and Mr. Strauss and Mr. Schiff, of Kuhn, Loeb, as to whether investment banking is a business or a profession, and I indicated that it was decidedly of importance to this committee to get the distinction. I think the Wall Street Journal this morning has a very able editorial which contributes to the discussion. I had occasion to say at that time that it was important. I went on to say something like this: If investment banking is distinctly a profession, then of course it would be guided by a code of some kind, similar to that which I understand pertains in the legal profession. I indicated also that if it were a business, then it was subject, of course, to all the laws regulating competition beginning with the Sherman Act, including the common law, down through the Clayton Act, and the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Do you have any opinion as to whether investment banking is a profession or a business?

Mr. MATHEY. Well, I should say, Mr. Henderson, sometimes it is a profession and sometimes it isn't. I think perhaps that question ought to be more clarified among ourselves. I regard it as a profession.

Mr. HENDERSON. Then if it is a profession, may I ask you whether what you and Mr. Addinsell proposed to do to enlighten these tremendous trading proclivities would be against the code?

Mr. MATHEY. Well, I would not call it a profession, in regard to our dealings with the Shell Union Co. [Laughter.] They have been purely on a business basis, and my relationships with Mr. Addinsell were that of a number of partners sticking together.

Mr. HENDERSON. If it is a business—you are an attorney, I believe?

Mr. MATHEY. No, sir.

Mr. HENDERSON. No legal training?

Mr. MATHEY. I studied law at night one year while I was working.

Mr. HENDERSON. Then I am afraid I can't ask you, as an expert, whether or not this wasn't an interference with free trade as a business transaction?

Mr. MATHEY. Well, Mr. Henderson, that was simply an arrangement with partners, and it wasn't a formal one. I don't know, I am sure I only talked to a few on that score, if anyone else.

Mr. HENDERSON. Let's take a similar case, the original equipment business of automobiles, tires particularly. It is a very important piece of business for the tire companies, and, as I understand it from various studies I have made personally, there is quite a bit of shopping around. There is the keenest interest in that particular competition and one company plays against the other. Certainly, in my opinion, if it sometimes has been done in the past as rumor has it, the statute of limitation probably runs on the transactions. If the tire companies got together and agreed they would not do business, say, with the General Motors, it would be distinctly a violation of the laws regulating competition.

If you people got together, your group, which was a very powerful group—it needed to be to handle such situations—wouldn't it be an interference?

Mr. MATHEY. I am not a lawyer, Mr. Henderson.

Mr. HENDERSON. Let's put it on a layman's terms. Wouldn't it be narrowing the market for their shopping around?

Mr. MATHEY. Well, if you will remember the conditions, we were a group. Mr. van der Woude, I know that I was dealing with him. He knew that I was dealing for that group. He asked me to take the question of a preferred stock issue up with that group. He knew them. He considered them a group.

Mr. HENDERSON. And you knew before the issue which you handled that there were negotiations with other houses, did you not?

Mr. MATHEY. No; as a matter of fact, I did not. At that time Mr. van der Woude told me that the bankers were going to negotiate a loan. I told Mr. van der Woude in the early part of these negotiations that I thought it was very undignified, that he should be going to our group members separately, and the only way we would go ahead with this business now was that we would deal with him alone for our group. That was understood by him when he came down, and I do remember his saying, "Mr. Mathey, because you are the only one negotiating for the group, you should give us a higher price." [Laughter.]

Mr. O'CONNELL. May I ask a question? If I understood that memorandum of Mr. Addinsell's correctly, one of your suggestions was that, assuming you were unable as a representative of the group to make a satisfactory deal with the Shell Co., the members of the group, even after the deal had fallen through and the partnership, so-called, had been dissolved, would refuse even at that point to deal with them. Is that true?

Mr. MATHEY. I have had that letter and said Mr. Addinsell's conversation was either so or it might well have been, but it was not any agreement at any moment at all. It was just that we would have lunch together and "let's stick together." As a matter of fact, Mr. Addinsell later joined another group, which would indicate again that it was not a very serious matter.

Mr. O'CONNELL. That would indicate to me that your suggestion or proposal to hold the lines was not consummated, but is there a clear distinction between the group who had pending negotiations, since you were the leader, and the agreement not to deal with Shell after the partnership so-called had been dissolved?

Mr. MATHEY. There may be. This was not a serious conversation I had with Addinsell. I had lunch with him, and said, "Let's stick together here. We are partners. Let's sink or swim together." He put that interpretation. Perhaps he did so properly. There wasn't anything sinister in my suggestion, "Let's stick together." I think, under the circumstances, you can quite well put yourself in the same position doing the same things. That may be presuming a little.

Mr. O'CONNELL. It is quite possible. I don't know. I don't know very much about the code that operates in the Street among investment bankers, and I don't know to what extremes they will go, but to my mind, for an investment banker to propose an alliance which would continue after the negotiations, as I said, have broken down, that certainly very definitely narrows the area which the Shell Union Oil Co. would be able to tap for needed money, and it was clearly to me along the line of Mr. Henderson's remarks, at your suggestion, though not taken seriously, as it happened. But had it been seriously taken, the freedom of the Shell Union Oil Co. would have been hampered, and in that instance it would be a restraint of trade. Wouldn't you agree to that?

Mr. MATHEY. I am not a lawyer, again.

Mr. O'CONNELL. I don't think that makes much difference. I don't think it is a legal question.

Mr. MATHEY. I simply can't see how where partners are together—there must be millions of cases of this throughout the country—and say, "We will keep together for this deal."

Mr. O'CONNELL. For this deal, but the deal falls through. At that point you return to the theoretical situation at least of being competitors. Aren't you competitors in the investment banking field?

Mr. MATHEY. Excepting when we are working on a piece of business. I would think it would be perfectly proper for a group of partners to get together and say they will either sink or swim together and if they don't get the business, why it is just too bad.

Mr. O'CONNELL. That is a little vague. I can see a definite distinction between an arrangement under which a group, having been formed in connection with a particular piece of financing would designate a leader or someone to do the negotiating in that group, and during that period of organization just good organization would require that the dealing be held between the organization and the representative of group. But, as I understand, it was proposed here if the negotiation fell through and the group was dissolved, so-called, the former members of the group would refuse to deal with the Shell Union Oil Co.

Mr. MATHEY. Mr. O'Connell, I think that if that had been really intentional you would have seen other evidence. I lunched with Addinsell. That wasn't anything serious about that. I wouldn't say Mr. Addinsell hasn't quoted me correctly. He may have done it. I don't recall the conversation.

Mr. O'CONNELL. Assuming that was the conversation and assuming that was your desire, the entry is over with and the competition broke out in spite of it.

Mr. MATHEY. It does seem to me I did nothing in restraint of trade, but I think I had better perhaps really see a lawyer. [Laughter.]

Mr. HENDERSON. As to the instance, I am raising no question on that. I was using it as a means of getting further clarification as to this business of investment banking, and I had nothing else in the question I raised. As far as I am concerned, you don't have to see a lawyer about it.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Perhaps the record should show that counsel doesn't expect likewise to talk with Mr. Thurman Arnold during the lunch period. [Laughter.]

Mr. MATHEY. I would like to say to Mr. Henderson, if this has any taint of restraint of trade I don't think it is a common practice. This was a very unusual situation, as I think the committee has seen by the former testimony.

Mr. O'CONNELL. There aren't very many issuers like Shell.

Mr. HENDERSON. I think I ought to say to you, Mr. Mathey, that one of the witnesses before the committee this week prophesied this would be the last investment banking hearing for a long time because letters and memoranda would not in the future be kept. [Laughter.]

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. The committee will stand recessed until 2:30.

(Whereupon, at 12:45 p. m., a recess was taken until 2:30 p. m. of the same day.)

AFTERNOON SESSION

The committee resumed at 2:30 p. m. on the expiration of the recess.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. The committee will be in order, please.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Harold Stanley, will you be good enough to take the witness stand, please?

TESTIMONY OF HAROLD STANLEY, PRESIDENT, AND PERRY E. HALL, VICE PRESIDENT, MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC., NEW YORK, N. Y.—Resumed

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Stanley, did not Morgan Stanley & Co. sign a purchase contract on March 7, 1936, under which Morgan Stanley purchased severally $5,000,000 debentures from Shell at 97?

Mr. STANLEY. I assume that date is correct; around about that time; I accept the date.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Did you not also sign on or about the same date an agreement among underwriters?

Mr. STANLEY. Yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now, this agreement provided, did it not, that each of the underwriters might retain such portion of their respective purchases as the manager should determine?

Mr. STANLEY. I think that is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I am asking you a question about your underwriting agreement. I think I shall have to ask you to give me a more specific answer.

Mr. STANLEY. May I see the agreement, please?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. It is in evidence and was offered. You must have a copy of it with you, don't you?

Mr. JOHN M. YOUNG (Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc.) You said '36. didn't you?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I did speak of '36.

Mr. STANLEY. You said '38; this is '39.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Will the reporter repeat the last question?

(The reporter read the last preceding question.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Do you recall that?

Mr. STANLEY. That is true in case of the '39 agreement.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I was asking about the '36 agreement which you entered into.

Mr. STANLEY. Sometime ago. May I say, Mr. Chairman, while we are looking that up, I would like to comment on two things that came up in the testimony this morning, without attempting to refer to the testimony as a whole. There was some discussion as to the relative price that we said the company might issue loans to the public and the price at which they actually did make a loan to the Equitable Life in 1938. The actual difference between our opinion as to what they might have done publicly at that time and the price they obtained from the Equitable was about a half point net, $5\frac{1}{2}\%$ of a point, but of course you realize that the Equitable thing didn't have the advantage, if there are advantages, as there are in my opinion, of a public distribution.

The other matter I would like to refer to is also a matter of price. There is some question as to the price record of the issue which we made in July of the Shell debentures after they were offered to the public, and were not fully taken by the public, and Mr. Van der Woude and Mr. Duhig didn't have the records of the price action which we had. The bonds stabilized more or less the day after the offering around 96; they were offered at $97\frac{3}{4}$, and then went down to a price of about $94\frac{1}{2}$ the next month. Then after the war came they went down still further, as all other bonds did, too.

I only mention that because it was left sort of in the air this morning.

I will be glad to accept the statement as correct, Mr. Nehemkis.

THE OPERATIVE EFFECT OF THE 1936 DILLON, READ & CO. UNDERWRITING AGREEMENT

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Do you recall, Mr. Stanley, that that agreement which you entered into as a participant of the group authorized the managers to offer any debentures not so retained to the selling group?

Mr. STANLEY. Not so retained to the selling group, yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. In case the members of the selling group did not take up all of the debentures offered to them the underwriters agreed to be liable for any debentures not taken up in proportion to the amounts of their purchases not retained by them. That is to say, in proportion to the amounts of their purchases which were offered to the selling group members; do you recall that?

Mr. STANLEY. I do.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Morgan Stanley retained no part of its $5,000,000 purchase; is that correct?

Mr. STANLEY. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. In other words, its entire participation was offered to the selling group?

Mr. STANLEY. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. There remained, according to a Committee exhibit—and I must apologize, I do not have its number before me, but I shall supply it before the close of this hearing¹—$34,475,000 unsold debentures in the hands of the underwriting group, and in accordance with the Dillon, Read, Hayden, Stone underwriting agreement the several underwriters were required to take up the unsold debentures in proportion to the amount not retained by them for their own retailing. Consequently Mr. Stanley, Morgan Stanley & Co. was obligated, was it not, to take up $3,207,000 of these unsold debentures, or 65 percent of its $5,000,000 purchase?

Mr. STANLEY. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And is it not correct, Mr. Stanley, that Morgan Stanley realized a loss of $32,755 on its participation in this underwriting?

Mr. STANLEY. That is also correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And is it not also correct that this is the only loss ever realized by Morgan Stanley since the date of its organization?

Mr. STANLEY. I think it is.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Hall, I show you a letter from yourself to me under date of November 20, 1939. Will you be good enough to tell me whether this letter bears your signature and was in fact sent by you?

Mr. HALL. It is.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The letter and attached document identified by the witness is offered in evidence.

(The letter referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2014" and is included in the appendix on p. 12943.)

THE 1939 SHELL SYNDICATION

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Passing, now, Mr. Stanley, to the syndication of the 1939 issue, in arranging for the distribution of the $85,000,000 debentures did not Morgan, Stanley form a group of 85 underwriters, including yourself, of course?

Mr. STANLEY. They did.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And did not these underwriters severally agree, under date of July 17, to purchase from the company the specified amounts of debentures?

Mr. STANLEY. They did.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I show you a copy of an underwriting agreement with reference to this offering and ask you to tell me whether you identify this as a true and correct copy.

Mr. STANLEY. I do.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The copy identified by the witness is offered in evidence.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. It may be received.

(The agreement referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2015" and is included in the appendix on p. 12944.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The only one of the 11 principal underwriters whose participation in the 1936 issue had been $2,000,000 or more who was not included in the 1939 issue was Dillon, Read & Co. Is that correct, Mr. Stanley?

Mr. STANLEY. The question was?

(The question was read by the reporter.)

Mr. STANLEY. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Was not the inclusion of the other 10 principal underwriters due in large measure to their previous association with the company as principal underwriters?

Mr. STANLEY. It was; but they happen to be houses of very good standing and very good distributing and underwriting capacity, among the leading houses in the business, and who generally participated in the issues which we managed.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Stanley, what considerations in addition to historical relation to the business enter into the determination of what underwriters are included in a syndicate?

Mr. STANLEY. Well, that gets into the question of a group, of which there has been a great deal of discussion in these hearings, at least during the time when I was here a few weeks ago, as to what the group does, really. Various aspects of that I would like to comment on, but I won't try to take too much time. I can do this part of it very briefly and then perhaps come to the other.

First, I am not sure it has been very clear to the committee just what a group is. A group is an aggregation of people who buy the entire issue.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I am going to ask, if I may interrupt. I think my question was really a very simple one and possibly you did not quite understand what I meant. I don't want you to go into that line of testimony; it is not quite relevant at this point, Mr. Stanley. My question really was this: A manager, such as your firm, has certain considerations in mind when it selects other underwriters to join it in a syndicate. Now, you have already testified—and there has been a great deal of testimony here—that one of the considerations that any manager has to give is the historical relation of a house to a piece of business. Now, there are other considerations. Is not one such other consideration the financial strength of a house?

Mr. STANLEY. That is one.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And is not another consideration the distributing ability of a house?

Mr. STANLEY. In some cases.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And those three considerations, some weighing more heavily in certain instances, others less heavily in others, determine whether or not a house is or is not included in a syndicate?

Mr. STANLEY. There is more to it than that, Mr. Nehemkis, and I think you really have got to take a moment to let me try to state very briefly what the group does. A group is formed to purchase an issue and the purpose of that is to spread the commitment of the issue among a good many people, divide and insure against money commitment and to divide and insure against the money risk and the market changes, and thirdly, to get a back-log from some of these people of distributing ability.

Now, then, with that purpose in mind, you select people and the elements that Mr. Nehemkis mentioned are among the main ones. In addition to that there is the question of their standing, whether they do their business well or badly; they may have plenty of capital and not do it well, their judgment of markets and judgment of securities may not be the best; other elements, too, sometimes one thing and sometimes another.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. But substantially the three items which I asked you about are major considerations.

Mr. STANLEY. Well, the standing of the firm, whether they do their business well, was not mentioned.

FAMILIARITY OF MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INCORPORATED, WITH FINANCIAL CONDITION AND DISTRIBUTING ABILITY OF OTHER UNDERWRITERS IN SYNDICATE

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Is it not a fact, Mr. Stanley, that your firm was acquainted with the financial condition of all of the 84 underwriters who composed the syndicate?

Mr. STANLEY. I think to a greater or less degree. We knew more about some than we did about others. We try to keep as familiar as we can with their capitalization and their distributing ability.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Can you tell me briefly how this information is obtained?

Mr. STANLEY. Sometimes we ask them; sometimes they come in and tell us. They very often come in and tell us how their sales ability has changed or improved and try to put their best foot forward as showing themselves qualified to larger positions in good business if they can obtain it.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And this data concerning the financial position of underwriters is kept on file in your firm, changes made in the information from time to time, as the situations altered?

Mr. STANLEY. Well, it is really not kept on file. There is no real record of it. We know pretty well what these people' situation is and we make notes on their cards.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. On the performance record cards?

Mr. STANLEY. Yes; but it isn't made in all cases.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Does not your firm also keep itself informed of the distributing ability of the various underwriting firms and in particular the 84 in the Shell syndicate?

Mr. STANLEY. Well, I accept that; I would say we keep informed as far as we can, but I wouldn't limit it to the 84 in particular.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. But you did know the distributing ability of the 84 in this syndicate.

Mr. STANLEY. Yes; we thought so.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And generally you endeavor to keep yourselves informed of the distributing ability of other underwriters and dealers?

Mr. STANLEY. We do.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. With the exception of A. C. Allyn & Co., were not all of the firms selected by Morgan Stanley & Co.?

Mr. STANLEY. You mean in the $85,000,000 issue?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. In the $85,000,000 issue. We are addressing ourselves to that issue at this time.

Mr. STANLEY. That is hard to say. I think we had the ultimate responsibility, but there were various names of people that the company suggested to us. In the first place, we included all of the underwriters in the previous issue except 3—that is, there were more than 11, there were 29 or so: Dillon, Halsey Stuart, and Conrad. Bruce & Co., and we offered it to Dillon at the time, and they said they preferred not to have it offered to them, and we offered it to Halsey, Stuart at the same time.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. You say the company, meaning Shell, made certain suggestions as to the inclusion of underwriters, and one of those suggestions was A. C. Allyn, was it not?

Mr. HALL. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And in addition to A. C. Allyn & Co., were any other firms suggested by Shell?

Mr. STANLEY. There were several.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Can you give me the names of them?

Mr. HALL. I don't know that I can be very accurate in distinguishing, Mr. Nehemkis, because some of them are probably on the list anyway. I remember Lehman Bros. was one, Francis, Bro. & Co. of St. Louis was another; Kalman & Co. of St. Paul; Hayden Stone was mentioned; Reinholdt & Gardner was another, of St. Louis; Ferris & Hardgrove, of Seattle and Spokane; Smith, Moore & Co.; William R. Staats Co.—I remember them being mentioned. I can't say that there weren't others, but those I do remember.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. When you have an opportunity, would you be good enough to send me a statement, which I may incorporate in the record, of the names of the firms that were actually suggested by Shell?¹

Mr. STANLEY. Of course, it would be a matter of recollection on our part now.

Mr. HALL. I haven't any list of that kind.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Will you do the best you can?

Mr. HALL. Yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now the firms that appeared in the ultimate group are those firms which are generally included in the Morgan Stanley underwriting groups which it forms and manages, is that not correct, Mr. Stanley?

Mr. STANLEY. In general, yes; but there were some who I think we wouldn't ordinarily have in as important position as perhaps they were here. One reason was that this entire 29 underwriters, most of whom, if not all, I think we generally have as underwriters, had been in the previous issue and this is a refunding issue and those people were naturally in touch with the securities that were going to be sold, and they could perform a better service than people who were not in touch with those securities.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. But with the exception of those special cases, most of the members of this group generally appear in the groups organized and managed by Morgan Stanley?

Mr. STANLEY. I should think in general they have appeared; also others have appeared. There is no set list. All of these are very good people.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. In the 1936 Shell offering, do you recall, Mr. Stanley, that the underwriters contracted to take up proportionately an amount up to 14 percent of their participations in order to cover defaults by members of the group?

Mr. STANLEY. Yes; I do.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And do you recall that no such provision appears in the 1939 Morgan Stanley purchase contract?

Mr. STANLEY. Quite true.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. You have testified, Mr. Stanley, that in the offerings of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., your firm guarantees the several commitments of all of the other underwriters.² Do you recall your testimony on that subject?

Mr. STANLEY. I do.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I show you an excerpt from the contract with reference to the $22,250,000 Southern Bell Telephone offering 40-year 3 percent debentures, containing article III. Will you tell me if you recognize this to be a correct transcript of article III of that contract?

Mr. STANLEY. I am quite willing to accept your statement it is.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And you so identify it?

Mr. STANLEY. Yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The statement is offered in evidence, Mr. Chairman. (The transcript referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2016" and is included in the appendix on p. 12956.)

¹ Mr. Hall, under date of February 5, 1940, submitted the information requested. It is included in the appendix on p. 13020.

² Hearings, Part 23, pp. 11968, 11981.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. In the Shell offering, however, Morgan Stanley did not guarantee the commitments of the other underwriters?

Mr. STANLEY. That is true.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Did any of the 84 underwriters participate with Morgan Stanley & Co. in discussions with Shell relative to terms, price?

Mr. STANLEY. No; I think not; but, of course, our discussions with them on behalf of the underwriters represented the combined views, the consensus of the views of major underwriters.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Did any of the other 84 underwriters discuss with Morgan Stanley price and terms of the proposed issue?

Mr. STANLEY. Oh, yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. So that your answer to my previous question is "no," and your answer to the last question is "yes," is that correct, sir?

Mr. STANLEY. That is correct.

ARTICLE II AND IV OF THE MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INC., UNDERWRITING AGREEMENT

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The underwriting agreement¹ contains a provision, being article II, which gives Morgan Stanley & Co. the right—to reserve for sale and to sell on our behalf any or all of such debentures to dealers—on such amounts as you shall in your discretion determine. Do you recall that provision, Mr. Stanley?

Mr. STANLEY. I do.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. This provision is usual and customary in agreements among underwriters, is it not?

Mr. STANLEY. Well, there are various kinds of contracts. I am not sure that I would characterize it as usual and customary. It is in certain types of business, and there are various other forms. I think, in general, that particular clause is customary today, although it wasn't a few years ago.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. If I understand you correctly, your answer is that, in general, subject, of course, to variations in draftsmanship, that kind of clause appears in most underwriting agreements, is that true?

Mr. STANLEY. In the case of contracts which have a several undertaking instead of a joint undertaking.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now, the underwriting agreement¹ contains another provision, article IV, which provides that "as compensation for your service, we agree," that is to say the underwriters, "to pay you," Morgan Stanley, "on the closing day an amount equal to one-fourth percent of the principal amount." Do you recall that provision, sir?

Mr. STANLEY. I do.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And that provision appears in all underwriting agreements of Morgan Stanley, does it not?

Mr. STANLEY. A provision for payment to the manager appears in contracts, excepting when they are subunderwriting contracts. The amount of compensation varies a great deal.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. But it is usually one-fourth percent of the principal amount, isn't it?

Mr. STANLEY. It is one-fourth to three-eighths on long-term or medium-length issues. It may be less on shorter issues.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And it is that one-fourth percent which has given rise to the jingle—

With Bells on their fingers
And Shells on their toes,
A quarter to Morgan
However she goes.

Mr. STANLEY. I really wouldn't know.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. You have never heard that jingle?

Mr. STANLEY. No.

Mr. HENDERSON. That was in Fortune,¹ wasn't it, in connection with an article on investment banking?

Mr. STANLEY. It is very interesting.

You understood my reference to subunderwriting agreements which are not possible under the rules and opinion of the S. E. C., which to my mind is the best way of doing underwriting. They permitted us to do it once, in the case of Consolidated Edison of New York, then they felt it wasn't strictly in accordance with their rules and we haven't done it since. But it is done in railroad issues.

ARTICLE VIII OF THE MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INCORPORATED, UNDERWRITING AGREEMENT

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I do follow you. The underwriting agreement on the Shell offering further provides, does it not, Mr. Stanley, that any debentures reserved for sale to dealers but not purchased by them should be taken up by the underwriters as nearly as practicable in proportion to the principal amount of debentures which each severally has agreed to purchase from the company?

Mr. STANLEY. It does.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And is that not a provision taken from Article VIII of the underwriting agreement?²

Mr. STANLEY. It is.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now this provision is contained in the underwriting agreements in all issues managed by Morgan Stanley & Co., is it not?

Mr. STANLEY. Well, that or a similar agreement, excepting in subunderwriting.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I am going to repeat my question because I think you can give me a more specific answer. Is not that provision contained in the underwriting agreement in all issues managed by Morgan Stanley & Co.?

Mr. STANLEY. It wouldn't be in subunderwriting. By provision, if you mean that method of determination——

Mr. NEHEMKIS (interposing). That is correct.

Mr. STANLEY. It is general in our contract, except in subunderwriting.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Thank you, sir. Now, the underwriting agreement customarily used by all other houses provides for the reallocation of unsold bonds in proportion to the amount contributed to the selling group, is that not correct, Mr. Stanley?

Mr. STANLEY. Not all contracts of all other houses by any means. I am afraid this gets into technicalities.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. That is exactly what this hearing is devoted to, the technicalities of underwriting, so feel free to be technical.

Mr. STANLEY. I will try not to be, but—

Mr. NEHEMKIS. (interposing). Now, let me get your answer. Did I understand you to say that you didn't think that underwriting agreements customarily used by all other houses provided other than article VIII of the Morgan Stanley agreement?

Mr. STANLEY. No; I think they do not; some do and some do not.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Will you tell me which houses that you are familiar with provide as does article VIII of the Morgan Stanley agreement?

Mr. STANLEY. Well, several or most of the other houses, large houses, have a different arrangement than this in the case of registered corporate bond issues. Those same houses who are in the municipal business or the equipment trust business, have contracts covering very large amounts of such securities, perhaps larger than their corporates in some cases, which has an arrangement which has the same effect as this.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Speaking, however, of corporate bond issues, do you know of any house other than yours which at the present time uses a provision comparable to article VIII?

Mr. STANLEY. In the case of registered corporate bonds I do not, except in the case of subunderwriting.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Stanley, you are somewhat elusive this afternoon.

Mr. STANLEY. No, Mr. Nehemkis.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I want to get your answers as they come. Do I understand you correctly, sir, to have said that you agreed with my first statement that there was no other underwriting house today which, on corporate bond issues, follows substantially the provision of article VIII of Morgan Stanley's underwriting agreement?

Mr. STANLEY. You haven't stated your question in the same way you did before, Mr. Nehemkis.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. That was a recapitulation of what I thought your answer was. If I have not understood it correctly, you repeat it.

Mr. STANLEY. I think that this method of taking unsold bonds that have been offered to the selling group—and I should like to explain to the committee what a selling group is, unless that is perfectly clear.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Stanley, I want you to give me an answer to my question.

Mr. STANLEY. Mr. Nehemkis, I am trying to.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Please proceed.

Mr. STANLEY. You can't tell what bonds come back from a selling group unless you know what a selling group is.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I think I put to you a straightforward question and I want you to give me a straightforward answer. I want to know to the best of your knowledge—consult your associates if necessary—whether you know of any other American investment banking house which today uses in its underwriting agreements a provision comparable to article VIII of the Morgan Stanley underwriting agreement. In my humble judgment, that question lends itself to a simple answer.

Mr. STANLEY. You have put your question still a third way.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I am trying to make it easy for you.

Mr. STANLEY. I have answered that question. In the case of municipals—

Mr. NEHEMKIS (interposing). Corporate issues—we are addressing ourselves to corporate issues.

Mr. STANLEY. Registered corporate issues, because railroads are corporate issues, too.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Registered corporate issues.

Mr. STANLEY. That is simple. I don't know of any other.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Thank you very much, sir.

Mr. Chairman, I should like to offer in evidence some research undertaken by members of my staff, being a study of 24 underwriting agreements by leading investment banking houses of this country. The reason I was anxious to get Mr. Stanley's answer was because, having studied these agreements, we didn't find anything comparable to article VIII. I have here the actual agreements, and here, sir, excerpts together with an index for the reporter, to those excerpts. May I request that the agreements themselves be placed on file with the committee so that those who may in the future wish to study them will have that opportunity, and that the excerpts be spread on the record of the committee. I now offer them to you, sir.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. The excerpts may be admitted for the record and the balance of these exhibits will be filed.

(The underwriting agreements referred to were marked "Exhibits Nos. 2017 to 2040" and are on file with the committee. The excerpts accompanying each agreement were numbered accordingly and are included in the appendix on pp. 12957-12965.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Stanley, under article II of the underwriting agreement (referring to "Exhibit No. 2015") does not Morgan Stanley reserve out of the amount purchased by each underwriter a portion of such participation for offering to the dealers, that is the selling group?

Mr. STANLEY. Reserve bonds; that is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And the balance is reserved for the retail distribution of the underwriter; is that correct, sir?

Mr. STANLEY. Yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. In the Shell underwriting, was not $28,950,000 debentures reserved for offerings to the selling group?

Mr. STANLEY. I accept that figure, subject to check.

Mr. HALL. Would you mind repeating it?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The figure is $28,950,000 debentures reserved for offering to the selling group.

OVEROFFERING TO SELLING GROUP

Mr. HALL. I have a memorandum here which shows the amount retained by underwriters for retail sale was $56,050,000 and the difference would be the amount reserved for offering by the selling group.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. So the difference would be the figure I first mentioned, namely, $28,950,000; right?

Mr. HALL. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And $56,050,000 were reserved for retailing by the underwriters, Mr. Stanley?

Mr. STANLEY. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. However, the amount actually offered to the selling group was $31,250,000, or $2,300,000 in excess of the amount reserved for the selling group; is that correct, sir?

Mr. STANLEY. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Will you be good enough to explain the reason for this overoffering to the selling group?

Mr. STANLEY. Well, it is simply an overallotment.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. What is the purpose of the overallotment? Is it customary to overoffer to the selling group in your syndications?

Mr. STANLEY. I don't know whether it is customary. It is done quite often. Mr. Hall can say.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Hall, suppose I address the question to you. Can you tell me roughly in how many recent offerings by Morgan Stanley you have overoffered to the selling group?

Mr. HALL. I don't know that I could tell you. I know in three of the last four: Louisville & Nashville, Southern Bell, and Shell Oil, and I am not sure whether we did it on the issue of Consumers Power.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. What is the purpose of overoffering to the selling group?

Mr. HALL. In offering a bond issue, Mr. Nehemkis, it is a matter of merchandising a large amount of bonds throughout the country, and those bonds are offered by the underwriters to hundreds of dealers situated in various States throughout the Nation, who in turn reoffer the bonds to their clients. It may very well be that on an issue as large as one of $85,000,000, that the manager may miscalculate the amount of bonds which might be adapted to any particular market or any particular State, and based entirely on his judgment and experience in selling bonds, he may or may not overallot. If he does overallot it is in the expectation, or I might put it, it is a possible thought in his mind that in some cases bonds will be declined, and he is hopeful that in his overallotment he will come close to gaging what that declination will amount to. In this particular issue we overallotted as you mention, something like $2,300,000 bonds and as matter of fact, the amount declined was $9,111,000.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. So that the purpose in the Shell Union offering at least in overallotment was because Morgan Stanley had pretty strong intimations that there were going to be heavy declinations by the dealers; is that not correct, sir?

Mr. HALL. I can't give an answer "Yes" or "No" to the question and I would like to explain, if I may.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Please proceed.

Mr. HALL. The contract to purchase these bonds from the company, which was signed by the various underwriters, was signed on Monday, July 17, with the expectation that the bonds would be reoffered to the public on Wednesday, July 19. It is true that from the time we signed that contract, namely Monday morning, July 17, and the time of the actual offering on July 19, in our judgment, those who were charged with the responsibility of distributing that issue, we had reason to believe that it would be a difficult selling proposition, and based on that we did overallot in the expectation there would be some declination.

Mr. STANLEY. May I add that I wasn't in New York at the time, Mr. Nehemkis, at the time the deal was signed up on Monday. It is my information from Mr. Hall that the underwriters as a group had every expectation that the issue would be a complete success at the price it was to be offered. It cooled off in the next couple of days; similar bonds went off, like Standard of New Jersey and Texas, and things of that kind, a quarter or half a point, but there has been a lot of talk about pricing in these hearings and it is an awfully wise man that can gage a price to a quarter or half point. You have bonds on the New York Stock Exchange that fluctuate a point a day, but whatever the reasons for the decline in the market, and it wasn't really so much a matter of material decline of the market, as I am informed—I was away at the time—but the feeling became prevalent that the market was very "toppy." This was really about the high point of the bond market, and things were very sensitive; more a matter of feeling that affected marketability than actual change of price.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Chairman, may it please the committee, I desire to offer in evidence at this time the list containing the amount reserved to the underwriters. Before doing so I am going to ask Mr. Hall to just glance at this, because this is information which was furnished by Morgan, Stanley to the Securities and Exchange Commission in connection with the issue we are now discussing.

Mr. HALL. There are things I don't remember. I am sure if you say it is, it is all right.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. It may be received.

(The document referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2041" and is included in the appendix on p. 12965.)

CRITERIA USED IN DETERMINING THE AMOUNTS RESERVED FOR UNDERWRITERS

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Stanley, how do you determine the amounts of reservations for underwriters?

Mr. STANLEY. Well, it comes from experience and knowledge of their relative ability in distribution, and their capital and their general performance record in business over a period of time.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Due to the noise in the room, I didn't get your answer on that. Could I ask you to repeat it?

Mr. STANLEY. Could the reporter read it?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Will the reporter please read the preceding question and answer?

(Question and answer read by reporter.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Do you consult with the individual underwriters in making up their reservations?

Mr. STANLEY. Perhaps I didn't get the point of your previous question completely. Is the question of the amount of reserve or their original underwriting commitment?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Amount reserved.

Mr. STANLEY. The same answer applies to that, plus some additional things; for example, Lee Higginson sold a good many bonds previously in Shell issues and had a clientele that was familiar with Shell bonds, and they would probably receive more in this issue than some other issue.

In answer to your last question, we do consult with them usually about what they would like to sell.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Are there any customary percentages generally reserved for the various underwriters?

Mr. STANLEY. Well, no customary percentages over a period of time. It may work out more or less on the average. There are bound to be cases where it is quite out of line with the average.

Mr. HENDERSON. May I ask a question? In case of overallotment in the market, you are short that many bonds, aren't you?

Mr. HALL. That is correct.

Mr. HENDERSON. Is it usual practice to get the underwriters to give up on the basis of any fixed percent interest?

Mr. HALL. You are speaking, if you do have a shortage of percentage?

Mr. HENDERSON. Yes.

Mr. HALL. That might work in different ways, depending upon the amount of that shortage. In general, if you had a large shortage, it would probably have been established because the overallotment was as I say, 100 percent taken. The underwriters also sold their bonds and you absorb whatever losses there are.

Mr. HENDERSON. You are stabilizing capital. Technically you would be short?

Mr. HALL. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Mathers, where did you obtain the documents you have?

Mr. LLOYD MATHERS (Securities & Exchange Commission). From Halsey, Stuart & Co.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. New York or Chicago?

Mr. MATHERS. New York.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Were they furnished to you by an official of that organization?

Mr. MATHERS. They were.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And you recognize them as documents that are correct?

Mr. MATHERS. Yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Thank you, sir.

As indicative, Mr. Chairman, of the general practice we have been discussing for whatever light may be thrown on the subject, I wish to read and then offer in evidence the documents and files as identified by Mr. Mathers.

This is a telegram over the private wire of Halsey, Stuart to their New York office to Carlson, August 29, 1938 [reading "Exhibit No. 2042-1"]:

Would appreciate if you can find out amount set aside for special sales and also for selling groups in following deals: U. S. Steel, Philadelphia Elec. Union Elec. of Mo., Northern States Pr., 160 million A. T. & T., and 60 million Consolidated Edison.

(Signed) Hough.

And then Carlson wires back to Hough [reading "Exhibit No. 2042-2"]:

Your 3 will check around and advise—

And having checked around, Carlson now proceeds, August 30, 1938, to advise Hough as follows [reading "Exhibit No. 2042-3"]:

Difficult get full story Morgan deals. All they tell an underwriter is what he gives up himself. Had understood this to be case and have had verified by several people including 1st Boston. Morgan Stanley does not arrange special sales in sense of directing underwriters give up certain amounts to certain institutions. They sometimes say at underwriters meetings who are interested and who they would like to see favored with bonds but without designating amounts. Off the record there is gossip about their making more definite suggestions in special cases of underwriters in hock. As for dealer giveups their treatment of underwriters varies greatly. Shields & Graham Parsons say generally get more in SG than in underwriting. Blair say they generally average about 50%. Stanton 1st Boston guesses 40-50% to dealers but purely guess. Herzog at Shields guesses 40% to dealers average large issue. Waiting info from Blair & Dillon other issues.

And then, having further looked around, Carlson, on August 31, 1938, again advises Hough [reading "Exhibit No. 2042-4"]:

Byth says giveups by them to SG on Morgan Stanley deals run from 45% up.

I offer in evidence the documents from which I have read.

(The telegrams referred to were marked "Exhibits Nos. 2042-1 to 2042-5" and appear in full in the text, except for "Exhibit No. 2042-5," which is included in the appendix on p. 12966.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. On the morning of July 1, 1939, the individual underwriters were notified as to the amounts of their purchase reserved for offering to dealers and the amounts reserved for their own retail distribution, were they not, Mr. Stanley?

Mr. STANLEY. Yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I wonder if you could briefly describe to the committee the method by which notification is effected, or perhaps you would like Mr. Hall to do it, since he is more familiar with it. Describe the telegraphic procedure, please, if you will.

NOTIFICATION TO UNDERWRITERS RELATING TO AMOUNTS OF DEBENTURES
RESERVED FOR OFFERING TO DEALERS AND FOR THEIR OWN RETAIL DISTRIBUTION

Mr. HALL. The procedure is briefly as follows: Having planned, as in this case, to sell the issue on Wednesday morning, the night previous, Tuesday night, telegrams were sent to several hundred dealers throughout the country which I mentioned before, who are in the selling group, telling them the amount of bonds which they are offered, and at the same time telegrams are sent to the underwriters telling them the amount of bonds which they in turn may retain for retail distribution.

It is a brief telegram referring to our previous selling group and underwriting letters and saying that the amount that they may retain is blank principal amount.

Mr. STANLEY. I would like to say a word as to why we do that and why we don't tell these underwriters ahead of time what they shall have for selling purposes. We do it to put everybody on the same basis, make it even as to what they know they have to sell the big fellow and the little fellow over the country; and the original reason why we reserve the right and don't have a definite formula is that we think since we are not in the retail selling at all and since we don't compete from a sales point of view with any of our co-underwriters that we are in a better position to determine for the good of the deal what the relative amounts of these different people should have than if we left it to them. Because one fellow might want a lot and another fellow might not. In our opinion, when we started in business it was the custom of the retailing houses in the street to retain too much for themselves and to give too little to the selling group around the country. We wanted to get wider distribution, so we established this method of reserving this right.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. At the time you determined these reservations, Mr. Hall, you had already received the reaction from prospective underwriters and large buyers, which indicated that the offering might not be entirely successful. Is that not correct?

Mr. HALL. There again I would like to explain, if I may, Mr. Nehemkis, it is customary when an issue is first filed in registration in the S. E. C. that publicity is given to that fact. The various services, like Moody's, Poor's, send that information throughout the country, plus the fact that the newspapers also publish the information that a certain issue has been filed in the Securities and Exchange Commission. It has become the custom of the various dealers and underwriters throughout the country when they receive that information, to, I think, sometimes as a matter of form, in most cases because they don't even know what the price or terms are, but nevertheless, they do communicate with the house that they believe and understand is going to be the manager.

Now, to be specific, in answering your question, we do not contact the big institutions to ask them what amount they would take or what price they would pay, nor do we contact the dealers throughout the country. I think it is fair to say it rather works, as far as the dealers throughout the country are concerned, the other way, that they make application to us, but then, too, we can't give that too much importance, because it gets to be a matter of form with most of them, and as our record will show many a time we have an application to be included, we do include them and they decline. So we have to take and put our own valuation on how real the inquiry is depending on the amount of the issue, price, and so forth. But I want to make quite clear to you that when we sign a contract, let's say on this Monday to sell on Wednesday, we don't know whether the large institutions are going to buy or not. Sometimes we do, but in a great many cases we don't.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Isn't it a fact, Mr. Hall, that on July 13, you had received intimations from underwriters and prospective large buyers which should have led you to believe, and which in fact did lead you to believe, that the issue was not going to be entirely successful?

Mr. HALL. No, sir. On July 13, which is the date you gave, maybe you mean another date, as I recall that was the date when I told Mr. van der Woude that we could probably not do a price above 97½. At that time we had every reason to believe that the issue could be successfully done at that price.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. There is in evidence, it was offered this morning, a cablegram from Mr. van der Woude to Vanwood at London, dated July 13, 1939, in which Mr. van der Woude said as follows [reading from "Exhibit No. 2009"]:

Morgan Stanley discussed with us today—

Namely, July 13—

final terms based on present market conditions and general reaction they received from underwriters and prospective large buyers. Response from latter has been disappointing and contrary to expectations entertained by Morgan Stanley.

Mr. HALL. Well, I don't think that that cable is contrary to what I said, that we indicated that we could not do a price of 98½, but we could do a price of 97½.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now, as a result of these intimations were the reservations, Mr. Stanley, larger than they would have been had the success of the issue appeared entirely assured?

Mr. STANLEY. I would like to ask Mr. Hall or Mr. Young to answer that question. I was away.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. You were away, I'm sorry. Did you get my question, Mr. Hall?

Mr. HALL. I did. I would say, and I haven't made comparative figures to answer your question, but just judging from what our general policy is, as far as the underwriters were concerned, we did not allow them to reserve for retail sales on Wednesday any amounts larger than would have been the normal case had we had indications that maybe the issue was going to be highly successful. In other words, we did not weight them with larger amounts of bonds because of any information we had received between the time of the signing of the contract and the time of the original offering.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now, of the $31,250,000 debentures offered to the selling group, $22,139,000 were accepted by the selling group. Is that not correct, Mr. Hall?

Mr. HALL. Could I have the question repeated? I will have to subtract here to get it.

(The question was read by the stenographer.)

Mr. HALL. Again I am not quibbling in answering the question, but take your figure of $31,250,000 reserved for the selling group, of that amount $9,111,000 was declined, but then that would give my figure $22,139,000. On the other hand, selling group members came back on the offering day and bought additional debentures amounting to $940,000, and an underwriter as a dealer purchased an additional $25,000, making the total amount which they took, but not necessarily which they retained, $23,079,000. In addition, however, several underwriters retained $19,000 additional debentures, or a total of $23,123,000.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I think we both came out with the same results, if I included in my question that amount.

Now, the underwriters were, therefore, obligated to take up the $5,827,000 of unsold debentures, were they not?

Mr. HALL. That is correct.

OPERATIVE EFFECT OF ARTICLE VIII

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now, under the terms of the agreement among underwriters, they were obligated to take back these unsold debentures in proportion to their original purchases. Is that correct?

Mr. HALL. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Therefore, each underwriter was required to take an amount of these unsold debentures equal to approximately 6.9 percent of his purchase, that is to say, the proportion which $5,827,000 bears to $85,000,000?

Mr. HALL. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. For 37 of the underwriters, did not Morgan Stanley reserve for their own retail distribution the full amounts of their original purchases? You can accept my figures or check it.

Mr. HALL. Mr. Nehemkis, I am not at all trying to quarrel with you, I just want to be completely accurately responsive to your question. I am perfectly willing to take your figures if they are figures we have supplied or figures that you have gotten.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Anything I say in the way of arithmetic is subject to your future confirmation.

Mr. HALL. I am perfectly delighted to take your figures.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I will repeat the question so we can follow it clearly as we go through these higher metaphysics. For 37 of the underwriters, Morgan Stanley reserved for their own retail distribution the full amounts of their original purchases.

Mr. HALL. I am willing to accept your figures.

Mr. STANLEY. But those were for their respective sales.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. That is right; each of these 37 underwriters was required to take up his proportion of unsold debentures despite the fact that he had already taken down for retail distribution 100 percent of his original purchase. Correct?

Mr. HALL. That is correct. I should like to amplify it, but I shall stick to the question.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. You can make a statement later if you so desire. Each of these 37 underwriters were, therefore, required to take up a total of 106.9 percent of his original purchase.

Mr. HALL. I accept your figures.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. For the sake of illustration, so that you can follow me very specifically, let's turn to the case of The Wisconsin Co. I just happened to pick that because I like the name Wisconsin; it has no significance at all.

Mr. HALL. We like the firm, too.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Then we ought to get through this beautifully. The Wisconsin Co. underwrote $750,000 of the debentures. Do you recall that?

Mr. HALL. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now, Morgan Stanley reserved to The Wisconsin Co. for its retail distribution all of this $750,000 of debentures which it had underwritten. Do you recall that, sir?

Mr. HALL. No; but I am willing to accept your figures.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Morgan Stanley, therefore, determined that The Wisconsin Co. was to take down its entire underwriting commitment. Is that correct, sir?

Mr. HALL. You just happened to have picked one name I remember. I won't promise I can remember any other, but I remember they were anxious to get that full amount and had asked for it.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And they did take down their entire underwriting commitments?

Mr. HALL. They did, and asked for additional bonds.

Mr. HENDERSON. That means some of the 37 underwriters for whom you reserved their entire participation might not have asked for it.

Mr. HALL. It might have been, Mr. Henderson, but generally speaking, most of the people who sign the underwriting contract give indication of what they would like to have in the selling.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Under the terms of article VIII of the agreement among underwriters,¹ The Wisconsin Co., although it had already taken down all the debentures was, nevertheless, obligated to take down its proportion of any debenture remaining unsold in the selling group. Is that not correct, Mr. Hall?

Mr. HALL. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. In other words, The Wisconsin Co. was, therefore, obligated, under the terms of article VIII, to take 75/8500 of $28,-950,000 or $255,000 debentures. Is that correct?

Mr. HALL. Only through their own election. If they had said they wished to take no bonds and wished to remain as an underwriter, they would have been in just the position Morgan Stanley was in not retaining bonds for sale.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Do you happen to know whether my figures are correct on that?

Mr. HALL. I have some figures here I could follow if you didn't put it in fractions, the actual number of bonds.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Young, do you want to follow this?

Mr. YOUNG. No; I think you are talking about two different things. They took up 51 additional bonds under the terms.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. That is right. The dealers and underwriters took up for retail $12,123,000 debentures. Only $5,827,000 remained to be distributed under the terms of article VII. Is that correct?

Mr. HALL. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. You do not know at this particular moment whether it is correct that The Wisconsin Co. was obligated, under article VIII to take up, in addition to the 100 percent they took down under the underwriting commitment, the additional $255,000 debentures?

Mr. HALL. That is incorrect.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. What is the actual amount?

Mr. HALL. $51,000.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. $51,000 in addition to the amount retailed for sales?

Mr. HALL. Yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. In addition, The Wisconsin Co. was obligated for 75/8500 of $5,827,000, being the unsold bonds, or $51,750 additional bonds. Is that correct, Mr. Hall?

Mr. HALL. I arrive at the figure $51,000 that they did take in addition. That is correct.

POSITION OF MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED UNDER ARTICLE VIII

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Suppose we turn now to Morgan Stanley's position under article VIII of the underwriting agreement.² Morgan Stanley does not have any retail organization. That is correct, isn't it?

Mr. HALL. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Hence it reserves no debentures for itself?

Mr. HALL. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Morgan Stanley's original purchase was $10,-000,000, was it not?

Mr. HALL. It was.

² Idem.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Whereas upon the formation of the selling group, The Wisconsin Co. became obligated to take an additional 76/8500 of the $28,950,000 debentures reserved by Morgan Stanley for the selling group?

Mr. HALL. Couldn't we keep saying 51 bonds, which I can follow! I don't understand the fractions. We will admit and you will admit 51.

Mr. YOUNG. The other figure is not right.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Do you want to take a slide rule and figure that out!

Mr. YOUNG. I have the figures here. It is $750,000 over $85,000,000 times $5,000,000-odd.

You can ask Mr. Ryshpan to multiply it out and get a 51.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. That is what I am speaking of. That is the result of his mathematics.

So Morgan Stanley's liability was reduced to 10/8500 of $28,950,000 or approximately $3,600,000. Do you follow me on that figure!

Mr. STANLEY. You misstated yourself, I think. You said 10/85ths; it isn't 10/85ths.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I will try to repeat it, that Morgan, Stanley's liability was reduced to 10/8500 of $28,950,000, or to approximately $3,600,000.

Mr. HALL. I just can't follow his figures. I can say to you that the amount of debentures that Morgan, Stanley had to take up was the amount of their liability, $691,000.

UNDERWRITING AGREEMENT PROVISIONS WITH REFERENCE TO UNSOLD DEBENTURES IN 1936 DILLON, READ & CO. AGREEMENT COMPARED WITH THE 1930 MORGAN STANLEY & CO. AGREEMENT

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now the debentures left for reallocation under article VIII was $5,827,000?

Mr. STANLEY. That is right.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. As you have just indicated, Morgan Stanley & Co. was required to take up only $691,000 debentures, or 6.9 percent of their original commitment. Is that not correct, Mr. Hall?

Mr. HALL. I will take your figures.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now, the more customary provision as regards unsold debentures is that employed in the 1936 issue, managed by Dillon, Read & Co., and Hayden, Stone & Co.,¹ and so the evidence apparently indicates, as you will recall, those underwriting agreements which I offered?²

Mr. STANLEY. Well, but that gets into a different idea back of the business, Mr. Nehemkis.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Just a moment. Let's follow this through; and as I have indicated, if you, Mr. Hall, or Mr. Young want to make a general statement at the end, you know you are perfectly free and at liberty to do so. Now, under this provision that we have been discussing, if an underwriter had taken down the full amount of his reservation—I beg your pardon, under the Dillon, Read provision that you signed in 1936, if an underwriter had taken down the full amount of his reservation, was he not relieved of any further liability for debentures not taken by the selling group? Do you recall that, Mr. Hall?

Mr. HALL. I believe that is correct.

² Exhibits Nos. 2017-2040.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And under this provision Morgan Stanley & Co.'s liability for debentures not taken by the selling group would have been in proportion to the amount reserved for the selling group rather than to the amount of its purchase?

Mr. HALL. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Morgan Stanley would thus have been obligated to take up the proportion that their $10,000,000 debentures bore to the total of $28,950,000 reserved to the selling group; is that correct?

Mr. HALL. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now, under the Dillon, Read underwriting agreement, Morgan Stanley would have been obligated to take up roughly a third, or about $1,000,000. Would you accept that?

Mr. HALL. I accept it.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. But under your own underwriting agreement you were required to take up only $691,000 debentures?

Mr. HALL. That figure is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now, isn't the effect of the Morgan Stanley agreement to shift the major portion of Morgan Stanley's underwriting liability to the other members of the group?

Mr. STANLEY. Well, Mr. Nehemkis, you could perhaps put it that way, but that isn't quite the picture. The reason that these two different methods of taking bonds back exist is because different people have a different point of view about the business.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I want you to explain that; but what is the answer to my question?

Mr. STANLEY. These people take back more bonds under our method because they choose to act as sellers.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. That isn't my question, Mr. Stanley.

Mr. STANLEY. It is apropos, I think, to your question, Mr. Nehemkis. We are not sellers; these other people that sell bonds, other firms get paid and expect to make a profit by so doing. We do not let them reduce their liability in the whole account just because they happen to have sold some bonds and have made money by doing it. There are two functions; one is underwriting and one is selling, and the reason it works this way in the case of people who do both things, is they combine both functions, and we don't think a seller is an underwriter as we are.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. What is the answer to my question, Mr. Stanley? Is not the effect of article VIII of the Morgan Stanley underwriting agreement to shift the major portion of Morgan Stanley's underwriting liability to the other members of the underwriting group?

Mr. STANLEY. I wouldn't think so, Mr. Nehemkis. There isn't any shift. The original pro rata responsibility and liability in the account is the proportion to the amounts that people originally bought. We bought $10,000,000; somebody else bought five. We maintain those relative liabilities, so long as there are any unsold bonds on that basis. That is the base they started on; that is the base they keep on.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now do you know, Mr. Hall, if there have been any instances where underwriters when called upon to take up unsold debentures complained of the basis of allotment?

Mr. HALL. They never have to my knowledge, Mr. Nehemkis, in our business.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Are you, Mr. Stanley, Mr. Young, all in agreement about the desirability of article VIII?

Mr. STANLEY. I am, and that is one of the things that I have been attempting to refer to very briefly, because——

Mr. NEHEMKIS. You agree with Mr. Hall and Mr. Young about its desirability?

Mr. STANLEY. This method results in obtaining the best distribution.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. What is your answer to that?

Mr. HALL. I believe it is the same.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Haven't you at times had philosophical discussion between yourselves as to the undesirability of this provision?

Mr. STANLEY. We have had discussions as to whether this is the best method or not, and we have agreed it is.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I beg pardon?

Mr. STANLEY. We have had discussions as to whether this is the best method or not, and we have agreed it is. We know other people change their contract; we have changed our contract.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now let me ask you this question, Mr. Stanley. Are you unaware that there have been complaints made about the inequity, shall I say, of article VIII?

Mr. STANLEY. Well, I think I have heard more complaints about it since this investigation started and through the investigators than I have ever heard before, but I never have had anybody speak to me since we have been in business, complaining about this.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. You mean that no one formally or informally said to you, if you will permit me to say this, "Harold, now seriously speaking, don't you think you ought to get rid of that article VIII?"

Mr. STANLEY. No dealer has ever said that, to my recollection.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And, Mr. Hall, you have never received any intimation of dissatisfaction with article VIII?

Mr. HALL. I have never had any of the underwriters speak to me directly and say that they disapproved of this form of contract which Morgan Stanley had.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. What is your experience, Mr. Young?

Mr. YOUNG. No one has ever talked to me criticizing it or complaining about it; they have discussed it.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. They have discussed it, and what was the nature of their discussions with you?

Mr. YOUNG. They wanted to know how it worked.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Haven't you in connection with some of those discussions, Mr. Young, occasionally had someone who called up and said, "Mr. Young, what does this mean? I suddenly find I am stocked with some unsold debentures. I took down everything for which my underwriting commitment called," and what did you say under those circumstances?

Mr. YOUNG. They have never said it quite that way. They wanted to know how the contract worked; they had the contract. Some of these people had not been underwriters before; they had never figured it out.

Mr. STANLEY. It is all in the contract.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Quite. It is all there. It is in evidence, too.

Mr. STANLEY. But that isn't the point. It is in the contract, every fellow signs and reads, and the difference is simply the difference between a joint liability account and several sell-out account, two different kinds of accounts.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The only alternative, Mr. Stanley, that an underwriter has to not accepting the Morgan Stanley underwriting agreement is to stay out of the Morgan Stanley syndicate, is that not correct?

Mr. STANLEY. Well, he can come in and he has to accept the contract if he comes into our business, but he can avoid the situation that you refer to where he sells and doesn't reduce his liability by his sales. By not being a seller, the same as we, his liability in the total stays just the same as in the other form of account.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. In other words, if an underwriter wants to come in he has to take article VIII? If he doesn't want to take article VIII he doesn't come into the syndicate?

Mr. STANLEY. That is clear enough. I don't see that that means much of anything.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Let's see if it doesn't; that means that if he doesn't like article VIII and doesn't sign this underwriting agreement that he is deprived of the opportunity of participating in the underwriting of the bulk of the American high-grade bond issues. does it not, Mr. Stanley?

Mr. STANLEY. I don't know what you mean by the bulk of the American high-grade bond issues. I would like to accept the compliment.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Didn't we have here a couple of weeks ago these great big sheets spread out all over us, showing the underwritings managed by your firm?¹

Mr. STANLEY. But that is not the bulk; we had a certain amount of the business, but it wasn't the bulk of the business.

PURCHASES FOR STABILIZATION

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Morgan Stanley is also empowered by its underwriting agreement to make purchases and sales in the market for the account of the group for stabilizing purposes, Mr. Hall?

Mr. HALL. That is correct.

Mr. STANLEY. As is usual.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Did not Morgan Stanley and Co. purchase $592,000 debentures between July 19 and July 25, 1939.

Mr. HALL. Five hundred thousand; I haven't the exact figure.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And did it not sell $48,000, leaving this account long $554,000 on or about July 25?

Mr. HALL. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And on July 25 this account was terminated, was it not, by selling these \$554,000 debentures to Morgan Stanley at 97 $\frac{1}{4}$ which was approximately the cost?

Mr. HALL. Ninety-seven and a quarter is the price. I won't quibble, that is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now these $554,000 debentures could, under the terms of the underwriting agreement, have been delivered to the various underwriters in proportion to their purchases from the company, but this was not done, is that correct?

Mr. HALL. They were not distributed.

¹ Referring to "Exhibits Nos. 1762 and 1763."

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Would you enlighten me as to why this was not done?

Mr. HALL. At the time that that account was terminated, we called the trading account; there were as you say $554,000 principal amount of debentures in that account. If we had distributed the bonds as you indicate might have been done, it would have meant distributing this $554,000 bonds among 85 underwriters throughout the country, and in our judgment we felt that in the interests of the account, knowing as we did that some of the underwriters still had unsold bonds, it would serve best to the interests of the account for Morgan Stanley to take them. To give you an idea of how small the division would have been had we divided them, it would have meant that 11 underwriters would have taken 300 bonds; 10 underwriters would have taken 89; and 64 underwriters would have taken up only 165, not quite 3 bonds apiece, and in our judgment we thought that the market reaction would be unfavorable to distribute so widely an amount of $554,000 bonds; and again, thinking it would be in the interest of the account, Morgan, Stanley, took them at the list price, less the selling commission of one-half.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Morgan, Stanley also on July 26 purchased in the market $1,150,000 debentures at an average cost of $95.27, is that not correct, Mr. Hall?

Mr. HALL. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And do you remember the occasion for these additional purchases?

Mr. HALL. I do.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And would you be good enough to explain that?

Mr. HALL. We were conscious of the fact that on Tuesday night, when this account was terminated, that very possibly the next morning the market might receive a severe impact if there should be offered in the market substantial amounts of the unsold bonds. In our judgment, we deemed it advisable to do something to stabilize the market the following morning until this back, orderly market was able to sustain itself at whatever level it would recede to. I have a memorandum before me showing that our first transaction began at 8:30 in the morning, and, as you know, probably most of the large buyers would not be in the office at that time, so we came into the market early in order to act as a cushion to ease the market down; in no sense to manipulate it or to endeavor to put it up. The market opened at 96½; we bought bonds there and continued to buy bonds at receding prices until the market reached 96. At that level other buyers came into the market, at 96, and we ceased to buy and didn't buy any additional bonds.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now, your position at this time totaled $2,395,000, consisting of (1) $691,000, representing your proportionate share of unsold debentures; (2) $554,000 purchase from the group trading account; (3) $1,150,000 purchased for your own account in the open market. Does that sum it up?

Mr. HALL. Making a total of $2,395,000 due; right.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Right.

Mr. HALL. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. These debentures, however, were liquidated at a loss of $43,056.

Mr. HALL. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. However, Morgan Stanley realized a profit of $51,340 on the underwriting.

Mr. HALL. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. You also received a management fee of $212,500.

Mr. HALL. Correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. So your total gross profit was $263,840, and your net profit $220,783.

Mr. HALL. If I may be allowed the privilege of making one distinction; it was not profit; it was gross receipts before expenses, taxes, and so forth.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I was using the more customary accounting verbiage.

Mr. STANLEY. I don't think it is customary.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I should add for your sake that this included the loss of approximately $30,000 resulting from the purchase of the $1,150,000 of debentures in the open market and the debentures taken over for the trading account.

Mr. HALL. A total loss of $43,000.

EXTENT TO WHICH MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INCORPORATED, IS FAMILIAR WITH DISTRIBUTING ABILITY OF DEALERS—RESUMED

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Right.

By the way, Mr. Hall, you have a rather detailed knowledge, do you not, of the dealers' distributing ability?

Mr. HALL. Mr. Nehemkis, I would defer to Mr. Young on that. I did have, I think, a few years ago, but I am not in as close touch with them now as I used to be, and Mr. Young is far more qualified to speak.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Young, are you not generally in charge of the firm's activities in that respect?

Mr. YOUNG. I shouldn't say so. Mr. Hall and Mr. Emerson and Mr. Day and myself all work on that side of it.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Morgan Stanley does have a pretty detailed knowledge of dealers' distributing ability, don't you?

Mr. YOUNG. We try to; yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. As a matter of fact, you keep fairly complete information about the performance record of dealers, don't you, Mr. Young?

Mr. YOUNG. We do.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And you were good enough to make up for us some sample cards, the figures having no particular meaning, indicating, however, the scope of the information that is kept on these performance cards.

Mr. YOUNG. We did.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Do you recall that these are the cards which you were good enough to make up for us?

Mr. YOUNG. Yes; they are the ones.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Chairman, would it be possible to have these printed in the record of the committee?

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. Are you asking that these be printed?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I would like to, if you have no objection.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. They may be received.

(The record cards referred to were marked "Exhibit No. 2043" and are included in the appendix on p. 12967.)

TESTIMONY OF WILLIAM S. WHITEHEAD, SECURITY ANALYST;
CHARLES H. HUFF, ASSOCIATE UTILITIES FINANCIAL ANALYST;
AND BARROW LYONS, ASSOCIATE FINANCIAL ECONOMIST, SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION, WASHINGTON, D. C.

PERFORMANCE RECORDS OF DEALERS KEPT BY OTHER INVESTMENT BANKING FIRMS¹

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Whitehead, will you take the stand?

I show you similar record cards from Kidder, Peabody & Co. and White, Weld & Co. Were these in fact obtained by you from those organizations?

Mr. WHITEHEAD. They were.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Thank you very much. I ask that these be printed in the record.

(The record cards referred to were marked "Exhibits Nos. 2044 and 2045" and are included in the appendix on p. 12975.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. While Mr. Swan was on the stand, he was good enough to identify a performance record card made up by Smith Barney & Co., being "Committee's Exhibit No. 1888." I now offer this in evidence.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. It may be received.

(The record card referred to was previously marked "Exhibit No. 1888" and is included in the appendix on p. 12831.)

Mr. STANLEY. Mr. Nehemkis, I would like—

Mr. NEHEMKIS (interposing). Would you mind if I got these all in?

Mr. STANLEY. This is apropos of these offerings. I would like to have the record show we offered the investigators actual cards and not the ones made up as typical.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I am glad you mentioned that. It was our suggestion that we didn't want actual figures and didn't want actual names; we wanted it more or less as a sample. Thank you ever so much for reminding me about that.

Mr. Huff, will you please take the stand.

Is that a dealer performance card that was obtained by you from the Mellon Securities Corporation?

Mr. HUFF. It is a specimen card made up at my request, reflecting how their cards are made up.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Thank you very much, sir.

I offer this in evidence.

(The performance card referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2046" and is included in the appendix on p. 12977.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Barrow Lyons, please.

Mr. LYONS. I show you a specimen card made up by Harriman Ripley & Co. and ask you to tell me whether or not you did obtain this from Harriman Ripley & Co., Incorporated.

Mr. LYONS. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And was there not furnished for you a detailed explanation by Harriman Ripley & Co. of the manner in which their performance records are kept? Is that the document you have in your hands?

Mr. LYONS. In a general way, yes.

² Infra, p. 12535.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I don't know what you mean by a general way. Is that the document or isn't it? You are identifying something.

Mr. LYONS. This doesn't entirely explain——

Mr. NEHEMKIS (interposing). Mr. Lyons, did you obtain that from Harriman Ripley, or didn't you?

Mr. LYONS. Yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. That is all I want you to tell me.

I offer these in evidence, Mr. Chairman.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. They may be received.

(The documents referred to were marked "Exhibits Nos. 2047-1 and 2" and are included in the appendix on pp. 12977 and 12978.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. George A. Brownell, of the firm of Davis Polk Wardwell Gardiner & Reed, counsel to Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., was good enough to enter into a stipulation with me concerning a number of documents which I should like to offer in evidence. I hand you now, sir, the stipulation, and as I offer the subsequent documents I will indicate for the record that they are covered by the stipulation.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. You are offering this for the record? It may be received.

(The stipulation referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2048" and is included in the appendix on p. 12983.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I offer a telegram to Morgan Stanley from H. B. Cohle & Co., and a reply to that telegram by Sumner B. Emerson, vice president of Morgan Stanley & Co.

(The telegrams referred to were marked "Exhibits Nos. 2049 and 2050" and are included in the appendix on p. 12985.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. A letter to Messrs. Surdam & Co. by Morgan Stanley & Co., Incorporated, and I read you one paragraph from this letter because it bears on previous testimony of the witness. [Reading from "Exhibit No. 2051"]:

Our records contain very limited information about your firm. We should like to obtain from you any information you may care to present showing your distributing ability, territory served, etc.

(The letter referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2051" and is included in the appendix on p. 12985.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I offer a letter to Mr. John Young from Schwabacher & Co., dated July 14, 1938, which purports to show the ultimate placement of the Standard Oil Co.'s 15-year debentures in which that firm participated.

Mr. Young, do you customarily receive letters similar to the one which I now am referring to and which I show you?

Mr. YOUNG. Not customarily, Mr. Nehemkis. We do in a great number of cases. Dealers voluntarily write.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And that information presumably is helpful to you to know how the issues ultimately become placed?

Mr. YOUNG. That is right.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Offered in evidence.

(The letter referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2052" and is included in the appendix on p. 12985.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I now read a letter by John Young to Ernest Dorbritz, of Moore, Leonard & Lynch, Pittsburgh, under date of October 26, 1936 [reading "Exhibit No. 2053"]:

Dear Ernest:

Thank you for your note of October 24, 1936, giving me an analysis of the distribution of your firm of American Telephone and Telegraph Company

Debentures. I must say that it looks to me as if too large a proportion of your sales is going to country banks, which, as you know, we do not consider as the best type of investor under present market conditions.

Mr. Young, have you changed your point of view since that letter was written?

Mr. YOUNG. Country banks at that time were pretty active speculators in bonds, in bond markets, Mr. Nehemkis, and that was after the reserve requirements were raised. It all depends on the bond issues. In some issues it is all right, but in others we don't like to see too large a proportion go to banks.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Is that the condition since 1936? Are country banks speculating since then?

Mr. YOUNG. That is pretty hard to say. Some of them speculate all the time. Certain of the others have dropped out as a factor in the bond market.

Mr. STANLEY. I might inject that by speculating I understand Mr. Young to mean—he can correct me if he means something different—they don't buy the bonds for permanent investment which is the type of distribution we prefer to have.

(The letter referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2053" and appears in full in the text on p. 12683.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I read now a letter addressed to the attention of Mr. Young, from George V. Rotan Co., dated January 14, 1937 [reading from "Exhibit No. 2054-1"]:

I sincerely hope that our standing with you is not impaired by declining an offering. I figure that we are not paid for any underwriting risk but are expected to do a selling job. If we make an honest effort to sell and do not succeed according to my understanding you would prefer to have us decline rather than to buy the bonds and throw them back in to the market later on.

Now do you recall that you did reply to that letter, Mr. Young, on January 19, as follows [reading from "Exhibit No. 2054-2"]:

You are correct in saying that you are not paid for an underwriting risk but are expected to do a selling job. While a single instance of this type will not affect your record with us, yet frankly I cannot understand why a Bond of this character would not be attractive to investors in your market.

If a number of instances had occurred of such a nature, might it have affected the standing of that dealer with you?

Mr. YOUNG. Well, it would demonstrate to us that he didn't have as good distribution as we had thought he had. That was the Great Northern Railway Co. bond, 30-year, 3¾. Texas has not been a very good market for rail bonds.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. But this dealer was a little bit concerned he might stand in bad and thought he had better write and get on record, I presume?

Mr. YOUNG. Well, I wouldn't say that, Mr. Nehemkis. He knew pretty much what our point of view was when he wrote the letter, as shown in the letter.

(The letters referred to were marked "Exhibits Nos. 2054-1 and 2" and are included in the appendix on pp. 12986 and 12987.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. A letter addressed to the attention of Mr. William L. Day from Spencer, Swain & Co., by Earle F. Spencer, dated July 19, 1939, with reference to the Shell Union offering. [Reading "Exhibit No. 2055"]:

Dear Sirs:

We exceedingly regret our action taken today in the acceptance of:
$5,000 SHELL UNION OIL CO.

and turning back $10,000 of these bonds. We have had no success in selling any of them, and are retaining the five bonds as an indication of our endeavor to cooperate to the best of our ability. This is the first time in our history we have declined our full participation in any bond syndicate, but we felt under present business conditions that it was necessary for us to take this action.

We assure you that we do this with great regret, and trust it will not jeopardize our position with you in the future.

(The letter referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2055" and appears in full in the text on p. 12685.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And a letter dated July 19, 1939, from F. L. Dabney & Co., to the attention of William L. Day, Morgan, Stanley & Co., Inc. [reading "Exhibit No. 2056"]:

Confirming our telegram, we are accepting participation for $10,000 of the SHELL UNION OIL CORPORATION Fifteen-Year 2½% debentures, due July 1, 1954 and are declining the remainder of the amount reserved for us, namely $40,000.

We are very sorry that we were not able to take our full participation, but in this territory, on account of the high price none of the customers that we would ordinarily have been able to sell them to, were interested.

Although we have sold no bonds up to the present time, we accepted participation for $10,000 in order to show our appreciation for past favors.

(The letter referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2056" and appears in full in the text on p. 12685.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Another letter, dated July 19, 1939, addressed to Mr. Sumner B. Emerson, from Kerr & Bell, Los Angeles [reading from "Exhibit No. 2057"]:

After thoroughly canvassing our customers it was very disappointing to us to be unable to sell any of the Shell Union Oil 2½% Debentures which you offered us today at Selling Group terms.

As Mr. Kerr and I told you when you called to see us, it is not our policy to take bonds from any syndicate unless we are able to sell them to our legitimate customers. It has come to our attention that some of our competitors have taken down these particular bonds even though they have no prospects of selling them at the offering price, fearing that if they did not do so they would jeopardize their position with you as syndicate managers.

(The letter referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2057" and is included in the appendix on p. 12987.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And a letter to Mr. Sumner B. Emerson from George D. B. Bonbright & Co., dated July 19, 1939. I skip the first paragraph [reading from "Exhibit No. 2058"]:

A few of the banks that did buy the bonds placed their orders at least 10 days ago. I sincerely hope that you will not think we have fallen down on the job in the distribution of one of your deals for lack of real work on it, and that you will not hold this particular record against our future participation in other deals.

(The letter referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2058" and is included in the appendix on p. 12988.)

Mr. Evans, please. Mr. Evans, will you examine this document and tell me whether or not you obtained it from the files of Blyth & Co.?

Mr. LEWIS EVANS (Securities and Exchange Commission). I did.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The document identified by the witness is offered.

(The memorandum referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2059" and appears in full in the text on p. 12686.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. By the way, Mr. Young, doesn't your firm check certificate numbers to brokers for some sixty or ninety days after selling groups are closed?

Mr. YOUNG. No, sir.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I read you a Memorandum to the Sales Managers of Blyth & Co., November 6, 1935 [reading "Exhibit No. 2059"]:

It is perhaps not generally known by our organization that the performance records of Morgan Stanley go far beyond repurchases on a syndicate bid or free bids at or around the offering price. We are reliably informed that this firm checks numbers through brokers for 60 or 90 days after selling groups are closed (even though bonds may be selling at two or three points premium over the offering price) in order to find out who among the underwriters and selling group members are not selling bonds for permanent placement. Although our records are relatively clean in respect to bonds repurchased during the duration of selling groups, we find that our reputation is not as good regarding our bonds getting in the street soon after selling groups are closed.

Mr. HENDERSON. In a few short years a mythology can grow up about a young firm.

Mr. HALL. I should like to say to Mr. Henderson that he is misinformed.

Mr. HENDERSON. I certainly wouldn't want to take, Mr. Hall, everything that has gone into evidence as gospel truth.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And I should like at this time to offer a letter to you, Mr. Hall, from Hyams, Glas & Carothers, New Orleans. This letter is dated July 21, 1939 [reading from "Exhibit No. 2060"]:

I certainly feel badly about not being able to sell any of the Shell Union or the Southern Telephone issues. However, people down here simply don't seem to buy those securities. I am sure we could have used some of the Southern Bells if the premium had not been so great, but as it happens, the very day those came out we bought an issue of State of Louisiana Pension 2.30's, 2.50's and 3.00's due in 12 years and reoffered the 3.00's on a 2.65 basis. The issue is one of the very best in the State and still nobody thought that the issue was offered at a bargain price.

I certainly hope that some day this market will catch up to yours so that we can participate in national syndicates the way we did several years ago, but this does not seem to be feasible right at the present. Meanwhile, I am delighted that you won your point in that particular issue in regard to competitive bidding and hope that this present agitation for it will die down.

I have written to Mr. Ripley to ask for a copy of the pamphlet that Harriman Ripley is issuing on the subject and shall bring it with me to the next Times-Picayune meeting.

With best regards and hoping to see you in California this fall, I am

(The letter referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2060" and is included in the appendix on p. 12989.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. A letter to Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., from Bosworth, Chanute, Loughridge & Co., of Denver, Colo., just one brief statement:

We infer that there were special reasons in relation to both issues why the debentures had to be priced at what appears to the investor as a pretty high price, and we appreciate the fact that your firm has been the champion for the entire investment banking business. We certainly shall continue to put forth our best efforts on both issues.

(The letter referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2061" and is included in the appendix on p. 12989.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. May I have an off-the-record discussion for a moment, Mr. Chairman, with you?

(Off-the-record discussion with Acting Chairman Williams.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Huff, will you be good enough to take the stand, please? Before Mr. Huff does this, I have no further questions of the witnesses, and I ask leave of the committee, if it be the committee's pleasure, that they be dismissed.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. You may be excused, gentlemen.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Thank you very much.

(Witnesses Hall, Stanley, and Young were excused.)

TESTIMONY OF CHARLES H. HUFF, ASSOCIATE UTILITIES FINANCIAL ANALYST, SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION, WASHINGTON, D. C.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Huff, I show you a series of exhibits now in evidence, together with their numbers, which you obtained from the files of various companies. I have agreed with the Chair that they would be admitted subject to your identification, and ask you to examine this list of committee exhibits and tell me whether or not you did so obtain them.

Mr. HUFF. I did.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Just read them over quickly, if you will, please.

Mr. HUFF. The following documents were obtained by me from the files of the First Boston Corporation:

1. A memorandum by H. M. Addinsell, Chairman of the Executive Committee, The First Boston Corporation, dated September 30, 1935, and offered as "Exhibit No. 1698."
2. A memorandum by H. M. Addinsell, dated November 20, 1935, and referring to the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company offering, and introduced as "Exhibit No. 1699."
3. A memorandum relating to Public offerings of Securities by A. T. & T. introduced as "Exhibit No. 1700."
4. A memorandum relating to Southern Bell Telephone Co. $45,000,000 3 1/4 % 25-year debentures, introduced as "Exhibit No. 1701."
5. A memorandum by H. M. Addinsell dated June 26, 1939 and introduced as "Exhibit No. 1702."
6. A letter from D. R. Linsley, Vice President, The First Boston Corporation, to J. R. Briggs, Vice President, H. M. Byllesby & Co., dated May 18, 1935, introduced as "Exhibit No. 1880."
7. A memorandum headed "Wilson & Co." signed by H. M. Addinsell, Chairman of the Executive Committee and a director of The First Boston Corporation, dated May 16, 1935 and introduced as "Exhibit No. 1881."
8. A telegram from D. R. Lonsley to Miles Warner, H. M. Byllesby & Co., dated March 15, 1935, and introduced as "Exhibit No. 1882."
9. A memorandum headed "Wilson & Company" by D. R. Linsley, dated June 27, 1935 and introduced as "Exhibit No. 1885."

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Will you be good enough to give that list to the stenographer so she may incorporate it intact? Thank you very much, sir.

Mr. Richard H. Wels, please.

Mr. Wels was not sworn, Mr. Chairman.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. Do you solemnly swear that the testimony you are about to give in this proceeding shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. WELS. I do.

TESTIMONY OF RICHARD H. WELS, ASSISTANT ATTORNEY, SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION, WASHINGTON, D. C.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Will you be good enough to tell me whether or not you obtained these two documents from the Mellon Securities Corporation?

Mr. WELS. I did; yes.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Thank you very much, sir. Would you just read them into the record, please?

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. I didn't understand the reporter took the other one and I don't see the materiality of taking it down because the document goes in anyway.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Thank you very much, sir.

(The statement handed to the reporter was as follows:)

The following documents were obtained by me (Witness Wels) from the files of Mellon Securities Corporation:

1. A memorandum by C. L. Austin on the Koppers Company $25,000,000 First Mortgage and Collateral Series A 4 percent Trust Bonds, due November 1, 1964, introduced as "Exhibit No. 1863."

2. A memorandum by C. L. Austin on the financing of the Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation, dated August 17, 1936, introduced as "Exhibit No. 1864."

Mr. NEHEMKIS. We have one witness who won't take probably more than 20 minutes or so. May I have the committee's indulgence to call him? This concludes our entire presentation.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. Couldn't you make it 15?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I will do the best I can. I will put all the pressure I can on the witness. Dr. Altman, take the stand, please.

TESTIMONY OF DR. OSCAR L. ALTMAN, INVESTMENT BANKING SECTION, SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION, WASHINGTON, D. C.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Dr. Altman has previously been sworn. Dr. Altman, it is your intention to testify this afternoon on concentration in the management, underwriting, and sale of registered bond issues since 1934, is it not?

Dr. ALTMAN. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And you will have occasion to offer several tables during the course of your testimony, will you not?

Dr. ALTMAN. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And you will have occasion to offer several charts during the course of your testimony, will you not?

Dr. ALTMAN. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Were these charts and tables prepared under your direction?

Dr. ALTMAN. They were.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Are they based upon statistical data which you believe to be authentic and reliable?

Dr. ALTMAN. They are.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. You have had a number of discussions, have you not, with me concerning this material?

Dr. ALTMAN. Yes; I have.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Despite those discussions, the opinions and evidence which you will offer this afternoon are your own best judgments and your opinions; is that correct?

Dr. ALTMAN. That is right.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Will you be good enough to proceed, Dr. Altman, indicating the charts and the data that you wish to present to illustrate your testimony.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. In that connection, do the charts themselves show on their face the source of the information?

Dr. ALTMAN. Yes, they do. May I ask, Mr. Chairman, that the easel at the back of the room be set up so that the wall charts which I shall have to offer from time to time may be exhibited for the pleasure of the committee?

Mr. NEHEMKIS. It is being done, Dr. Altman. Will you proceed, Dr. Altman?

Dr. ALTMAN. I have been asked to discuss concentration in the management and underwriting of registered bond issues and in the type of security distribution effected by the investment banking mechanism. It will simplify the discussion to review at the outset the terms which are commonly used in this connection.

DEFINITION OF TERMS

Dr. ALTMAN. What is commonly thought of as underwriting includes two separate and mutually exclusive activities:

On the one hand, investment bankers may insure the sale of a security issue. That is, they may contract to purchase from an issuing company the balance of a security issue which was offered to, but not purchased by, the offerees.

On the other hand, investment bankers may agree to purchase an entire issue of securities from an issuing company for resale to investors. This is by far the more common type of underwriting activity.

The work involved in investigating, setting up and distributing an issue is handled by the manager of the issue, or by the managers of the issue, as the case may be, who are one or more members of the underwriting group, sometimes called the participating group. From time to time during this discussion reference will be made to the value of the issues managed by various investment banking firms. In all such cases, the amount of the issues managed will be equal to the total of the face values of the issues for which the firm acted as manager. If the issue was handled by two or more co-managers, each firm will be said to manage its stated share of the amount of the issue.

The several purchasers of a security from the issuing company constitute the underwriting group. The amounts of an issue which the underwriters purchase severally from the issuer are called their participations.

In order to secure better or wider distribution, the underwriters of an issue almost always ask other investment banking firms to take part in selling the securities to their investors. The selling or distributing group thus consists of the underwriters who reserve part of their participations for wholesale or retail distribution, plus these additional firms. In the usual underwriter's agreement the manager is given the power to determine how much shall be reserved to the individual underwriters out of their underwriting participations for wholesale or retail distribution, and to determine how much shall be offered to other dealers.

CONCENTRATION IN MANAGEMENT OF ALL REGISTERED ISSUES

Dr. ALTMAN. Under the provisions of the Securities Act of 1933, most of the securities issued by business enterprises in the United States must be registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission. All foreign securities offered in the United States, including securities issued by foreign governments, must be registered.

The securities which need not be registered—and I will summarize these very briefly—are:

1. Securities issued or guaranteed by the United States Government or its agencies.
2. Securities issued by States or their political subdivisions or instrumentalities.
3. Securities issued by any banking institution.
4. Securities of common or contract carriers, the issuance of which is subject to section 20a of the Interstate Commerce Act.
5. Securities not sold in interstate commerce.
6. Securities not publicly offered.
7. Certain other types of securities whose importance is relatively slight.

Total issues offered for cash from January 1934 through June 1939 amounted to $36,100,000,000.¹ Of this total, $9,600,000,000 was registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission, while $26,500,000,000 was not so registered.

In the category of unregistered issues were included approximately $16,000,000,000 of securities issued by the United States Government and its instrumentalities; $6,000,000,000 of securities issued by States and their subdivisions; $1,600,000,000 issued by contract or common carriers; and $1,000,000,000 issued by banks and by educational, religious, charitable, and other nonprofit institutions.

Securities to the amount of $9,600,000,000 were registered with the Commission. In this connection, I would like to summarize the material dealing with the methods of offering security issues and the types of securities offered, with two tables. The first, entitled "Securities Offered for Cash, by Type of Offering, January 1934-June 1939," and the second, entitled "Securities Offered for Cash, by Type of Security, January 1934-June 1939."

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Dr. Altman, are these the tables to which reference has been made?

Dr. ALTMAN. They are.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And the source of the data for these two tables, Dr. Altman, is what?

Dr. ALTMAN. They are prepared from records either in the possession of the Securities and Exchange Commission or from other published records, or from, in some cases, other sources which are available to the Commission.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The two exhibits identified by the witness, Mr. Chairman, are offered in evidence.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. They may be received.

(The tables referred to were marked "Exhibits Nos. 2062 and 2063" and are included in the appendix on p. 12990.)

Mr. O'CONNELL. Before you continue, it is indicated these are securities offered for cash?

Dr. ALTMAN. Yes.

Mr. O'CONNELL. Does not include refunding issues?

Dr. ALTMAN. Refunding issues would generally be offered for cash; the term "offered for cash" attempts to exclude certain issues where you have securities offered for exchange, where no cash is forthcoming.

Out of the $9,600,000,000 of registered issues more than $9,200,000,000, or 96 percent, were offered through and managed by investment banking syndicates. The major part of these managed registered issues were handled by a small number of firms. Although there were 730 members in the Investment Bankers Association in the United States in October 1938, 38 firms managed 91 percent of the $9,200,000,000 of registered managed issues. This is more completely set forth in a table entitled "Amount and Percent of Registered Bond and Preferred Stock and Common Stock Issues Managed by Selected Investment Banking Firms, January 1934-June 1939."

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Dr. Altman, I show you the table to which you have referred and ask you to tell me whether this in fact is that table.

Dr. ALTMAN. It is.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And, in a general way, what is the source of the data which appears on this table?

Dr. ALTMAN. This table was prepared by the Securities and Exchange Commission from data on file with them.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. It is offered in evidence, Mr. Chairman.

(The table referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2064" and is included in the appendix on p. 12991.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Will you be good enough to proceed, sir?

Dr. ALTMAN. Moreover, six firms in New York City managed $5,300,000,000, or 57 percent of the total registered issues managed by investment bankers. These six firms were [reading from "Exhibit No. 2064"]:

Morgan Stanley & Co., Incorporated, $2,142,000,000, 23.2%.

The First Boston Corporation, $986,000,000, 10.7%.

Dillon Reed & Co., $680,000,000, 7.4%.

Kuhn, Loeb & Co., $618,000,000, 6.7%.

Smith, Barney & Co., $472,000,000, 5.1%.

Blyth & Co., Inc., $388,000,000, 4.2%.

Fourteen other New York City firms managed $1,970,000,000, or 21 percent, of the total.

Eighteen firms located outside of New York City managed $1,114,000,000, or 12 percent, of the total. All the other investment bankers in the United States—and it should be repeated that the Investment Bankers Association had 730 members in October 1938—managed $862,000,000, or 9 percent, of the total.

Investment banking firms, like other business enterprises, specialize their activities. Some specialize in the flotation of bonds, while a few are associated relatively more with the flotation of stocks. There is also specialization with regard to industries, and with regard to size of issues. Finally, the business of different investment banking firms may be distinguished with reference to the quality of their security issues.

Investment banking firms show differences between their bond and stock underwritings. For example, bonds constituted 94 percent of the $2,100,000,000 of registered securities managed by Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. Bonds constituted 86 percent of the $6,200,000,000 of securities managed by 37 other leading firms—19 within New York City and 18 outside New York City—while they constituted only 49 percent of the $862,000,000 of securities managed by all other firms.

This material is summarized in a table called "Distribution Among Bonds and Preferred and Common Stock in Registered Issues Managed by Selected Investment Banking Firms, January 1934-June 1939." This table was prepared by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Dr. Altman, is this the table to which you have referred?

Dr. ALTMAN. It is.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I offer the table in evidence.

(The table referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2065" and is included in the appendix on p. 12992.)

Mr. LUBIN. In order that the significance of the table might be more easily understood, could you tell us what proportion of the total issues floated by these firms were stocks as compared to bonds?

Dr. ALTMAN. Which firms, Mr. Lubin?

Mr. LUBIN. The total figure you have just mentioned.

Dr. ALTMAN. For all firms?

Mr. LUBIN. Yes.

Dr. ALTMAN. For all firms, the figures were as follows: 84 percent of the total consisted of registered bond issues; 10.4 percent consisted of preferred-stock issues, and 5.2 percent consisted of common-stock issues, all of them making up $9,233,000,000 of securities.

Mr. LUBIN. In other words, the very nature of the flotations would almost automatically lead to the conclusion shown in the table you have just submitted.

Dr. ALTMAN. Except that some firms do more registered bond issues than others, while some other firms do relatively more in preferred and common-stock issues. However, the data are clear enough that for the whole period substantially 85 percent of all registered issues were registered bond issues.

QUALITY OF REGISTERED BONDS MANAGED BY SELECTED FIRMS: ALL INDUSTRIES

Dr. ALTMAN. What quality of registered securities did various investment banking firms manage? I propose to present data with reference to the distribution of registered bond issues managed by investment banking firms, classified by industry and quality of the bonds. I shall confine the analysis to $7,400,000,000 of bonds managed by 38 leading firms in the period from January 1934 through June 1939. This amount represents 95 percent of all registered-bond issues managed by all firms during the period.

The ratings of bonds used in this analysis are those of Moody's Investors Service when these were available. Where Moody's ratings were not available the equivalent ratings of Poor's Investors Service or of the Standard Investors Guide were used. For nine issues the ratings of Poor's Investors Guide were used and for one issue the rating of Standard Investors Service was used. Moody's

Investors Service divides bonds into the following groups: Aaa, Aa, A, Baa, Ba, B, and so forth. Aaa is, of course, the highest grade; Aa, second grade; and so on. For the purposes of this analysis, bonds will be divided into the four highest groups, and all other bonds will be included in the "below fourth grade" group. The four highest grades, as rated by Moody's and by Poor's, are eligible for bank investment.

Here I should like to offer a chart and a table, each bearing the title "Quality of Bond Issues Managed by Selected Investment Banking Firms, January 1934-June 1939: All Industries."

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Dr. Altman, I ask you to identify the table to which reference has been made.

Dr. ALTMAN. This is the table which I have just mentioned, and this table is the source for the chart which you now see.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. May it please the committee, I offer in evidence the table and chart identified by the witness.

(The chart referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2066" and appears on p. 12694. The statistical data on which this chart is based are included in the appendix on p. 12993.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Will you proceed, Dr. Altman?

Dr. ALTMAN. May I explain briefly how this table and chart were constructed and how the subsequent tables and charts on this same subject were constructed?

The percentage of the registered managed bond issues is shown separately for each one of six New York City firms, which are distinguished by different types of cross-hatchings. The six firms which are shown separately are Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., The First Boston Corporation, Kuhn, Loeb & Co., Dillon, Read & Co., Smith Barney & Co., and Blyth & Co., Inc. Then a separate group consisting of fourteen other New York City firms is shown on the chart.

I will not stop at this point to read the names of these fourteen other firms, but accompanying every one of the charts to which reference has been or will be made there is a table from which the chart was drawn, and every one of those tables contains a list of these 14 other New York City firms.

In addition, there is a group on the chart referring to 18 firms outside of New York City, and again, the table accompanying each chart will identify the 18 firms in that group.

I might say that in this chart and in subsequent charts dealing with the same subject the group remains constant and the period remains the same.

During the five and a half year period in question, namely from January 1934 through June 1939, the six leading New York City firms managed 65.3% of this sample of registered managed issues of $7,400,000,000. These may be seen from the bar at the right, which reflects the distribution of management for all industries, for all grades of securities taken together. Reading from the right-hand column, we see that Morgan Stanley & Co., Incorporated managed 27.3 percent of all these issues; The First Boston Corporation, 12.7; Kuhn, Loeb & Co., 8.1%; Dillon Read & Co., 7.8%; Smith, Barney & Co., 4.8%; and Blyth & Co., Inc., 4.6%, so that these six New York firms managed 65.3% of these registered bonds.

QUALITY OF BOND ISSUES MANAGED BY INVESTMENT BANKING FIRMS

ALL INDUSTRIES

JANUARY 1934 - JUNE 1939 (38 LEADING FIRMS)

Now I call your attention to the first five columns in this chart, which set forth the proportion of the bonds in each quality grade, as previously defined, managed by each of the 6 firms, by 14 other New York City firms, and by 18 firms outside of New York City.

The bar at the left reflects the distribution of the management of first-grade bond issues in all industries. The first-grade securities amounted to $1,300,000,000 during this period. Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., shown in the bottom segment, managed 65% of all such first-grade issues, although by comparison with the last bar, namely "all grades," we see that they managed 27% of all issues of all grades.

Notice that none of the 18 leading firms outside of New York City managed any first-grade bond issues.

The First Boston Corporation managed 16% of all first-grade issues, and it is noteworthy that both Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and Blyth & Co. were not represented in the first grade bar.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. You mean, as managers?

Dr. ALTMAN. Yes; as managers.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The 18 leading New York firms together managed 85% of all the first-grade issues, as compared with 65% of all issues of all grades. It is clear from the chart that the degree of concentration of management of registered bond issues by the six New York City firms decreases as the quality of the security decreases. In other words, as we go from the first grade to the second grade and then through the lower grades, the relative proportion of the registered bonds managed by the 18 firms outside of New York City and by the remaining 14 New York City firms increases. Thus while the 18 firms outside of New York City managed none of the first grade issues, they managed 13% of the second grade issues, the second bar on the chart, 19% of the third grade issues, 18% of the fourth grade issues, and 21.7% of all issues below the fourth grade.

This chart and table which accompanies it were prepared to cover as large a segment as possible of the investment banking industry for as long a period as possible since the Securities Act. The data in the table relate to the period from January 1934 through June 1939. The data on concentration in the management of registered bond issues, therefore, tend to understate the role of Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., which was incorporated on September 5, and opened for business on September 15, 1935. If the relative amounts of registered bond issues managed by our thirty-eight leading firms be considered for the period from September 16, 1935, through June, 1939—that is for the period during which Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., was in the investment banking business—it will be found that Morgan Stanley & Co. managed not 27% of all issues of all grades, but 32% of all issues of all grades; and that this firm managed not 65% of all first grade issues, but 81% of all first grade issues. These data are summarized in the table called "Amount and Percent of Registered Bond Issues of Each Quality Grade Managed by Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. from Organization to June 30, 1939."

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Is this the table to which you have referred, Dr. Altman?

Dr. ALTMAN. It is.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And the source of this table is, Dr. Altman, what?

Dr. ALTMAN. This table is based upon data which was prepared for the Investment Banking Section of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. I offer this table identified by the witness.

(The table referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2067" and is included in the appendix on p. 12994.)

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Now proceed, Dr. Altman.

Dr. ALTMAN. The chart and tables already introduced into evidence contain data on the relative importance of various investment banking firms in the management of $7,400,000,000 of registered managed bond issues for all industries.¹ It has been suggested, however, that investment banking firms are often specialized with regard to the industrial fields in which they underwrite securities. Hence, to assay more clearly the relative importance of the various firms and of the quality of the issues they manage, it is essential to treat various industries separately.

The $7,400,000,000 of registered managed bond issues have, therefore, been divided into the following four groups:

(1) Manufacturing companies, whose securities constituted 26.4% of the total.

(2) Electric light and power, gas and water companies, whose securities constituted 50.9% of the total.

(3) Transportation and communication companies, whose securities constituted 10.6% of the total.

(4) And all other issues, which aggregated 12.1% of the total.

BONDS OF MANUFACTURING COMPANIES

Dr. ALTMAN. I propose now to deal with the distribution of management of registered bond issues for manufacturing companies, and in this connection I offer a chart and a table accompanying it entitled "The Quality of Bond Issues Managed by Investment Banking Firms, January 1934 to June 1939," subtitle "Manufacturing Companies."

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Dr. Altman, is this the table to which you have referred.

Dr. ALTMAN. It is.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And the source of this is as previously indicated?

Dr. ALTMAN. As previously indicated.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The table and chart identified by the witness are offered in evidence, Mr. Chairman.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. They may be received.

(The chart referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2068" and appears on p. 12697. The statistical data on which this chart is based are included in the appendix on p. 12996.)

Dr. ALTMAN. It will be apparent from this table and chart that Kuhn, Loeb & Co. managed the largest part of all the registered bond issues of manufacturing companies of all grades. Six New York City firms, to which reference has been made, together managed 67.4% of all manufacturing company registered bond issues of all grades, and twenty New York City firms managed 91.6% of all such securities. It should be noticed, however, that the relative importance of the various firms in the different quality grades is different from that for the group of manufacturing securities as a whole. In grade one, for example, we find that Morgan, Stanley & Co., Inc. managed 68.9% of the securities of manufacturing companies. In grade two, Dillon Read & Co. managed 65.8% of manufacturing company bonds. None of the eighteen firms outside of New York City managed any first or second grade registered manufacturing bond issues.

It has already been suggested that the relative importance of Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. is better measured for the shorter period September 16, 1935, to June 30, 1939, than for the period covered by this chart. The issues managed by Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. constitute only 17% of the total manufacturing issues for the period of its business life, compared with 14% for the full period as shown in the chart, but since the firm has been organized it has managed all of the first-grade issues in this field.

Mr. O'CONNELL. If this chart was arranged to deal with the period since September 1935, the first line of the chart, grade one, would indicate merely Morgan Stanley?

Dr. ALTMAN. That is right. It would represent Morgan Stanley management.

ELECTRIC LIGHT AND POWER, GAS, AND WATER COMPANIES

Dr. ALTMAN. I turn now to the second group, namely, Electric Light and Power, Gas, and Water Companies, and propose to discuss this group with the aid of a chart and table called "Quality of Bond Issues Managed by Investment Banking Firms January 1934-June 1939: Electric Light and Power, Gas, and Water Companies."

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Dr. Altman, is this the table to which you have referred?

Dr. ALTMAN. It is.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And the source of the data?

Dr. ALTMAN. Is the same as previously set forth.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The table and chart identified by the witness, Mr. Chairman, are offered in evidence.

(The chart referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2069" and appears on p. 12699. The statistical data on which this chart is based are included in the appendix on p. 12997.)

Dr. ALTMAN. During the period January 1934 through June 1939, the registered issues of electric light and power, gas and water companies managed by thirty-eight leading firms totaled $3,800,000,000, or 51 percent of all registered managed issues here dealt with.

Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., managed 22% of such issues and The First Boston Corporation, 20%. The eighteen firms outside of New York City managed 20% of the total. It is noteworthy that these eighteen firms managed a larger proportion of the issues in this field than in any other field. Illustrative of the specialization in security organization is Kuhn, Loeb & Co., which had no issues in this industry in five and a half years.

(38 LEADING FIRMS)

OS-1371 PREPARED BY SEC. & EXCH. COMM.

The distribution of managed issues by quality is somewhat different.

Turning to grade 1, we find that Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., managed 52 percent of these issues, and The First Boston Corporation managed 25 percent of these issues, so that Morgan Stanley and First Boston together managed three-quarters of all the first-grade issues of electric light and power, gas and water companies.

Again, if we consider the period covering the business life of Morgan Stanley, certain changes appear. We find that for the period covering its business life, Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. managed 25 percent of all issues¹ in this field, as compared with 21.7 percent for the longer periods covered by the chart, and if we turn to grade 1, we find that Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. managed 70.5 percent for the period since its organization, as compared with 52 percent for the full period as shown on the chart.

TRANSPORTATION AND COMMUNICATION COMPANIES

Dr. ALTMAN. I propose now to turn to the next field, namely, that of registered managed bond issues of transportation and communication companies, and propose to discuss this with the aid of a chart and table called "Quality of Bond Issues Managed by Investment Banking Firms, January 1934-June 1939: Transportation and Communication Companies."

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Dr. Altman, is that the table to which you have referred?

Dr. ALTMAN. It is.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And the source is the same as previously indicated?

Dr. ALTMAN. It is.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The table and chart are offered in evidence.

(The chart referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2070" and appears on p. 12701. The statistical data on which this chart is based are included in the appendix on p. 12998.)

Dr. ALTMAN. It should be noted that the data do not include securities issued by common or contract carriers, the issuance of which is subject to section 20a of the Interstate Commerce Act. Such issues are exempt from registration under the Securities Act. This group consists for the most part, therefore, of bond issues of communication companies and principally, of telephone companies.

Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. dominates this field. It managed $560,000,000 or 71 percent of the financing in the period January 1934 through June 1939. It managed all the first-grade issues and 95 percent of the second-grade issues. The First Boston Corporation, Dillon Read & Co., and Smith, Barney & Co. managed no registered issues in this field; Kuhn, Loeb and Co. managed a transportation issue of $19,250,000 for General American Transportation Corporation and Blyth & Co., Inc. managed scattered issues aggregating $19,000,000.

ALL OTHER ISSUES

Dr. ALTMAN. I turn now to the last segment of this break-down, namely, "all other issues," and propose to discuss this with the aid of a chart and table called "The Quality of Bond Issues Managed by Investment Banking Firms, January 1934-June 1939: Companies Other Than Manufacturing or Public Utility."

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Is this the table to which you have referred?

Dr. ALTMAN. It is.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. And the source of the data is the same as previously indicated?

Dr. ALTMAN. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The table and chart are offered in evidence.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. They may be received.

(The chart referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2071" and appears on p. 12703. The statistical data on which this chart is based are included in the appendix on p. 12999.)

Dr. ALTMAN. In this group are included all issues by foreign Governments within this period. I might mention the issues by the Dominion of Canada, Argentina, Norway, and so on, and such other issues as do not fall within the earlier classifications.

The importance of Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. in this field may be seen from the fact that for the full period covered, Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. managed 32.4% of all the issues, and 74.1% of all the first-grade issues. If we consider merely the shorter period, that is, the period since Morgan Stanley has been in operation, we find that the percentage of first-grade securities managed remains the same; that is to say, 74% of the total, but the percentage of all securities within this field increases from 42% for the long period to 51% for the short period.¹

SUMMARY OF CONCENTRATION BY QUALITY AND INDUSTRY

Dr. ALTMAN. The character of the business of managing registered bond issues may now be summarized for the 38 leading firms as follows (I deal here with the short period, September 16, 1935, to June 30, 1939): Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., during this period managed $2,000,000,000 of registered bond issues, of which 42.7 percent fell in the first grade and 79.2 percent fell in the first two grades.

Now let us compare this with the business of other underwriting houses. If we take the other five New York City firms, which have been specifically mentioned, as a group, that is to say, if we take the combined business of First Boston; Kuhn, Loeb; Dillon Read; Smith, Barney; and Blyth, we find that these firms, too, managed two billion of registered bond issues, but 4.4% fell in the first grade and 42% fell in the first two grades, as compared with the 42.7 percent of Morgan Stanley in the first grade and 79.2 percent of Morgan Stanley in the first and second grades.

These may be compared with the record of the 14 other New York City firms previously identified, which together managed $1,300,000,000 of registered bond issues, of which 9.1% fell in the first grade and 23.6% fell in the first two grades.

The record of the 18 firms outside New York City previously identified is interesting in this connection. These firms managed $936,000,000 of registered bond issues, none of which were in the first grade, and 30.8 percent of which fell in the second grade.

This material is summarized in a table called "Distribution by Grades of Registered Bond Issues Managed by Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. and 37 other Leading Investment Banking Firms, September 16, 1935, to June 30, 1939."

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Is this the table you refer to, Dr. Altman?

Dr. ALTMAN. It is.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The source of the data is the same as you have previously indicated?

Dr. ALTMAN. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Chairman, this table is offered in evidence.

(The table referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2072" and is included in the appendix on p. 13000.)

Dr. ALTMAN. The charts and the tables just presented have dealt with the distribution of and the concentration in the management of registered bond issues. Now we may direct our attention to the distribution of underwriting participations.

INTERPARTICIPATIONS IN ORIGINATIONS OF EIGHT FIRMS

Dr. ALTMAN. The Investment Banking Section of the Securities and Exchange Commission requested from eight leading investment banking firms a complete list of all issues managed and of all participations. These data, which are preliminary and subject to correction as additional data are received, have been compiled and analyzed by our staff.

The following table, containing eight parts, has been prepared from these data. These tables may look complicated. Unfortunately, the subject is complicated, and the tables are of equal complexity, but they attempt to answer two questions:

First, how much of the participations of each firm came from its own originations? And how much from issues originated by the other seven firms?

Secondly, how much of its originations did each firm give to the other seven firms, and how much did it keep for itself?

I trust that this will become clearer as the discussion of the tables proceeds.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Are those the eight sections that you made reference to a moment ago?

Dr. ALTMAN. They are.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. This data was furnished to the Investment Banking Section by the eight investment banking firms you have made reference to?

Dr. ALTMAN. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. These tables are offered.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. They may be admitted.

(The tables referred to were marked "Exhibit No. 2073" and are included in the appendix on p. 13001.)

Dr. ALTMAN. I propose to discuss these tables in very summary fashion; otherwise we might be here for a much longer time, I am afraid, than any of us are prepared to sit. First, let us consider Part I, which deals with Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. Morgan Stanley & Co. had participations during the period covered by the table, that is to say, from June 14, 1934, to June 30, 1939, amounting to $590,000,000. This table attempts to explain where these participations came from.

By reference to the first two columns of the table, one sees that 88.7% of all Morgan Stanley & Co. participations came from issues managed by Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. and that 99.3% of all participations of Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. during this period came from issues managed either by itself or by the other seven firms set forth.

It is interesting to note that during this period none of the participations of Morgan Stanley & Co. came from issues managed by The First Boston Corporation.

Now we turn to the second question. How much did these firms mentioned participate in Morgan Stanley issues? By reference to columns 3 and 4 of the table we see that during the period in question Morgan Stanley & Co., Incorporated managed issues amounting to $2,414,000,000. Of the total amount of issues so managed, 21.7% was reserved by Morgan Stanley & Co. for itself as an underwriting participation, and the various other amounts and percentages set forth in columns 3 and 4 of the table indicate the participations in such issues of all the other firms.

Notice that the eight firms, including Morgan Stanley & Co., reserved—or there was reserved for these eight firms in this $2,414,000,000 of security issues—58.4% of the total, so that the remaining 41.6 percent of these issues managed by Morgan Stanley & Co. was available to all the other underwriters in the United States.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Dr. Altman, you had intended to say, did you not, that Morgan Stanley and the other seven firms took 58.4% of all Morgan Stanley originations?

Dr. ALTMAN. That is correct.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Will you proceed, sir?

Dr. ALTMAN. Part II deals with Kuhn, Loeb & Co. During the period from June 14, 1934, to June 30, 1939, Kuhn, Loeb & Co. had underwriting participations of $708,000,000, as set forth in column 1 of this table.

Of this total, $420,000,000, or 59.2%, came from issues managed by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and $156,000,000, or 22%, came from issues managed by Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. The participations by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. in issues managed by the other six investment banking firms mentioned, added to their participation in their own and Morgan Stanley issues, account for 94% of all their underwriting participations. Thus, the participations in originations by all investment banking firms, excluding these eight firms, account for only 6% of all Kuhn, Loeb & Co. underwriting participations.

Now we turn to columns 3 and 4 of the table. During the period in question, Kuhn, Loeb & Co. managed $1,053,603,000 of security issues. Of this total it reserved for itself underwriting participations of $419,000,000, or 39.8% of the total. There was reserved for the other seven firms 26.1% of all Kuhn, Loeb originations. Thus the eight firms mentioned, including Kuhn, Loeb & Co. itself, took 65.9% of all Kuhn, Loeb & Co. originations, leaving the balance of 34.1% to be divided among all the other underwriters in the United States.

Part III deals with The First Boston Corporation. During the period in question, The First Boston Corporation had underwriting participations of $709,000,000, of which 34.0% came from issues managed by itself, and 79.1% came from issues managed by itself and the other seven houses mentioned.

On the other hand, The First Boston Corporation managed issues totalling $993,000,000, and 42.1% of this amount was reserved in the form of underwriting participations to these eight firms, including itself. Notice that Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. had no participations in First Boston issues.

As a result, 58% of all originations of The First Boston Corporation during this period were available for underwriting participations to all the other remaining investment banking firms.

I think we may pass rather hurriedly over the next parts of the table. They will constitute part of the statistical record.

Suppose we summarize this material dealing with the eight firms mentioned. During the period from June 14, 1934, to June 30, 1939, these eight firms managed issues totaling $6,700,000,000. Of this amount they reserved for themselves, on the average, underwriting participations of 56%. That is to say, of the issues managed by these eight firms, more than half was reserved to themselves in the form of underwriting participations and the remainder was available to all other investment banking firms in the form of underwriting participations.

During the same period the underwriting participations of these same firms amounted to $4,300,000,000, of which 86% represented reservations in their own originations.

DISTRIBUTION OF SALES BY THE DISTRIBUTING GROUP

Dr. ALTMAN. I turn now to a slightly different subject. There has been much discussion within the past few years of the institutional character of the securities market. This discussion has centered about the predominant role played by banks and insurance companies in the purchase of newly offered securities.

The Investment Banking Section of the Securities and Exchange Commission investigated the distribution of the sales of four bond issues by the respective distributing groups. These issues were offered in 1938 and represented a variety of maturities and industries. In addition to these data, we are fortunate to have the results of a questionnaire on the same subject by Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. Morgan Stanley & Co. selected three bond issues which they had managed, one in 1936, one in 1937, and the third in 1938, and sent questionnaires to all the members of the distributing group who had participated in the syndication of all three issues.

The Securities and Exchange Commission questionnaire covered four bond issues; the Morgan Stanley questionnaire covered three bond issues; one bond issue was covered by both questionnaires.

The results from both questionnaires are similar and are shown on a table and chart entitled "The Distribution of Sales to Various Classes of Purchasers by the Distributing Group, Six Bond Issues, 1936-1938."

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Is that the table you refer to, Dr. Altman?

Dr. ALTMAN. It is.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. The chart and table identified by the witness are offered in evidence, Mr. Chairman.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. They may be received.

(The chart referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2074" and appears on p. 12708. The statistical data on which this chart is based are included in the appendix on p. 13005.)

Dr. ALTMAN. On this chart are set forth the percentages of the sales by the distributing group made to various classes of purchasers. The bottom segment in each case represents the percent of the total issue sold to banks; the second segment, that sold to insurance companies; the third segment, that sold to charitable and educational foundations; the fourth segment, that sold to security dealers and the top segment, that proportion of the total issue sold to individuals.

Banks on the average that is, taking these issues as a group, account for 47%¹ of the sales by the distributing group, and life and fire insurance companies on the average bought 38%¹ of the issues offered. If to these two are added the sales made to charitable and educational foundations, we find that on the average 88.4%¹ of all sales made by the distributing group in these issues went to so-called institutional purchasers.

It should be noted, and it will be apparent from the table, that some bond issues are more attractive to banks than to insurance companies, while others are more attractive to insurance companies than to banks. It is noteworthy, however, that the percentage of the total issues taken by banks and insurance companies together was relatively constant for the six issues. On the average, banks and insurance companies together bought 85% of the total amount of these six issues.

Individuals, on the average, bought 6.6%¹ of the bonds sold by the distributing group. The sales indicated here to security dealers represent, of course, merely stopping places for these securities, but we haven't followed up the small percentages reflecting the sales to security dealers, so I have no way of knowing how these aggregate percentages would be changed if such secondary distributions were considered. However, there would probably not be very much change in these percentages if one took account of the secondary distribution by security dealers who were not members of the distributing group.

Both the questionnaires to which I have referred requested the distribution of sales by the distributing group, not only by classes of purchasers, but by states.

The results of these questionnaires have been tabulated and form the basis for a table and chart called "Distribution by States of the Sales Made by the Distributing Group of Six Bond Issues, 1936-1938."

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Is that the table you referred to a moment ago, Dr. Altman?

Dr. ALTMAN. It is.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. May I offer in evidence, Mr. Chairman, the table and chart identified by the witness?

(The chart referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 2075" and appears on p. 12709. The statistical data on which this chart is based are included in the appendix on p. 13006.)

Dr. ALTMAN. The data on this table may be very simply summarized. 38%¹ of all the issues mentioned was sold in New York State, 35%¹ in New York City alone. Another 30%¹ was sold in the three states of Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, and New Jersey. Thirteen states accounted for 90%¹ of the purchases from the distributing group.¹

SUMMARY

Dr. ALTMAN. The general line of testimony upon which I have been engaged this afternoon may be summarized in the following way:

First, from the period September 16, 1935, that is to say the day it began business operations, until June 30, 1939, Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. managed 32% of all the registered bond issues managed by thirty-eight leading firms. It managed all of the first-grade registered bond issues of manufacturing companies; 71% of all the first-grade registered bond issues of electric light and power, gas, and water companies; all of the first-grade registered bond issues of transportation and communication companies, principally telephone issues; and 74% of all the first-grade registered bond issues of all other issuers. During this period, Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. managed four-fifths of all the first-grade registered bond issues managed by thirty-eight leading firms in the United States.

Second, none of the investment banking firms located outside of New York City managed any of the first grade registered bond issues referred to during the period from January, 1934, through June, 1939. The lower the grade of the security, the larger the relative originating importance of the firms outside of New York City.

Third, during the period from September 16, 1935, through June 30, 1939, Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., managed $2,000,000,000 of registered bond issues, of which 43% fell within the first grade and 79% within the first two grades. During the same period, The First Boston Corporation, Kuhn, Loeb & Co., Dillon Read & Co., Smith, Barney & Co., and Blyth & Co., Inc. also managed $2,000,000,000 of registered bond issues, of which 4% fell within the first grade and 42% within the first two grades. Fourteen other New York City firms managed $1,300,000,000 of registered bond issues during this period, of which 9% fell in the first grade and 24% in the first two grades. Finally, during the same period, eighteen leading firms outside of New York City managed $900,000,000 of the registered bond issues, of which none fell within the first grade, and 31% within the second grade.

Fourth, eight leading firms in the United States, Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., Kuhn, Loeb & Co., The First Boston Corporation, Blyth & Co., Inc., Dillon Read & Co., Mellon Securities Corporation, Harriman Ripley & Co., Inc., and Smith, Barney & Co., managed $7,400,000,000 of securities from June 14, 1934, to June 30, 1939. On the average, these eight firms reserved more than one-half of the total of the issues managed by them as their underwriting participations; the remainder was divided among all the other investment bankers in the United States.

Fifth, these eight firms had underwriting participations of $4,300,000,000. On the average, 86% of this total represented participations in issues managed by these firms and the remaining 14% represented participations in issues managed by all other investment bankers.

Mr. NEHEMKIS. Mr. Chairman, may it please the committee, this concludes the presentation of the testimony on investment banking which the Investment Banking Section of the Securities and Exchange Commission was authorized to conduct by the reference of this committee. May I say in behalf of myself and the members of the staff that we are extremely grateful to you for the patience which you have shown us during these several weeks in the presentation of this evidence.

Acting Chairman WILLIAMS. I want to compliment you, Mr. Nehemkis, and your staff, on the splendid way in which you have prepared and presented this matter to the committee. We appreciate it, and we have been very highly benefited by it.

If there are no further questions now, this hearing will be closed as far as the investment banking subject is concerned, and the committee will stand in recess until 10:30 Monday, at which time I understand we will take up the question of cartels.

(Whereupon at 5:15 p. m., the committee adjourned until 10:30 a. m. Monday, January 15, 1940.)

OCTOBER 26, 1925.

MEMORANDUM

Following the talk Arthur Lehman had with Mr. Catchings on Friday, October 23rd, a further conference was held at the home of Arthur Sachs on Sunday, October 25th, at 9 o'clock. There were present at this conference: Messrs. Waddill Catchings, Arthur Sachs, Arthur Lehman, Herbert H. Lehman.

The conference throughout was marked by a temperate and amicable spirit. At its beginning I explained to our associates that I had not been present at any of the previous conferences and that I was desirous of knowing exactly what was in their minds. Mr. Catchings and Mr. Sachs thereupon set forth their understanding as to the future relations of the two houses with regard to old business. They reiterated strongly that it was their understanding and desire, as previously set forth, that our joint relation to all Companies previously financed by the two houses was to remain exactly as it had been in the past, save that a different arrangement be entered into now with regard to the National Dairy Products Co. and later possibly with regard to Lehn & Fink. With the exception of these two Companies, the interest of the two houses on any business relating to all of our old companies was to continue on an absolutely equal basis. With regard to the National Dairy Products Co. they took the following position:

Mr. Catchings has been for many months, and is now spending a large portion of his time on the affairs of this Company. Mr. Clarence Dauphinot is doing the same. They felt that a very large part of the recent development of the Company was due to their efforts, and that this situation would continue in the future. They felt, therefore, that so far as this Company was concerned they were entitled to larger compensation in connection with any transactions that might be effected.

They felt also that the same situation might develop in Lehn & Fink, and although this had not thus far been the case, they felt that if the situation did develop in Lehn & Fink as it had in the National Dairy Products, their preferential position in that Company should also be recognized by us. They were willing, however, to leave the relations in respect of Lehn & Fink open to further discussion and until it could be ascertained whether or not their relations to this Company were of outstanding importance as compared to our own.

Mr. Catchings stated that he had discussed the National Dairy Products situation with Mr. Philip Lehman before the latter sailed for Europe, and that he had definitely stated the attitude and feelings of Goldman, Sachs & Co. in respect of this company. He advised us that in this talk he had told Mr. Philip Lehman that he thought a reasonable share of the profits in connection with the acquisition by the National Dairy Products Co. of the Philadelphia Company would be 20%, and that as Mr. Philip Lehman demurred he had agreed to give us 25% of any compensation that might be received or profits made. Both Mr. Catchings and Mr. Sachs stated that they thought in future a reasonable compensation to us on any business for or in connection with the National Dairy Products Co. would be a minimum of 15%, but that this percentage might be increased for various reasons. We pointed out that while there might be justification for their position in respect to transactions affecting neither public financing nor a financial commitment, we felt that in the Sheffield Farms matter the situation was very different because this particular transaction involved both public financing and a financial commitment. A discussion followed on this subject and Arthur and I finally asked that they set forth a definite proposal to us. Their proposal was that they would give us on any business for or in connection with the National Dairy Products Co. a minimum of 15%, but that on the specific business now under discussion they would give us a participation of 20%. Mr. Catchings and Mr. Sachs thereupon retired and Arthur and I discussed the matter. We agreed to say that we felt that we were entitled to at least 25% on this business and that if our position was not recognized we would prefer to accept their original proposal of 15% rather than the 20% which we felt was offered as a compromise and simply to satisfy us. Mr. Catchings and Mr. Sachs after consultation suggested the following: They stated that they had not sufficiently taken into account the fact that in connection with the Sheffield Farms business there was public financing and that they realized that this changed the situation.

They proposed, therefore, that with regard to that portion of the transaction which involved public financing our share be equal to theirs as it involved relations to the public in which they did not desire to have any preferential position as compared to our own; that so far as that portion of the transaction which involved a purchase of shares of the Company and which did not entail public financing, we accept a 20% participation; that on all future transactions for or in connection with the National Dairy Products Co. our interest be a minimum of 15%, but that this percentage might be larger as future conditions developed. This suggestion was accepted by us and both Arthur and I stated that in making our first suggestion it had not been our disposition to trade, and that in order to show our good faith and the fact that we were not concerned with a monetary consideration, we would be willing, now that our position with regard to public financing had been recognized by them, to have them reduce our interest in the public financing if in their opinion it was necessary to include other partners in the business. This they stated would not be necessary as they had already included another house with an interest of 10%, so that there was 90% in interest to be divided among the three original partners of the business.

We thereupon proceeded to discuss the Lehn & Fink business, and it was agreed to leave this matter in abeyance until the situation developed further. It will be proper to take this matter up again for definite disposition as soon as the relative position of the two houses in connection with this business is more clearly defined, and that the decision in connection with this business would be based on the relative activity and usefulness of our two houses to Lehn & Fink. With regard to all other businesses we agreed, as outlined above, to leave the matter exactly as it had been for so many years in the past. On all business for or in connection with the Companies which we have already financed, save those two enumerated above, the interest of our two houses will be identical. If conditions should be changed in respect to any of these Companies, the matter would be one of careful discussion between our two houses. It was agreed, however, that no change would be made to take effect except after a reasonable period from the time of the discussion, or which could be to the advantage of either house in connection with any undertaking consummated or under contemplation. This understanding was accepted by all.

After the points described above were disposed of, there was a very frank discussion participated in by all with regard to the future relations of the two houses, and suggestions were made which it is hoped will result in a better understanding of some of the matters which have troubled us. The meeting adjourned at about 1 o'clock.

MEMORANDUM OF RECENT CONVERSATIONS BETWEEN GOLDMAN, SACHS & CO. AND LEHMAN BROTHERS REGARDING THE FUTURE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN THE TWO FIRMS.

1. With respect to the corporations specified on the attached list it will be the desire of the two firms to do any financing which may arise in the future upon the basis of the same relative interest in such financing which the firms had in the original business with respect to such company. Such business shall be handled either in the office of Goldman, Sachs & Co. or in the office of Lehman Brothers as indicated on the attached list.

2. Each firm shall endeavor to maintain the present relationship of the other firm or of any of its members with the respective listed companies.

3. If any of the listed companies refuses in the future to have either firm participate in a piece of financing, the other firm will endeavor to have such excluded firm afforded a full opportunity of presenting its case; but if the corporation in question still maintains its refusal the other firm shall be free to do the business itself either alone or with other houses, offering to the other firm its participation in the profits and losses provided the company in question does not object to such offering.

4. The relationship of the two houses with respect to financing business for The National Dairy Products Corporation and for Lehn & Fink Products Company shall be as set forth in the memorandum prepared by Mr. Herbert Lehman dated October 26, 1925.

5. If the future financing results from, or pertains to a corporation resulting from, a consolidation of one or more of the corporations included in the accompanying list, and such corporation or corporations or its or their stockholders receive (including a proportionate share of what the Bankers acquire) less than one-half of the total securities, including cash, issued in connection with the consolidation, then the firm originating the consolidation shall endeavor to give the other firm an interest in the financing substantially equivalent to the proportion which such other firm's interest in the original financing of the listed corporation in question bears to the total new securities issued on the consolidation.

6. With regard to any financing not pertaining to any of the listed corporations either firm is at liberty at any time to make proposals to the other firm, but neither firm is under any commitment to the other excepting to the extent voluntarily made in each case. In thus relieving each firm of such commitments, banks or security houses committed through either firm are similarly relieved.

7. Any trading account formed by either firm in association with any of the listed corporations or any official thereof shall be managed by the firm specified on the accompanying list with respect to such corporations, but each firm shall be free to determine its relative participation in such trading account, having the option to participate in the primary profit and losses thereof up to its proportion in the original business of the two firms with respect to such corporation. Except as herein provided each firm shall be free to form and manage trading accounts in any securities of the listed corporations.

8. Wherever joint financing business is done for any of the listed corporations the names of the two firms shall be used.

9. The arrangements herein outlined are conditioned upon the observance by each firm of its obligations hereunder and upon a continuation by each of the sense of obligation arising out of the relationship of the two firms in the past.

Mr. PHILLIP LEHMAN,
16 William Street, New York, N. Y.

DEAR MR. LEHMAN: I am glad to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 25th instant, and to confirm the substitution of the following for paragraph 7 of the agreement dated January 5, 1926:

"These arrangements do not apply to trading accounts, and each firm shall be free to form and manage trading accounts in any securities of the listed corporations without offering the other a participation therein. However, if either firm acquires a block of securities of any of the listed corporations other than by purchase in the open market, or acquires an option on a block of such securities, it shall afford the other the option to participate therein up to its proportion in the original business of the two firms with respect to such corporation."

It hardly seems necessary to redraft the agreement, and I suggest that the same result can be accomplished by attaching this letter to your copy of the above mentioned agreement.

Yours very truly,

(Signed) WADDILL CATCHINGS.

[From the files of Lehman Brothers]

NEW YORK, April 22, 1930.

MESSRS. LEHMAN BROTHERS,
1 William Street, New York, N. Y.

DEAR SIRS: We enclose herewith a draft of the underwriting agreement dated April 22, 1930, which is about to be entered into between The B. F. Goodrich Company, on the one hand, and Otis & Co., Goldman, Sachs & Co. and Chase Securities Corporation, as Bankers, on the other hand, providing among other things for the underwriting by the Bankers of the proposed offering by The B. F. Goodrich Company to its stockholders of $30,000,000 of Fifteen-Year 6% Convertible Gold Debentures of The B. F. Goodrich Company at 98 and accrued interest. The three above named banking houses are jointly and severally liable for the Bankers' obligations under this underwriting agreement; and by arrangement among themselves each of the three above named banking houses has a thirty-one and one-third per cent. interest in this underwriting and Continental Illinois Company and The C-T Securities Company each has a three per cent. interest in this underwriting.

This is to confirm our understanding with you that we have subrogated to you one-half of our own interest in this original underwriting agreement (as distinct from any subsequent syndicates or groups) and that you are to share equally with us all the benefits, profits, risks, liabilities and expenses incident to our entering into said agreement on the terms above stated. It is understood that the terms of the underwriting agreement as finally executed may vary in some respects from the enclosed draft and that we shall also be free in our uncontrolled discretion to refrain from entering into any underwriting agreement if we deem advisable.

It is understood that the three above named banking houses shall be free to form such syndicates and groups for the purpose of taking over the underwriting commitment or for purchasing or disposing of any Debentures not subscribed for by the stockholders, on such terms and conditions and at such prices for the Debentures as they may in their uncontrolled discretion determine. We enclose a copy of the Underwriting Syndicate letter dated April 21, 1930, under which an underwriting syndicate is already being formed for the purpose of taking over the underwriting commitment on the terms therein stated.

Please confirm your acceptance of the foregoing by signing and returning the enclosed duplicate of this letter, whereupon it will constitute a binding agreement between us.

Very truly yours,

MESSRS. LEHMAN BROTHERS,

16 William Street, New York, N. Y.

DEAR SIRS: With reference to the contract which we are jointly to enter into with Pet Milk Company, a Delaware corporation, for the purchase, at the price of $33 per share, of 55,161 shares without par value of its common stock to be presently issued, this is to confirm our understanding with you as follows:

(1) Our two firms and our associates are respectively to have an interest in and liability under the above-mentioned contract with Pet Milk Company and in the account formed by us in connection therewith as follows:

Goldman, Sachs & Co.	33⅓%
Lehman Brothers.	33⅓%
J. S. Alexander and associates.	16⅔%
John Rovensky.	16⅔%

All profits, losses, and expenses incident to the transaction shall be treated as profits, losses and expenses of this account.

(2) Our two firms shall be joint managers of this account and of any syndicate or group formed by us for the offering of the above-mentioned shares of stock; but Goldman, Sachs & Co., acting alone and either in the names of our two firms as managers or in their own name alone, may execute the above-mentioned contract in such form, may exercise all of the authority and discretion vested in us by the terms of this agreement or otherwise in connection with this account, may give such notices under the above-mentioned contract, may make such modifications therein (whether of form or of substance), may make such compromises and settlements thereunder and may do all such things in connection therewith, as they may in their sole discretion from time to time deem advisable. The names of our two firms shall appear together in any advertisement or communication to dealers in connection with the offering or sale of the stock hereunder.

(3) We shall be authorized, for this account, to borrow money and/or stock from such persons (including ourselves) and upon such terms and conditions, and to pledge as security therefor any shares of stock or other assets held in such account, including your and our obligations hereunder, as we may in our discretion from time to time deem advisable, and to take up and pay for, and to deal with for such length of time as we may see fit, any or all of the above-mentioned shares of common stock, including the right to offer and resell, and to secure the underwriting of the resale of, any or all thereof, on a "when issued" basis or otherwise, at such prices, to or through such persons (including ourselves) or such syndicates or groups (in which we may participate and of which we may be the managers) and upon such terms and conditions as we may in our sole discretion from time to time determine, and to publish such advertisements and circulars in connection therewith as we shall in our sole discretion approve.

(4) We shall also be authorized for this account to trade in the common stock of Pet Milk Company, with full discretionary powers, subject to the limitation that the net commitment of the account at any one time, for long or short account, shall be limited to 20,000 shares (in addition to any unsold balance of the above mentioned 55,161 shares taken up and paid for by us and at the time remaining on our hands).

(5) We may call upon you, on two days' notice, to take up for carrying purposes only, your pro rata share of the stock held for this account, and we may call upon you at any time to put up collateral in such amounts as we may deem advisable.

(6) The duration of this account shall be for such period as we shall from time to time determine, but not to exceed one year from the date of our taking up and paying for the above-mentioned 55,161 shares of Common stock.

(7) At the expiration of this account, you shall take up and pay for your pro rata interest in any net long position of the account, at the net cost thereof to the account, or shall contribute your pro rata portion of the stock necessary to make good any net short position of the account. We may, however, sell any or all such shares then held for the account, or may turn over any such net short position, or any part thereof, of the account, upon such terms as we may deem advisable, to any person or group and we may participate in the purchase or taking over thereof.

If the foregoing is in accordance with your understanding, will you kindly sign and return the enclosed duplicate of this letter, whereupon it will constitute a binding agreement between us.

GENTLEMEN As of October 26, 1925, and January 5, 1926, you and we agreed to memoranda setting forth a mutual understanding that appeared to both of us equitable and satisfactory. Briefly and generally stated, these memoranda outlined the arrangements as they related to both of us and our equal participation in future financing for a list of corporations. The list embraced those corporations with which our two firms had a relationship over a great many years.

We believe we have proceeded completely in accordance with these memoranda and their spirit. The recent instances of the financing plans for Brown Shoe, National Dairy, and Endicott Johnson indicate clearly that you have not felt bound by your agreements with us, in spite of the fact that no notice has as yet been given us of the termination of the arrangement to which both firms were parties.

In view of the situation, we see no alternative for us but to inform you that inasmuch as the arrangement has not been controlling upon you for some time, we cannot accept any longer any commitment inherent within our written arrangements which we have always assumed as controlling upon us.

We feel that we have done our utmost to fulfill an arrangement which both of us had decided to continue; but we feel also that you have made further continuance of our arrangement no longer possible.

Very truly yours,

GENTLEMEN: There is enclosed a memorandum of understanding relative to possible financing for the above-named company. This memorandum was written after discussion this morning with Mr. E. R. McCarthy, Vice President of the company, who is conducting the negotiations for the company. This memorandum reflects the results of our discussion this morning, but it is not a contract, nor has it been initialed by either the company or ourselves; and it is subject to revisions which may result tomorrow from discussions with the company's counsel. The company's counsel was not present at our discussion this morning.

Certain provisions of this memorandum appear to us quite drastic and possibly not in the best interests either of the company or of the underwriters. We have in mind, therefore, the possibility of volunteering to modify certain of these provisions as the negotiations are concluded, as, for example, to provide for the call of the debentures at any time on forty-five days' notice and to provide for issuance of additional funded debt subject to restrictions as indicated on the enclosed alternative Page 3.

We believe that this prospective business should be kept as confidential as possible until the filing of the registration statement and even then we contemplate that the coupon rate on the new debentures will not be stated, but will be added to the registration statement by subsequent amendment.

We should appreciate your confirming that you are in substantial agreement with the terms of this memorandum and also that you agree that Goldman, Sachs & Co. is to receive a fee of $\frac{1}{4}\%$ of the principal amount of the debentures purchased, as compensation for services in connection with the purchase and sale of the debentures.

DEAR Mr. SACHS: The good news contained in yours of the 24th far outweighs the bad news. Naturally I am disappointed to learn that Stix, Baer & Fuller have decided to do nothing at the present time. I think we should watch it closely, as they will undoubtedly see more of this refunding, which should have a tendency to whet their appetite.

I congratulate you on the Brown Shoe Co. matter. I learned this three or four days ago and, of course, I have been sleeping well ever since. I hope it will not be necessary to take in more than one partner, (if that) and that your office will also confer with me when it comes to arranging the selling group of St. Louis dealers. You may be sure all this will be held in strict confidence until it is given to the press.

DEAR CREELY: I have your letter of June 26th.

As you probably know, Bob Horton is out in St. Louis for a day or two, helping the Brown Shoe people on their registration statement, etc. I suggest, if he is not too busy, that you try to have him give you a few minutes, so that you can give him direct your views as to the St. Louis dealers.

I don't know quite what you mean by the word "partner." We have an old contractual obligation to do this business with Lehman Bros., but they and we will be the only underwriters.

We will, of course, form a selling group, giving special consideration to St. Louis dealers, but reserving a sufficient amount for ourselves, so that we can sell quite a few bonds in St. Louis ourselves and make the selling commission. We have not worked this out in detail as yet, but our present idea is to give particular consideration in the selling group to Gatch Bros. and to Smith Moore and probably in a lesser degree to Stiefel and perhaps Francis Bros. However, you might give Horton, or if you cannot reach him, send the same on to me, your idea as to the St. Louis dealers. Naturally, this part of the work will come somewhat later, as the important thing now is to prepare the registration statement, the indenture and the prospectus, the formation of the selling group coming a little later. As things look now, we hope to be ready to sell the issue about August 1st.

MR. GEORGE W. JOHNSON,
c/o Endicott Johnson Corporation, Endicott, N. Y.

DEAR GEORGE: Supplementing our talk over the telephone last night, I thought you would be interested in learning of the reaction we got from the very best investment bankers down here as to the Endicott Johnson underwriting.

It is the custom for the house leading such a business privately to sound out by word of mouth important possible underwriters well ahead of the actual signing of the contract. We therefore approached Morgan, Stanley & Co.—this is the investment security end of J. P. Morgan & Co.—Kuhn, Loeb & Co., Brown Harriman & Co., and The First Boston Corporation. These last two concerns are the most active and leading houses in selling investment securities in the country. Every one of these concerns was delighted to be included in the business, and I think you could not help but have been pleased if you could have heard their comments regarding Endicott Johnson. Some knew more about the concern and some knew less, but instantly, when we mentioned the name, "That's a fine concern" came back the answer, and what struck me and pleased me more than anything else was the comment which we got, both from Morgan, Stanley & Co. and Kuhn, Loeb & Co., "We like that concern very much because they have an extraordinarily fine and exceptional labor policy". Frankly, I was rather surprised that some of these chaps, who, necessarily, were not close to the concern and were supposed to be "money grubbers" down here in Wall Street, should have had the appreciation, which they definitely did have,—these comments of theirs were, mind you, made absolutely out of the clear and with no suggestion or priming on my part—of what was the finest, most fundamental and lasting asset of Endicott Johnson, namely, the marvelous relation which had been built up with the workers.

Our underwriting group, then, will be, in addition to G. S. & Co., these four great houses mentioned above, and smaller amounts placed with Kidder, Peabody & Co. and W. E. Hutton & Co., this last the house with which we have done the Champion Paper and Fibre business. We are also including—naturally, in a small way—Hartley Rogers & Co., and, what I think will please them very much, are allowing their name to be listed in the final registration statement with all of the above houses. This was something which young Rogers, a nice chap, was very anxious if possible should be done. Naturally, it helps his prestige and standing.

Perhaps Mr. George F. and Charlie will be interested in the above, and if you think they would I am enclosing a copy of this letter which you could send them.

Everything is moving along well here, and we expect to file the papers in Washington for registration tomorrow.

With regards,

Truly yours,

GENTLEMEN: We have your letter of February 6, 1936.

EXHIBIT No. 1806

[From the files of Lehman Brothers. Letter from Lehman Brothers to Continental Can Company, Inc.]

SEPTEMBER 20, 1937.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS, CONTINENTAL CAN COMPANY, INC.,

New York, N. Y.

(Attention: Mr. Oscar C. Huffman, President)

DEAR SIR: We are writing to you relative to the conversation which Mr. Hancock had with Mr. Huffman on September 10.

The minor position offered to us in the presently contemplated financing of the Continental Can Company makes acceptance by us impossible. As this may represent an end to a period of long association with, and sponsorship of, your Corporation by our firm, it is a matter of deep regret to us. However, we believe that the action which we feel has been forced upon us should be also a matter of substantial concern to your Corporation, to your Directors, and to your stockholders.

Our decision has been reached after a careful review of the history of our past interest in your business, our sense of responsibility not only to you but to a great many stockholders, and our public sponsorship of your Company during years of close association.

Because of the seriousness of our concern, we are writing you at some length, and we request that this letter be read to your Directors during the course of their next meeting.

The association between the Continental Can Company and Lehman Brothers has existed for more than a quarter of a century.

In 1912 we shared equally in the leadership of the offering of 55,000 shares of Preferred stock of the Continental Can Company—the initial introduction of your securities to the investing public.

Since that time we have been associated with six separate pieces of financing for the Continental Can Company. In 1917, 20,000 shares of Common stock were underwritten. In 1923, 20,000 shares of Preferred stock were underwritten. In 1924, an offering of 66,313 Common shares was underwritten: 68,262½ Common shares in 1928, 152,917 Common shares in 1929, and 177,679 Common shares in 1936, were offered and underwritten.

In all of these individual instances of financing, our position was that of equality as to financial commitment except for a difference of one-tenth of one percent in the 1936 issue.

During these past twenty-five years, we have been equal sponsors and equal factors in the distribution of 75,000 shares of Preferred stock and approximately 500,000 shares of Common stock, aggregating in value more than $39,000,000 at the offering dates.

Within the period covered by our equal participation in the sponsorship of the securities of your Corporation, the number of stockholders has grown from a mere handful to thousands. The earnings and increase of assets due to excellent management have converted a comparatively small-sized business into one of the great industrial institutions of the country.

Philip Lehman and later Arthur Lehman served actively as Directors of your Company for a great many years. In the 18 months that have elapsed since Arthur Lehman's untimely death our firm has not been represented upon your Board. This lack of representation, as you know, was not of our choosing. It did not represent any change in the public responsibility we had assumed towards the shareholders of the business.

Over a period of twenty-five years, our association with the Company as principal bankers and our identification in the public mind as financial sponsors of your Company, gave us reason to believe that you recognized that equal relationship and responsibility. Our association was a matter of simple fact.

We make no claim to any substantial contribution to the management that has built the Continental Can Company into its present size and effectiveness; that is not the function of bankers. But we do believe that our sponsorship of your Corporation has been an important factor both in providing capital upon a proper basis for the Company's requirements and growth, and also in the distribution of its securities and the creation of increasing confidence on the part of the investing public.

This service, these years of banking association, the value of our sponsorship, have been disregarded without provocation on our part, or prior warning to us. In place of the long-established relationship as principal bankers we have been asked to accept a definitely subordinate position. Our sense of responsibility as well as our sense of dignity and of service rendered make acceptance impossible. We deeply regret the necessity of this decision, but if the suggestion made to us stands we have no alternative but to terminate our sponsorship of the securities of your Corporation.

Very truly yours,

MESSRS. LEHMAN BROTHERS,

1 William Street, New York, N. Y.

(Attention Mr. John M. Hancock)

DEAR SIR: Your letter of the twentieth instant addressed to the Board of Directors has been received, and as requested by you, has been read to them and discussed fully.

The Company has always considered Messrs. Goldman, Sachs & Company as its primary bankers. The Company's original negotiations when it was formed into a public company nearly twenty-five years ago were carried out through them and in recent years when financing was required, the preliminary terms were always arranged in the first instance with Goldman, Sachs & Company. Naturally over this period of years there have been changes in the underwriting positions, but frankly, we have never felt that this was a matter over which we should exercise any control, and we still feel that this is the proper attitude for our Company to take.

We regret exceedingly that you could not see your way clear to accept the participation offered to you in the proposed new financing. We appreciate, and always shall, the cooperation and help the Company has received from your firm during the past many years, and shall continue to entertain the same kindly feelings toward your good firm that we have always felt.

MY DEAR MR. HUFFMAN: May I take the privilege of acknowledging, on behalf of my firm, your letter of September 29, 1937.

It happens that I was a direct party to the negotiations which resulted in the first public financing of the Continental Can Company, Inc. nearly twenty-five years ago. May I therefore state upon the basis of firsthand knowledge that these negotiations with the company's officials were participated in equally by Mr. Henry Goldman and myself. The relationship between the bankers and the company was originally established upon a basis of absolute equality; and that coordinate relationship continued during the years of my service as a director of your company and for many years beyond that time.

All of this we pointed out in our letter of September twentieth. The chief purpose of my undertaking a personal answer to your letter of September 29th lies in my desire to correct your misunderstanding of the original relationship which my firm possessed with the Continental Can Company, Inc.

I would be grateful if you would inform your directors of the facts as I have stated them.

Mr. C. M. CHESTER,

*Chairman of the Board, General Foods Corporation,

DEAR CLARE: Referring to your letter enclosing the resolution of January 27 with reference to the proposed issue of preferred stock, I have given the matter considerable thought, and have concluded that there are two fundamental principles involved which I ought to lay before you.

First, the resolution contemplates that the transaction should be handled by two firms jointly, and this I believe to be fundamentally unsound and inefficient. Under present day conditions, an offering of this kind covers a wide field. There is the negotiation with the company and the determination of the characteristics of the security. There is the registration with the S. E. C., a complex matter. Also, there is the problem of syndication, which calls for expert handling. Experience confirms that this is done best if responsibility and the making of decisions are centered in one firm. The company should be called upon to deal with only one firm in the negotiations; one firm should make the primary and detailed investigation and supervise the preparation of the registration statement and the handling of it with the S. E. C., and one firm can best deal with the intricacies of syndication. The centralization of responsibility is desirable and productive of the best results. If inefficiency and delay, and all the other evils of divided authority and responsibility are to be avoided, joint management must develop into formalism, with one party the real manager; and for many reasons that usually is undesirable.

Secondly, the resolution seems to contemplate that the manager of the syndicate shall not be compensated for management by the other members of the syndicate. What I have said above will summarize the amount of labor that the manager of the syndicate has to perform. It is unthinkable that all members of the syndicate should go through all the steps; it would be unworkable, inefficient and extremely expensive. This work requires special training and experience, and an organization qualified to handle it. No house could afford such an organization if the work had to be performed without compensation. Certainly, it is desirable from every aspect that one of the underwriting houses should perform this service on behalf of all, and it is only fair that the house that does the work should be compensated for its services and the others should pay for the time and labor that they save. The so-called "management fee," that is, the payment made by the members of the syndicate to one of their number, is truly compensation for services performed, and is in no sense a profit such as was the amount that the originators of the business took in former days as the originator's profit.

Not only would it be unfair to do away with this compensation, but it would be unwise to do so. If it were eliminated from this transaction, there is no reason why it should not be eliminated from other transactions. The fact could not be kept secret, for it would have to be shown with the papers filed with the S. E. C., and the world would know it. In other transactions objection would be made to the payment when it was known that the compensation was not paid in this transaction. I ask you to think what the result would be if such compensation were entirely eliminated. If all underwriting houses received exactly the same, regardless of whether they did all the work or not, who would want or could afford to do all this work? What houses could afford to maintain expert and highly-trained organizations, if they would receive nothing more than the houses that did not? It would inevitably mean that the work of the investment banker would be done more poorly and more inefficiently. Frankly, I can think of few things as damaging in the public interest as would be the elimination of compensation to the managing house. For my own part, I would not want to see my firm a party to the establishment of this kind of a precedent, and I feel confident that, upon reflection, you would not want to be a party to it.

Therefore, I urge upon you the reconsideration of these matters, and would greatly appreciate an opportunity to discuss it with you further.

Sincerely yours,

SIDNEY J. WEINBERG.

Mr. C. M. CHESTER,

*Chairman of the Board, General Foods Corporation,

DEAR CLARE: The attached letter I had prepared some days ago but held up the same upon your kind consent to allow me additional time, pending an attempt on our part to compose our differences with Messrs. Lehman Brothers in regard to this business as well as other businesses, concerning which there have been controversies in the past.

We set forth our position clearly to Lehman Brothers and went a long way in offering a solution consistent with sound business principles, but we have been unable to make any progress. Mr. Robert Lehman was away until Wednesday of this week, and left the city again last evening, and his firm has declined to act in his absence. In view of your request for promptness, we thought that we had no right to further delay our reply. Hence, I am now sending you my original letter which states these sound principles of handling businesses of the type in question. In these principles we firmly believe.

At the risk of repetition I now state our position and the conditions on which we are prepared to go forward with your business:

1. That the negotiations, the preparation of all papers and the syndication be handled by Goldman, Sachs & Co. alone.
2. That out of the gross spread between the purchase price of the securities and the sale price to the public, the other underwriters pay Goldman, Sachs & Co. compensation for the work of management of the business, as outlined in my other letter.
3. That Lehman Brothers be offered a participation in the underwriting equal to our own.
4. That we agree that Lehman Brothers' name in the prospectus may be on the same line as our own—our name on the left, theirs on the right; and that they may have their name on the syndicate letters if they so desire.

As the Resolution of the Board of January 27, 1938, provided that if our two firms could not reach an agreement you would do the prospective financing elsewhere, I now hope that you will reconsider the matter in the light of these letters. I cannot tell you how much I regret that the differences between Messrs. Lehman Brothers and ourselves have caused you an inconvenience.

Sincerely yours,

SIDNEY J. WEINBERG.

[From the files of Lehman Brothers. Letter from Robert Lehman to National Dairy Products Corporation]

FEBRUARY 18, 1936.

Mr. THOMAS H. MCINNERNEY,
President, National Dairy Products Corporation,
120 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

MY DEAR MR. MCINNERNEY:—I herewith tender my resignation as a director of National Dairy Products Corporation, for acceptance by the Board of Directors. I should appreciate it if you would have this letter read to the Board as a statement of the reasons for my action.

The firm Lehman Brothers was one of the three original bankers for your Corporation and responsible for its organization in 1924. For several years past, my firm, together with Goldman Sachs & Co., have been the two sole investment bankers for your Corporation. While Goldman Sachs & Co. have handled the details in their office, the two firms have dealt with your Corporation and all contracts with your Corporation have been executed by both of our firms, each assuming direct liability to your Corporation.

On a number of occasions in 1935, Goldman Sachs & Co. advised my firm of the contemplated financing by your Corporation. We had conferences with them and collaborated with them in working out a proposed plan of financing. We did not communicate directly with you but they advised us that they were negotiating with you in the matter in behalf both of themselves and ourselves.

About January 9, 1936, Goldman Sachs & Co. advised us that they had arranged with National Dairy Products Corporation that they should receive an overwriting fee of $\frac{3}{8}\%$ (about \$240,000.) upon the proposed financing, and that we would receive no share in such overwriting fee but that we would be permitted to participate in the underwriting upon identically the same basis as other investment bankers would be offered participations (except that our name would appear with theirs on the top line of any prospectus and that we would be joint syndicate managers with them). We protested to them that this proposal not only was a clear violation of a written agreement dated January 5, 1926, which existed between Goldman Sachs & Co. and ourselves, but wholly apart from that was an unwarranted attempt to deprive us of the position which we had had over many years as one of the two bankers of the Corporation on a parity with Goldman Sachs & Co.

The agreement provided generally for equal participation but there was an exception as to National Dairy, in which case my firm was entitled to an interest smaller in amount than Goldman Sachs & Co.'s interest but on the identical basis. In discussing the agreement with Mr. Weinberg on September 13, 1935, Mr. Hancock was told that "the interests will be equal" in any National Dairy financing, (though it must be pointed out that this discussion was not embodied in a modification of the agreement, as a general modification was under discussion).

We believe that your Corporation will not wish to take the position that the sole question involved is a dispute between Goldman Sachs & Co. and ourselves and a violation by them of their agreement with us, to which National Dairy Products Corporation is not a party. This would not seem to be a sound position for even if there had been no agreement between the banking firms, National Dairy will rightly desire to treat its bankers fairly but it is taking sides in the dispute between Goldman Sachs & Co. and ourselves by deciding to deal with Goldman Sachs & Co. as its bankers and to the exclusion of my firm and instead of, as in the past, with Goldman Sachs & Co. and ourselves jointly as its two bankers. This does not mean that we have insisted that the overwriting fee must be divided equally between the two firms; the question as to what is a fair division of the fee is a matter for consideration by all three parties involved. We have, however, insisted that, as one of the two bankers of your Corporation, we are as a matter of principle entitled to some share in the overwriting fee.

I cannot agree with you that (his matter has gone so far that it cannot be and should not be reopened, but if that is the position of your company, I am forced to the conclusion that National Dairy Products Corporation has, by its action, terminated our relationship with it as one of its two bankers. This termination we deeply regret in view of our long years of pleasant association with you and with the Corporation.

Under these circumstances, I think that there is no other course for me to pursue than to tender my resignation as a director of the Corporation.

With kindest personal regards, I am

Very sincerely yours,

(Initialed:) R. L.

MAY 18, 1937.

Mr. C. R. PALMER,

Cluett, Peabody & Co., 10 East 40th Street, New York City.

MY DEAR BOB:—I received your very kindly personal note last Friday and I appreciate it a great deal. I didn't like to bother you at all on your trip except to put before you the single question whether you knew any reason why this proposed financing should not be handled on a basis of equality for the two banking firms—equality in the amount of the underwriting as well as in prestige and standing that comes from the banking relationship to such a company as Cluett Peabody. You knew of no reason for not doing this and yet it hasn't worked out that way. I am forthright enough to say that I am very disappointed and fair enough to say that I think this unfair act was not intentionally and knowingly done to me by you and R. O. in any realization of the effects of your actions. I have left a wrong impression if you feel that I have any complaint over the fact that I learned of the financing through R. O. and not through you. At most such a complaint would be purely technical and would not go to the merits of the case. I have no such personal complaint and I am sorry to have given any such impression. In the hope of avoiding any possible misunderstanding arising from this present situation, I want to put my position squarely before you. I want to view the facts solely from the point of view of the company's best interests and when my self interest might be a factor in my conclusions you will be able to judge whether my conclusions are not also in the interest of Cluett Peabody.

There are only two principal questions worth discussing, and I have tried to keep my comment focused on them:

1. What was the best financing plan for Cluett Peabody, involving necessarily its relations to its bankers.
2. Procedure for determining the answer to that question, involving Cluett's relation to its directors.

The two are closely related.

First as to the facts, I understand that the financing plan was arrived at by you on behalf of the company, with the help, counsel and concurrence of R. O. and Green, and that a memorandum agreement was made without the previous knowledge or authorization of the Board, acting as such, or of its individual members.

Neither I nor my firm was consulted on the matter until a conclusion was reached and at that time I admittedly had the right to approve or oppose. I wasn't in a position to approve the plan in principle for I hadn't been a party to the discussions and I wasn't satisfied that a better plan than a stock split-up and offering of rights could be presented to and accepted by the members of the Board who also had not been in any previous discussions. I do not question the stock split-up. The Lehman Corporation is now doing the same thing. I did question whether the whole financial situation of the company and particularly as it involves its future dividend policy was considered sufficiently. I do feel that the question of calling the preferred stock should have been very carefully considered and that is such an important question it deserved the careful consideration of the whole board.

If the board at its last meeting did carefully consider and decide that the stock split-up and offering of rights was best, then it should have considered its relations to its bankers and how best to use them for Cluett's benefit.

After three men, you, G. A. Cluett and E. H. Cluett, all separately told me that none knew a reason why the financing should not be handled on a basis of equality of the two banking firms represented on the board, and after R. O. told me on Tuesday afternoon that the board would drop the financing unless it were so worked out, and after Green and I both advised that there was no interference to the company plans in a week's delay in which this equal basis could be agreed upon, I was confronted on Wednesday, May 12, with a statement that the board had changed its mind and had decided to go ahead on its original plan which subordinated us to the other firm.

I am ready to accept the opinion of the Cluett board as to what is best for Cluett in connection with its relations with bankers, if the facts are examined before a decision is reached. In this case I doubt that the facts were looked into, and sometime I want you to learn more about them.

In the course of the discussions some matters have arisen which I think are worth further consideration so I am going to present one. R. O. referred to the fact that our difference with Goldman Sachs put Cluett in a squeeze. I told him that I was sorry Cluett was in that position but that I had not put it there, but rather Cluett had put itself there by not consulting with me or the board at an early date and before it made any commitment to Goldman Sachs. I think you will find R. O. agrees with my position on this. I did not say to him at the time but it is obvious that Goldman Sachs is using Cluett in its dispute with us. It is also obvious that Cluett chose to squeeze me and be itself squeezed by submitting to an unfair demand rather than squeeze the men making the unfair demand. If he threatened to resign in case Cluett did not give him undisputed leadership in its financing, did he not control the Cluett financing by the threat which the Board undoubtedly felt would, if carried out, harm the company. After the Board took its position Tuesday and when it reversed its position Wednesday in the face of that threat, Cluett surrendered its judgment to a man who was willing to harm Cluett for his own purposes. Instead of threatening to resign as I too might have done, I made no demands and it now seems that I get the rough end of the stick because I was reasonable in my request for an equal position. The man who would not work on this basis does not claim to me that my suggestion of a fair plan was not fair. He only asserts that he owes no consideration to Lehman Bros. and that he will not do what I proposed. If my suggestion was not fair, in fact, then he should object to it on that ground. I did not feel that I was asking him to do me or my firm a favor. I felt I was asking him to do what Cluett wanted done.

I have been given no reason and I know of none why my position is not fair. The net fact is that one man will not accept my suggestion, regardless of its fairness, and he governs the action of the Cluett board. When the board reversed its former position and accepted his demand it made a decision in effect that my suggestion was not in the best interest of Cluett to accept, and it may have concluded that my suggestion was not a fair one. I do not accept either conclusion as sound, or soundly arrived at.

Now as to the purely personal aspects of the situation. It was personally embarrassing to be left out of the discussions but that is a very minor point. The main point is whether the action taken by Cluett is wise and sound and in Cluett's best interest. I have no desire to dominate any industrial company as to its financing, but I do object to being asked to ratify a plan arrived at as this one was. In all the talk of the last year that "directors must direct" and of the present day that "bankers must not dominate industrial companies" I feel there was need for very careful handling of the problem and I do not see that this case had that kind of handling.

It is quite impossible for me to review all the minor points of discussion in this letter but I am glad to go over them at your convenience as R. O. has asked me to do. There are several statements and impressions about my firm—that R. O. has heard—that deserve correction.

R. O. has asked me to "go along" and I have given no answer. I have only promised fair consideration of whatever may be offered to us. So far as I can see now, any action will be based on the facts as they appear at the time but I must be clear that the present situation appears thoroughly unsatisfactory.

Yours,

JOHN M. HANCOCK.

COPY OF LETTER TO MR. SANFORD L. CLUETT, TROY, NEW YORK

WILLIAMSTOWN, MASS., May 13, 1937.

DEAR SANFORD: I hesitated for some time the other day before calling you on the telephone regarding the proposed new financing and I did so finally only because Mr. John Hancock of Lehman Brothers had urged me to do so. Since my retirement from business some ten years ago, I have endeavored scrupulously to avoid offering advice or making suggestions to those who are now directing the affairs of the company. In this particular instance, I thought best to call you, as it often happens that the active directors of a company are not familiar with arrangements or commitments entered into by their predecessors.

At the time the present company was organized through the joint efforts of Lehman Brothers and Goldman, Sachs and Co., a representative of each banking firm was elected to the board. It was clearly understood at the time that each firm would have a voice in the financial affairs of the company and that any new financing that the company might be called upon to do in the future would be handled by both firms.

Shortly after the Armistice, when our company was carrying huge inventories and owing something over eleven million dollars, it was necessary to get our bankers to intercede in our behalf with certain New York banks. Mr. Gillespie and I spent a great deal of time in New York endeavoring to establish new lines of credit and we were turned down by almost every bank we appealed to. One bank, the Hanover, more than met our request and several others came to the rescue only after appeals from Mr. Catching and Mr. Philip Lehman. The latter put up a great fight for us and finally secured the funds that we required. At another time, Mr. Lehman bought outright ten thousand shares of our unissued preferred stock in order to provide the company with needed funds. At another time, when Mr. Peabody sold a large block of his stock to Lehman Brothers, Mr. Lehman voluntarily turned over to those of us who were in a trading agreement with him one half the profit made through the sale of this stock. There are many other instances that I could enumerate showing the fine service we have had from Lehman Brothers in the past, but I cannot see that anything would be gained by it at this time.

My only concern is over the fact that our company is starting out on new and untried paths with little if any regard for old commitments. The company has had a wonderful record for fair and honorable dealing over a long period of years and it is very disquieting to see that record tarnished.

Affectionately,

Signed by: G. A. CLUETT.

Mr. JOHN HANCOCK,

New York City.

DEAR MR. HANCOCK: Thank you for your letter of May 19 enclosing copy of a letter from you to Mr. C. R. Palmer. I am quite in accord with the position you have taken and I regret very much that Cluett Peabody and Co. has taken the action that it has.

I enclose for your confidential information copy of a letter I wrote to Mr. Sanford L. Cluett, setting forth my own position in regard to the proposed new financing of the company. This letter followed a telephone conversation in which I urged that Lehman Brothers be given exactly the same treatment as it was proposed to give Goldman Sachs.

I also enclose a letter to me from Mr. Sanford L. Cluett for your confidential information and which I will ask you please to return to me.

As I have been out of business for ten years, I would not think of offering advice or giving an opinion as regards the new financing. My only concern is to have the company live up to its commitments as it has always done in the past and to have it maintain an unblemished record for fair dealing.

With my kind regards, I am,

Sincerely yours,

In connection with business which may eventuate for the companies designated on the attached list or their successors:

(1) Whenever the first house is to receive more than fifty percent of the management fee, it shall conduct the negotiations, act as the sole representative of the underwriters, have full authority to agree on terms, have charge of the registration and syndication, and its name shall appear first in all syndicate papers and advertisements. The first house shall advise the second house of the progress of the business. The second house is to have an opportunity to collaborate in matters relating to registration to an extent commensurate with its responsibilities. Subject to paragraph (3), the second house, if it wishes, shall have an underwriting participation up to that of any other participant, including the first house, and a proportionate selling group participation, shall appear as the joint syndicate manager in all papers and publicity as released by the first house, shall appear in the second position in all advertisements, the two names to be the only names appearing on the first line, except in unusual circumstances, and the management compensation shall be divided in accordance with the percentages indicated.

(2) Whenever the management fee is to be equally divided between the two houses, then in addition to the above, the two houses are to appear and sign all papers as joint representatives of the underwriters, and the first house will consult with the second house to an extent consistent with the best interests of the business in the judgment of the first house and the first house will also consult with the second house as to the progress of the business.

(3) The inclusion of the second house in a particular piece of business, and if included, its position in such business, is subject to acquiescence on the part of the Company involved and subject to pre-existing rights of any other house. Both houses are to use their best efforts so that the basis of mutual participation may be as set forth above. However, to the extent that such arrangements may not be acceptable to the Company involved the first house may proceed with the particular business independently of the second house.

(4) These arrangements may be terminated by either house at any time after January 1, 1939 upon three months' written notice to the other house.

BANKERS TRUST COMPANY.

GENTLEMEN: The Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Company, an Ohio corporation, having its principal office at Cleveland, Ohio, is engaged principally in mining, shipping and marketing iron ore from its iron ore mines in the upper peninsula of Michigan and elsewhere on the iron ranges of the Lake Superior district.

The Cliffs Corporation, an Ohio corporation, having its principal office at Cleveland, Ohio, is engaged principally in the business of holding stocks for investment purposes and is the owner of all the common stock of the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Company and large blocks of stocks of companies engaged in the manufacture of steel, which are also consumers of iron ore.

The Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Company has outstanding current secured indebtedness aggregating approximately twenty-five million two hundred thousand dollars ($25,200,000) which is held chiefly by a group of eight (8) creditor banks. All of said indebtedness is secured by a collateral trust indenture (entitled "Extension Indenture"), executed by The Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Company to The Union Trust Company, as Trustee, dated January 23, 1933 (The Union Trust Company having since been succeeded by The Cleveland Trust Company, as Trustee) and supplements to said indenture and certain of said indebtedness is primarily secured by other instruments of pledge referred to in said Extension Agreement Indenture. Under a Supplemental Agreement dated January 23, 1935, said indebtedness has been extended until July 23, 1935 upon the same terms and with the same force and effect in all respects as are set forth in said original Extension Indenture, with provision for a further extension for a period of five (5) years upon the terms and conditions set forth in said Supplemental Agreement.

The Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Company contemplates negotiations by which The Cliffs Corporation will be merged or consolidated with The Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Company and the merged or consolidated company will own and hold all of the property, assets and business of both companies, and will be liable for the payment of all the debts and liabilities and the performance of all the obligations of both companies.

The Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Company upon consummation of said merger or consolidation, and as a part thereof, proposes to create an issue of twenty-four million dollars ($24,000,000) principal amount of First Mortgage and Collateral Trust Fifteen-Year Serial Bonds (hereinafter sometimes called the "bonds") of the kind and character hereinafter described; and subject to the conditions set forth below, and upon your acceptance hereof, hereby constitutes and appoints you its sole agent for the purpose of procuring a syndicate or group of responsible investors (hereinafter called the "Underwriters") who will, prior to the consummation of said merger or consolidation, and subject thereto, purchase or agree to underwrite the sale of all of said issue of bonds at their principal amount and accrued interest.

The conditions of your appointment as Agent hereunder are as follows:

1. The merger or consolidation of The Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Company and The Cliffs Corporation referred to above shall be effected under the laws of the State of Ohio by a sale of assets and liquidation or by merger or consolidation proceedings, to the end that all of the properties and assets of each of said corporations shall be vested in the resulting or continuing corporation, which shall assume and be liable for all of the debts and obligations of each of said corporations, such sale, merger or consolidation to be effected on terms satisfactory to the stockholders of each of said corporations.

2. The First Mortgage and Collateral Trust Fifteen-Year Serial Bonds shall be of an authorized principal amount of twenty-four million dollars ($24,000,000); shall be dated as of the first day of the calendar month in which the merger or consolidation above referred to is consummated; shall mature fifteen (15) years thereafter; shall be payable in lawful currency of the United States of America; shall bear interest at the rate of five per cent. (5%) per annum, payable in like currency semi-annually; shall mature serially as set forth on Schedule "A" attached hereto and made a part hereof; shall be issued under an indenture of mortgage to Bankers Trust Company, as Trustee; shall be redeemable as set forth on Schedule "B" attached hereto and made a part hereof; shall constitute a first mortgage lien upon the physical properties and leasehold interests of the merged or consolidated company and a first lien upon the securities of the merged or consolidated company presently pledged under the Extension Indenture and the securities acquired by virtue of said merger or consolidation.¹ The indenture shall contain appropriate provisions for the sale or other disposition of physical properties which are not essential to the regular conduct and operation of the company's business and the application of the proceeds of such sales either for replacement purposes, if so required, or for the retirement of bonds. The indenture will also contain appropriate provisions permitting the sale of collateral for use in meeting serial maturities or otherwise retiring the bonds. The indenture will also contain such other customary and usual provisions as shall be agreed upon between you and ourselves.

3. We will, upon your written request, cause the bonds to be fully registered under the Securities Act of 1933 and upon similar request will make application to list the same upon the New York Stock Exchange and we will cooperate with you in the preparation of prospectuses, sales literature or such other information as is customarily required in connection with the sale of securities and the qualification of the same under various Blue Sky Laws. It is understood between us that the question of listing the other securities of the merged or consolidated company upon a stock exchange or exchanges will be a matter for further discussion between us.

4. We will furnish satisfactory evidence showing that the merged or consolidated company has a good and merchantable title to substantially all of the real estate owned by The Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Company, which evidence shall consist of opinions of counsel experienced in the law of the states where such real estate is located, based upon an examination of abstracts of title brought down to date.

5. All legal proceedings in connection with the merger or consolidation or sale of assets above referred to; the creation, issuance and sale of the bonds; the execution and delivery of the indenture securing the same; the registration and qualification of the bonds; the validity of titles to properties [see 4 above] and all other proceedings in connection with the transaction herein contemplated shall be subject to the approval of your counsel.

6. All expenses in connection with the merger or consolidation, the creation, issuance and sale of the bonds, the execution, delivery and recording of the indenture securing the same, and the registration and qualification of the bonds, including, without limiting the foregoing, printing, preparation of securities, stamp taxes, recording fees, qualification expenses, accounting expenses, counsel fees and all other expenses in connection with the transactions herein contemplated shall be borne by the merged or consolidated company.

7. You are to use your best efforts to secure a group or syndicate of investors who will purchase the entire issue of said bonds as above stated, or who will enter into an underwriting agreement in form acceptable to us for the purchase of the entire issue of said bonds. You shall not be liable under any conditions for your failure to secure the group or syndicate referred to above or for the purchase yourselves or for the underwriting of all or any part of said bonds, although you may, if you so desire, purchase such amount of said bonds as may be arranged between you and the Underwriters. Upon the purchase by said group or syndicate of the entire issue of said bonds or upon the sale of said entire issue of bonds under said underwriting agreement, we agree to pay you for your services hereunder, in cash, a fee of one per cent. (1%) of the entire principal amount of said bonds. In the event for any reason the proposed merger or consolidation above referred to shall not be brought about or said purchase or sale of such bonds shall not be effected, we will reimburse you for all your expenses, including counsel fees, incurred in connection with carrying out this agreement on your part.

8. If the purchase of the entire issue of said bonds or the execution of said underwriting agreement as hereinabove provided is not consummated by September 1, 1935, either party hereto may cancel this agency agreement and all obligations thereunder (except our obligation to pay your expenses as in the preceding section provided) upon giving five (5) days' written notice of such intention to the other.

This letter is written in duplicate and, if agreeable to you, you will please sign the acceptance clause on both copies and return one signed copy to us.

Yours truly,

Subject to approval of the Board of Directors.

THE CLEVELAND-CLIFFS IRON CO.

INTER-OFFICE LETTER

Subject:

Reference:

CLEVELAND, OHIO, June 23, 1935.

BRIEF SUMMARY OF NEGOTIATIONS WITH BANKERS TRUST COMPANY, REPRESENTED THROUGHOUT BY MR. B. A. TOMPKINS, AND AT TIMES BY DANA KELLY AND MR. GRAHAM, AND ALSO LEHMAN BROTHERS REPRESENTED BY MR. GUTMAN AND MR. SZOLD

About the middle of January both Mr. Keldel and Mr. Ardrey asked the writer if he would be interested in funding the bank indebtedness which then amounted to over $25,000,000, by creating a long-time bond issue. The writer replied that he would. They then said the Analysis Department had worked on the plan, having in mind an issue of bonds equal to the bank loan, of which the present bank creditors would take the first $5,000,000 or $6,000,000 and the balance of the issue would be sold wholesale to life insurance companies or investment trusts. They stated that if I were interested I should see Mr. B. A. Tompkins Vice President of the Bankers Trust Company in charge of their Bond Department.

The writer was then calling on our bank creditors trying to find a common ground for a five-year extension of the bank loan. He therefore said that he felt that any negotiations for the funding should be undertaken only after the five-year extension was secured from the banks, if that were possible, and said that as soon as the bank extension had been granted he would return and discuss the matter with Mr. Tompkins. As the writer recalls it, the bankers, on the 24th of January, gave the company a six months' extension in which to bring about a merger of Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company and Cliffs Corporation, and if this merger were effected the Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company was to receive a five-year extension, the rate of interest being 5% the first year, 5½% the second year, and 6% thereafter, the interest being arranged in this order to make it an added incentive for the company to fund its debt.

A few days after the extension was granted the writer returned to New York and took the matter up with Mr. Tompkins and his associates. After several days of negotiations it was agreed that the writer would return and recommend a bond issue amounting to not more than $25,000,000, bearing interest at 5%, to be sold at par, the Bankers Trust Company to receive 1% commission for acting as our agent. The issue was to be serial, maturities and call price all being in accordance with a contract dated January 31st executed by the writer, subject to the approval of the Board of Directors of the Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company, and accepted for the Bankers Trust Company by Mr. Tompkins. At the time this contract was drawn the writer assumed that he would take it to Cleveland and submit it to the Board and execute it only after approval by the Board. Mr. Tompkins objected to this procedure and wanted the writer to sign it at this time. I explained to him that I had no authority to do so and that my signature would not be binding on the company and would only be a matter of good faith on my part to exert my best efforts to secure the approval of the Board. Mr. Tompkins stated this was entirely agreeable to him and wanted it signed with that understanding. After some further protest the writer signed the instrument but wrote in above his signature "Subject to the approval of the Board of Directors."

A few days later the writer returned to Cleveland and was very shortly asked to join officials of Republic Steel and Corrigan McKinney in going to Washington. On February 7th while in Washington we learned of the bringing of the suit by the Department of Justice to enjoin the merger of Republic and Corrigan McKinney, in which suit the Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company was named one of the defendants. Our counsel, Mr. Belden, at once advised the writer that until the case was tried we should have no negotiations looking toward the merger. Consequently, the matter would be delayed until after the trial.

After the announcement of the litigation, the writer returned to New York and discussed the suit with Mr. Tompkins and he agreed that the litigation was not vital to the funding and would not interfere with it. After the writer's return to Cleveland he reported this to Oscar L. Cox, Harris Creech, W. P. Belden, and Wm. G. Mather.

Judge Raymond rendered his decision on May 3rd which was a complete victory for the defendants. Shortly after this Mr. Tompkins and Mr. Gutman both got in touch with the undersigned and desired to renew discussions regarding the financing. The writer submitted the matter to Mr. Belden, and after consulting with the steel companies he advised the writer that there was no harm in negotiating with the investment houses or stockholders, but that he wanted no formal steps to be taken in the matter pending an effort on the part of the attorneys for the steel company to secure a promise on the part of the Department of Justice not to appeal their case.

During May the writer had a number of conferences with the Bankers Trust Company, Lehman Brothers, and Hayden Stone with reference to this financing, as a result of which a number of changes were made in the proposed plan both as to changing the bond to a sinking fund rather than a serial issue, rearranging the call prices, and considering an alternative rate of 4½% rather than a 5% issue as originally agreed upon, and other matters connected with the issue.

About the middle of June both Mr. Tompkins and Mr. Gutman showed great interest in the legal status with reference to the Republic-Corrigan McKinney merger. Therefore the writer made an appointment with the Bankers Trust Company and Lehmann Brothers to meet with Mr. Belden and himself and discuss these matters. At this meeting the writer was informed that the investment houses had some doubt in their minds as to the wisdom of bringing out an issue for retail sale to the public, of a company which was a defendant in a suit brought by the government notwithstanding their confidence in the final outcome of the litigation. They stated that the uninformed investor would be puzzled by the matter and there would be increased sales resistance. The only other way to obviate it would be to hold the issue on their shelves until the final termination of the litigation. The writer called their attention to the fact that Tompkins and he had discussed this in February following the bringing of the suit, and that it was agreed by both that the litigation was not of vital importance to Cleveland Cliffs Iron and that the funding would not be predicated on the favorable disposal of the litigation prior to the offering of the bonds. Mr. Tompkins did not contradict this statement although he inferred there might be some misunderstanding on his part with reference to that. The writer has since made this statement emphatically before the Lehman Brothers representatives and Mr. Tompkins since the first time has never taken any different point of view. They indicated that if the suit stood when the bonds were ready to be sold that they would have to adjust the price downwards to meet the sales resistance. The writer stated that this was not satisfactory and he did not think it was in compliance with the terms of the informal contract between Mr. Tompkins and himself. The writer then demanded that they decide whether or not the Republic-Corrigan McKinney merger was a sine quo non of their carrying out of the informal contract. Mr. Tompkins stated frankly he did not want to pass on that but wanted to wait the outcome. The writer objected to this. Mr. Gutman then suggested that the merger of Cleveland Cliffs and Cliffs Corporation be undertaken based on the five-year bank extension, with the assurance that they were glad to go ahead when the suit was favorably disposed of, and that the funding would then replace the five-year extension. The writer replied that this could undoubtedly have been accomplished in January or February, but the funding having been discussed with the creditor banks and large stockholders, it would be very difficult to go back to a less advantageous plan especially to secure the approval to the merger of those stockholders of Cliffs Corporation who had no Cleveland Cliffs Iron preferred. It was argued that with whatever contact we had with Washington it might be easier to secure their approval of a Cleveland Cliffs-Cliffs Corporation merger based on a five-year extension than on a Wall Street funding operation.

After considerable argument the writer agreed to return and see our largest Cliffs Corporation stockholder not interested in the preferred stock, namely, Mr. Wachner, Receiver for Continental Shares. The writer found Mr. Wachner was away and would not return until the 20th of June, and was fortunate in seeing him as soon as he returned to the city. Mr. Belden was also present at our conference. The writer endeavored to secure Mr. Wachner's approval on behalf of Continental Shares' holding in Cliffs Corporation to the merger based on the five-year bank extension and met with considerable resistance. Continuing to press the matter the writer was surprised to have Mr. Belden support Mr. Wachner's point of view. Later on in discussing the matter with Mr. Belden and expressing surprise at Mr. Belden's attitude, the latter said that he felt that any further pressure put on Mr. Wachner to secure his approval based on the five-year extension, was bound to be unsuccessful and might even prevent our securing his approval of the merger based on the funding. He said that as he watched the discussion he became alarmed and felt it was necessary to indicate to me not to make any further efforts. It was evident that Mr. Wachner was not as favorable to the merger under any circumstances as he had been in our conferences held a month or so previous.

The writer has had many conferences with Mr. Belden, Mr. Wm. G. Mather, and two or three of our bank creditors including E. E. Brown, O. L. Cox, and Harris Creech, and all concurred in the writer's view that there was only one thing to do and that was to return promptly to New York, make an appointment with the Bankers Trust Company and Lehman Brothers and advise them that a merger based on the five-year extension was out of the question, and that it was necessary for the Bankers Trust Company and Lehman Brothers to decide whether they wanted to take the issue irrespective of the Republic-Corrigan McKinney litigation or whether they preferred to have the contract lapse, as, if the present market conditions changed and no effort was made to avail ourselves of the present easy money and the market for securities, that it would seem to indicate negligence on the part of the Cleveland Cliffs management. Consequently, the writer made an appointment with Mr. Tompkins, Mr. Gutman and Mr. Szold and met with them on June 27th in Mr. Tompkins' office. The writer presented the matter first to Mr. Tompkins and again in the same terms to the three men.

JULY 5, 1935.

MR. W. P. BELDEN,
Richford, Tioga County, New York.

DEAR WILLIAM PATCH: I enclose copy of a letter just received from Tommy Tompkins. I slightly changed your letter to him calling his attention to the fact that the informal contract required him to take the bonds at a point off a 5% basis unless the general market condition had meanwhile changed. You will note in his reply that he has ignored this portion of the letter but he does concede our point that we should have a voice in settling the price if it is changed.

I think we can sum up the difference between my point of view and Tompkins' as follows, that I claim the price is fixed unless the general bond market changes, while he claims the price is fixed unless conditions, say this suit or any other matter that pertains to this company, make it impossible or even difficult for them to sell this particular bond on that basis. If the necessary spread to pay the offering houses would put the price of the bond too high to sell it they then think the price of a 5% bond should be lowered to say 97 less 1%, which would give them four points for profit to the issuing houses.

I would suggest that you give this matter careful thought, and also the following situation. At the Cliffs Corporation meeting this morning, Wachner and White being present, Mr. Eaton made a long speech on the financing, questioning me carefully for maybe half an hour. The points he made were, first, that he thought the price was too high, second, he thought that it might be possible to sell the issue on the assets of Cleveland Cliffs Iron alone without the Cliffs Corporation, and third, he was not sure that Cliffs Corporation was getting enough. In the end he seemed to be partially convinced that the deal was fair for Cliffs Corporation, but he still felt that we should make an effort to finance Cleveland Cliffs Iron on its own. My observation, which is concurred in by both Mr. Mather and Mr. Gaffine, with whom I have talked, was that Eaton was actuated by a desire to hold up the deal by influencing Wachner and White against it and then have us take steps to see that he is taken care of in the deal with the understanding that he withdraw his objections and possibly help us to convince Wachner and White. In other words, he wants to put a monkey wrench in the machinery to either get a new deal in which he would be a participant or to have one of the participants offer him part of their share with the tacit understanding that he secure the approval of the companies in which he was formerly so much interested, namely, Continental Shares and Commonwealth Securities. Had his motive been entirely sincere I think he would have talked with Mr. Mather and me outside of the directors meeting. I called him in my room afterwards and asked him to give me the benefit of his suggestions how we could finance on better terms. He did not seem to have any ideas or could he recommend any house he knew of that could finance us on better terms. While he himself had no ideas, Burwell remained after the Cleveland Cliffs Iron meeting this afternoon. He referred to Cyrus' views expressed at the morning meeting, asked for some comparative figures, and said he was going to write me and give me his views. This is just another complication to a situation already difficult and badly mixed up.

It is my plan now to go to New York next Tuesday or Wednesday night. I am inclined to feel you should be there, at least one day. Maybe I could go down and get it started and send for you, but preferably I would like to go over the matter with you before I see the others.

I do not know whether I have told you or not, but Steele Mitchell is prepared to recommend something entirely new. I have rather kept away from it feeling that each new move would bring new difficulties.

I am more than ever convinced that Tompkins' idea is to string this along, writing indefinite letters, trying to get us up to August 12th without reaching any decision. Maybe I am wrong, but that is the idea that sticks in my suspicious mind.

I suggest that after you have read this letter you call me up, reversing the charges, as I would like to get your views.

Sincerely yours,

EBG JS

JUNE 13, 1935.

Memorandum:

Being in New York to attend another directors meeting, I was given an appointment at luncheon by Mr. Tompkins. The meeting was held in the private dining room on the top floor at the Bankers Trust Company yesterday. There were present: B. A. Tompkins, Dana Kelley, and Mr. Graham of the Bankers Trust Company, and the undersigned.

After preliminaries, Mr. Tompkins asked whether I had received his letter and whether it was satisfactory. I told him it was a very nicely written letter but that it did not answer my question whether or not they intended to take a firm stand that the Republic-Corrigan McKinney merger was a condition of our refunding; that it was my firm conviction that Mr. Tompkins and I had specifically discussed this in February after the suit was brought, and that it was agreed by both of us at that time that the merger of Republic and Corrigan was not a necessary factor in their deal and that they would proceed with the financing independent of that. However, I reported then (in February) that our counsel did not wish us to take any steps in our refunding which would either bring about publicity or necessitate our reporting or applying to Washington until the suit was concluded. The writer briefly outlined the events of the past few months, dwelling on the events following the end of the suit.

Mr. Tompkins reported that at a meeting at which representatives of the following firms were present, Bankers Trust Company, Lehmann Brothers, Kuhn Loeb, Field Glore, and Hayden Stone, that the matter was discussed in detail and that they felt it in the interests of both Cleveland Cliffs and their group that the matter should be delayed with the idea of finding out whether or not the government would appeal, and if they did appeal, to delay until the suit was disposed of by the Supreme Court. He stated they had not taken a firm action but had recommended this. He stated further he felt the bonds would not be as valuable with the suit not disposed of as with it out of the way.

He desired the writer to take further steps to ascertain whether the merger could not be effected on the basis of the five-year bank extension and as soon as the suit were settled, or if in the mean time the investment houses felt the matter was of less importance, they would then immediately take up the financing. The writer replied that his first step was to see the biggest stockholder of Cliffs Corporation as well as the biggest interest not holding a corresponding investment in Cleveland Cliffs Iron, and that this was Mr. Wachner, Receiver for Continental Shares, and that Mr. Wachner would be away on a vacation until the 19th or 20th of June, and he had therefore not been able to ascertain Mr. Wachner's attitude. He stated he had had one talk with Messrs. White and Miller representing Commonwealth Securities, and these people did not want to commit themselves and were in favor of delay. It was left that the writer would see Mr. Wachner as soon as he returned and that if Mr. Wachner would entertain the thought of the merger based on the five-year bank extension, the writer would see one or two others and then discuss the matter again with Mr. Tompkins alone or with Mr. Tompkins and some of his group.

Mr. Tompkins then went on to relate that at this meeting a suggestion was made that the four banking firms should all come in on the financing on an equal basis, or 25% each, and that Lehmann Bros. be asked to head up the group. The writer then informed Mr. Tompkins that the original deal was to sell the bonds to the purchasers or underwriters at par, paying the Bankers Trust Company 1% commission, the bonds to be 5%. The present tentative arrangement is for the bonds to be 4½%, the syndicate to buy them on a 5% basis, and the commission of 1% to be paid in addition. The writer then advised Mr. Tompkins that we might want to return to the 5% basis which would be less of a discount to pay at this time. Mr. Tompkins advised the writer against this as he believed that it would make it a little more difficult to dispose of the bonds at the premium necessary to interest the selling group. The writer did not regard the matter as definitely disposed of.

Mr. Tompkins then went on to state that they had discussed the matter of the 1% commission and had agreed on this arrangement: that the Bankers Trust Company would keep ½% for themselves out of which they would pay White & Case's bill up to the present time and also White & Case or any other firm who did the legal work drawing the issue and protecting the interests of the Bankers Trust Company as trustee of the bond issue. He stated that the other ½% would be paid to Lehmann Bros. for their assuming the leadership of the purchasing group. He stated however, that they had made an agreement that out of Lehmann Bros.' ½% they would pay whatever legal expenses the group required in the matter, and the expense, if any, in securing engineers' or geologists' reports, any auditing expense required by the purchasing group, printing of the bonds, etc. He also stated that all these expenses were customarily levied on the borrowing company. It is the writer's impression that at the close of the meeting he expressed the feeling that Kuhn Loeb and possibly Field Gloré would regard the Republic-Corrigan merger as very essential as they put more importance on it than the others in the Cleveland Cliffs Iron picture.

As stated above, it was left that the writer would test out the feeling of certain Cliffs Corporation stockholders with the idea of ascertaining whether the company should endeavor at the earliest opportunity to effect the merger based on the five-year bank extension.

Mr. B. A. TOMPKINS,
V. P., Bankers Trust Company,
New York City

DEAR TOMMY: On my roundabout trip back to Cleveland I had a chance to read and study the informal contract which you executed and which the writer executed, subject to the approval of the Board of Directors.

We both understand that this is an appointment of the Bankers Trust Company as agent to buy or underwrite a first mortgage and collateral issue of bonds, the obligor being the corporation to be created by merger or sale of the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Company and the Cliffs Corporation. It is obvious that since the corporation which is to issue these bonds may be a new corporation formed through the merger of the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Company and Cliffs Corporation, it can not make a firm commitment until that merger is consummated. It is eminently fair therefore, that the Bankers Trust Company at this time should not be required to make a firm commitment either. However, before the stockholders meetings of the Cliffs Corporation and Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Company are held, at which the stockholders of these companies will be asked to ratify the merger and to authorize the bond issue, a firm commitment should be in the hands of the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Company. It is the writer's understanding that this situation is fully understood by you and that you, in fact, have advised the writer that such a commitment will be made as soon as the purchasing group is formed by you.

The writer feels that the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Company and the Bankers Trust Company should keep each other fully informed as to the progress in this matter. It is the writer's intention to submit the matter to the Board of Directors in the course of a few days, after which he will come to New York and hopes to be advised by you that you have been successful in forming your syndicate. Thereafter the officers of this company and their counsel will prepare the necessary papers in connection with the merger and by personal interview endeavor to secure the approval and support of the larger interests in both companies to our plan.

Would you kindly indicate whether or not this program meets with you approval, as well as confirm the writer's understanding as to the commitment.

Very truly yours,

E. B. GREENE, President.

Mr. EDWARD GREENE,
Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

DEAR ED: I have just had your letter of the first. I think that it fairly sets forth our understanding, with this exception. Under the law Bankers Trust Company is prohibited from underwriting. We can, however, act as your agent on a commission basis to find underwriters for the issue. Having done so we are privileged to "purchase for investment" such amount of bonds as agreed upon between ourselves and the underwriters.

I could do nothing in the way of securing additional underwriters until the Hayden Stone matter (covered in my letter to you of the 2nd) was cleared up. I can now proceed and there is plenty of time between now and your stockholders meeting. I realize, of course, that a company still unformed cannot make a commitment. You and I, however, have the facts before us and have a gentlemen's agreement to try to get the job done. I think you are in a position now to talk to the larger interests in both companies and advise them of your agreement with us.

I expect to go south on Tuesday night for a week or so. In the meantime you can get your Board together and ratify the agreement. I'll be only a night's trip from New York and can be here any morning.

As ever yours,

Mr. B. A. TOMPKINS,
V. P., Bankers Trust Company,

DEAR TOMMY: I was very glad that at the beginning of our conference on Wednesday Mr. Gutman and you frankly discussed the relationship which the writer personally and the Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company bear to the Bankers Trust Company regarding our refinancing. I had it in my mind to bring up the matter and had I done so I would have brought out the two points that you expressed so well:

First, that the informal contract appoints the Bankers Trust Company the agent of the Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company to secure the refinancing of our present bank obligations of $24,000,000 at such rate of interest and terms as favorable as possible to the Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company, and at the same time to provide an issue of bonds which it is possible to dispose of under present market conditions;

Second, that the Bankers Trust Company are willing to include as equal partners in the deal, two or three firms whose participation would be of advantage to the Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company to have tied into our picture.

I think these two statements entirely cover the situation. The writer has referred to the contract as informal. I am doing this inasmuch as when I signed it in your office on January 30th I explained that I had not been authorized by either the Board of Directors or the Executive Committee to execute such a contract and consequently it was only a matter of good faith on my part. With this understanding the writer executed the contract, writing in above his signature "subject to the approval of the Board of Directors". I am not commenting on this as a matter of particular importance, as in reality I am more influenced by my long friendship for the Bankers Trust Company and my friendship for you, Lonie Keidel, and Alex Ardrey. Personally, I am very glad to do business with you and your company and feel confident that you will exert your best influence to secure the best deal possible for the Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company under present conditions.

I was sorry not to see you Friday but found it necessary to return as the Dow people desired to close up the contract involving our chemical plant. I am enclosing clipping from the morning Plain Dealer which covers that point. It is my plan to return to New York, probably leaving here next week although Decoration Day rather breaks up matters. Please advise me whether you will be in your office the 29th or 31st.

MR. EDWARD B. GREENE,
President, the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

DEAR ED: Thank you for your letter of the 25th. As I told you in today's telephone conversation I think that you are justified in stating to the various stockholders with whom the matter must be discussed, that you believe a plan along the general lines worked out when you were here can be accomplished. That plan involved a first mortgage and collateral trust bond to run for fifteen years, to carry a sinking fund that would retire a million par value of bonds annually, to carry a coupon of $4\frac{1}{2}\%$ and to be issued under an indenture to Bankers Trust Company which would carry the usual protective provisions. While we estimated that the cost to the company on an amortized yield basis would be approximately 5%, that would vary somewhat depending on the prices, and the rate, at which the sinking fund operated from year to year.

You would have to make it clear, of course, that the program may have to be varied to meet conditions existing at the time when the issue is ready for sale. All you can do is present the general outline of your plan with the understanding that you are authorized to make such changes in it as market conditions at the time might require.

There can be no misunderstanding between us as to the spirit of the contract under which we were appointed as the agent of your company to secure the refunding of the bank debt. I am a little concerned as to just how to handle the commission of 1% which under the contract we are to receive for our services. Under the law we cannot become a partner in an underwriting and I will therefore have to make it clear to the houses which eventually constitute the underwriting group that we are acting in an agency capacity for a commission. It is especially important because I think it is quite clear to both of us that the interest of the company would best be served if one major group can be formed to handle not only this job but the sale of any of the portfolio securities. This should apply whether the securities are sold in advance of the bond issue or after their deposit as collateral thereunder. The underwriting group as now contemplated would be fully capable of handling the entire situation and I expect to direct my efforts towards (a) establishing a group made up of houses which in one way or another have had some contact with this situation and (b) securing an agreement from that group to hold itself available for any financial operation which the company may subsequently undertake. I am satisfied that that is the sound and sensible way to do the business.

I will look forward to seeing you either on Monday or Tuesday. I hope that the intervening holiday will have fixed up your cold. Rest in the country is about the best cure.

As ever yours,

BAT. B

MR. EDWARD GREENE,
Cleveland Cliffs Iron Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

MY DEAR ED: This is just to put you up to date on the matter of the purchase of Mr. Mather's stock by Messrs. Hayden Stone et als and our hope that we would be given an opportunity to participate in that purchase.

You will recall that when you told me that Hayden Stone & Co. had been in negotiation on that matter and asked what my point of view would be with reference to ceding that firm an interest in the bond financing, I told you that we would be very happy to offer them an interest. I believe that you advised Mr. Hayden of our attitude on that point. At that time I suggested that I thought it would be very gracious, and helpful to the whole situation, if in return for our offering them an interest in the bond business they offered us an opportunity to join them in their purchase of the stock. It was your feeling that that would make a happy party all around and you expressed that feeling to Mr. Mitchell.

You will recall the conversation which you and I had with Messrs. Mather and Belden just before they were leaving for their final talk with Mr. Mitchell. I pointed out to Mr. Mather that I was unwilling to have my request for a participation in the stock purchase in any way interfere with his selling his stock. I merely pointed out that I thought it would be in the interest of all parties concerned if Hayden Stone & Co. through Mr. Mitchell offered us an opportunity to share in the purchase.

Mr. Mather and Mr. Belden came back to my office late that afternoon and advised me that Mr. Mitchell had stated that the two transactions were separate and distinct, that he was prepared to purchase the full 200,000 shares and that any participation which Hayden Stone & Co. might be offered in the bond issue was a separate matter. I thereupon told Mr. Mather and Mr. Belden what I had already said to you, namely that that attitude on the part of Messrs. Hayden Stone & Co. relieved me from any possible obligation to offer them an interest in the bond purchase. I said that I would immediately telephone Mr. Mitchell and advise him of that fact.

When I telephoned Mr. Mitchell had left for the day, but the following afternoon he called at my office. He said that Mr. Mather and Mr. Belden had misunderstood him, that he agreed that it would be nice to have us interested in the stock purchase and that he was prepared to discuss that and asked my views as to what would be fair. I suggested that if he offered us an opportunity to take a 25% interest in his purchase we would reciprocate by offering his firm a 25% interest in the bond account. He then asked if his firm would come into the bond account on original terms and I said, of course, that they would. He then said that he felt that we should pay his firm a profit in the stock matter, that is if we took a 25% interest it should be at a stepped-up price. I said that that was all right if he wanted it that way and that we could put his firm's participation in the bond account on the same basis; that I thought it would be better, however, if we acted as partners in the matter, we to come into the stock at his cost and he to come into the bonds at our cost. He said that he would think it over and let me know.

Today he telephoned me that he had discussed the matter with his partners and they had decided to offer us no participation in the stock purchase. I said that I was sorry but that I would have to accept that and that of course he understood that I had no obligation to offer his firm an interest in the bond matter. He confirmed that that was his understanding.

I regret that Mr. Mitchell and his associates reached that decision, but I could do nothing but accept it. I thought, however, that I should immediately write you and tell you the story.

Sincerely yours,

RATB

MR. EDWARD B. GREENE,
President, Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company,
Cleveland, Ohio.

DEAR ED: As agreed I called a meeting today at which were present members of the firms of Lehman Brothers, Field Gloré, Kuhn Loeb & Company and Hayden Stone & Company. We discussed the whole situation at some length and reached the following general conclusions:

1. The Republic-Corrigan merger is of great importance not only to the business of Cleveland Cliffs, but to the sale of its securities.

2. With the accomplishment of both the Cleveland Cliffs and Cliffs Corporation merger, and the Republic-Corrigan merger, a refunding bond issue of Cleveland Cliffs would be well-received.

3. With your own merger accomplished, but with the Republic-Corrigan matter still in the courts the difficulty of the problem would be greatly increased. A refunding issue could be sold but the group would feel obliged to consider the matter with great care before attempting an offering to the public.

4. There is a chance that within the next ten days you will have had definite word as to the Government's intention in the Republic matter. If you are officially advised by the Government that it will not appeal, the problem is greatly simplified and we can all proceed with much more assurance.

5. If the Government elects to appeal you could proceed with your own merger and the group would take under consideration its ability to sell a refunding issue, and would advise you at that time as to the terms and conditions under which it believed such an issue could be marketed.

I think that the above represents the composite view of the meeting. There was some discussion as to the desirability of selling a split issue as against a straight mortgage and collateral trust issue. It is my understanding that you and your associates prefer the latter but I think that you should not close your mind to the former in case after further deliberation it seems to have advantages from the company's standpoint.

When you come down next week I will be interested to hear of what further progress you have made with the stockholders with whom you have been discussing the situation. In the interim, with best personal wishes, believe me

Sincerely yours,

BAT.B.

DEAR TOMMY, This is to acknowledge your memorandum of July eighth which is in accordance with my understanding except as concerns the matter of counsel. I am trying to get you on the telephone to say that in order to avoid any possible embarrassment to us in connection with our Republic-Corrigan negotiations, we should prefer either to have Cravath, deGersdorff, Swaine & Wood act as counsel for the bankers in the Cliffs transaction, or if Lehman Brothers have already spoken to Sullivan and Cromwell, then in that event to have Cravath's act as co-counsel. The experience of the Cravath firm in the Cleveland steel and ore situations seems to me to especially fit them for this assignment.

As you may recall I made a memorandum at our last meeting in your office of my understanding of the agreement which we had reached and read it to the group. It is now a part of my office record and I am enclosing a copy of it herewith.

Faithfully yours,

MEMORANDUM

The following memorandum of conclusions reached at meeting in the office of Mr. B. A. Tompkins of Bankers Trust Company on June 28, 1935, jotted down by me at the time and read to those present, being Messrs. B. A. Tompkins, Robert Lehman, Monroe Gutman, Russell Forgan, John Fennelly, Richard Morris, Lewis L. Strauss.

"A group is formed to do financing for a company proposed to be organized by the consolidation of Cliffs Corporation and Cleveland Cliffs Company, to consist of Messrs. Lehman Brothers, Field, Glore & Co., Hayden, Stone & Co., and Kuhn, Loeb & Co., each party to the group to have an equal interest of 25%; if any other parties are admitted to the business they are to receive participations made up pro-rata from the shares of the participants and are to be admitted only upon general concurrence. Lehman Brothers are to manage the initial business; subsequent leadership is to rotate; Kuhn, Loeb & Co. to be silent members of the group, that is to say their name is to appear where legally required in the Registration Statement and in the body of the Prospectus (not the front page of the Prospectus or advertising) and on the last line in each instance and in no other documents without their consent.

"Lehman Brothers and the Bankers Trust Company are to receive under the agreement with Mr. Green, $\frac{1}{2}\%$ each from the Company—not to be a cost to the business—but Lehman Brothers' $\frac{1}{2}\%$ may be in the nature of a management fee if legally necessary to so arrange it. No precedent of management fee is to be applicable to subsequent business.

The stock collateral when, as and if liquidated is to be handled by the group as a whole."

Mr. EDWARD GREENE,

*President, Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company,
Cleveland, Ohio.*

DEAR ED: This is in confirmation of our telephone conversation today.

We have succeeded in forming an underwriting group to handle the Cleveland Cliffs financing. It consists of the following firms: Messrs. Lehman Brothers, Field, Glore & Company, Kuhn Loeb & Company and Hayden Stone & Company. The interests in the account will be equally divided. Messrs. Lehman Brothers will act as syndicate manager. Kuhn, Loeb & Company will not appear in the prospectus or in any public advertising but will appear in the registration statement.

This group stands ready to handle not only the refunding problem which is immediately before us but any future financing that the company may do including the sale of any of its portfolio assets.

They are willing to sell an issue of fifteen year refunding bonds regardless of the fact that the Republic-Corrigan merger is still an unsettled matter. They will handle either a bond with a 5% coupon or a $4\frac{1}{2}\%$ coupon, and will charge for their services the usual spread that is involved in issues of this character, and will sell the bonds to the public at the best price which in their opinion can be obtained at the time that the issue is ready to go to the market. As I have made clear to you on several occasions and as I repeated in our telephone conversation, the group cannot at this date tell you definitely the price which can ultimately be secured for bonds which may not be ready for sale until some months hence. You can depend upon it, however, that for whatever type of issue it is finally decided to sell the public price will be fair to your company and the syndicate spread equally fair. The net price to your company would be the public price less the syndicate spread, less 1% commission payable to Bankers Trust Company.

It seems to me that this puts you in a position to say to the various parties in interest that you have an agreement from a strong and responsible group to do your refunding on a long term basis, the exact net to the company to be determined at the time of offering and to be based not only on the type of issue which is eventually determined upon but on market conditions at that time.

I am particularly pleased with this arrangement because it means that you have back of your financing a group that has important affiliations in the steel industry and that is capable of doing not only this immediate job but whatever additional jobs may later need to be done.

If there is any part of this letter which is not entirely clear to you please let me know. If on the other hand it meets your wishes and fully sets forth your understandings of our agreement please initial and return to me the enclosed carbon copy.

Sincerely yours,

Mr. B. A. TOMPKINS,
V. P., Bankers Trust Company,

CLEVELAND, OHIO, July 2, 1935.

DEAR TOMMY: Your letter of the 28th ult. is received. You have formed a strong underwriting group of firms with which I am sure our company would be glad to be associated.

I note also that this group is willing to buy the issue of fifteen-year sinking fund bonds regardless of the fact that the Republic-Corrigan McKinney merger may be still unsettled at the time the bonds are offered. This also is satisfactory.

I am disappointed however, in the last paragraph on the first page in which you state the terms upon which the bonds will be handled. Your statement is, of course, a wide departure from our contract, but even considering it as an offer to substitute a new plan, it is not satisfactory. Under our present understanding, the price of the bonds is set at par for a 5% bond, less 1% commission, but with the usual clause that if market conditions change to a marked degree, the price is to be adjusted to a figure which is satisfactory to both parties. According to your letter of June 28th you reserve the right to buy the bonds at the best price which in the opinion of the group can be obtained at the time the issue is ready to go to the market. In other words, this would give us no part in determining the price at which the bonds are to be bought. If we are to depart from the contract provision that you are to take the bonds at par less 1% commission, it seems to me our arrangement should at least provide that the price at which the bonds will be bought will be mutually satisfactory.

Also the sentence in which you say that we can depend upon it that the public price will be fair to our company "and the syndicate spread equally fair" is open to the further objection that this clause apparently reserves to the group the sole right to determine what is fair in respect to these matters and would give us no voice in agreeing upon the syndicate spread. I think in respect to both of these vital matters, if they are to be left open to be determined in the future, it must be at prices and upon terms which are mutually satisfactory to the parties.

I appreciate, as stated in your letter, that an arrangement with this group gives us the benefit of a connection with banking houses that have important affiliations with the steel industry and that this would be useful and valuable to our company, and we would like to have the arrangement made in such manner that it would be acceptable. I am sure you will appreciate the importance of the two points to which I have called your attention. Perhaps the statement of them in the manner expressed in your letter was unintentional and what you really have in mind is that the price at which the bonds will be sold and the amount of the syndicate spread are matters to be mutually agreed upon at the time when the bonds are offered for sale.

I should like to hear from you as to both of these matters at your early convenience.

Sincerely yours,

E. B. GREENE,
President.

CLEVELAND-CLIFFS IRON COMPANY

A meeting was held this morning at the offices of Lehman Brothers attended by Messrs. Greene and Geffine (C. C. I.) Gutman and Szold (Lehman Brothers), Morris (Hayden Stone) Forgan and Fennelly (Field, Glore), Brown (Kuhn Loeb) and the undersigned.

Mr. Greene reported that the management had decided to abandon the Cliffs' merger plan, at least for the time being, due to Wachner's decision to oppose the merger, even on an amended basis. The management had offered to change the original terms so that the new preferred would be convertible at $2\frac{1}{2}$ instead of 2 shares of common and Cliffs would receive 35% rather than 30% of the common, or 31% as against 28% assuming conversion. Mr. Greene proposes to go ahead with the Cleveland Cliffs' financing on the basis of no merger with Cliffs Corp. He submitted a memorandum outlining the Company's proposal.

Mr. Greene stated that Mr. Tompkins had generously released him from the contract which he had with Bankers Trust Company, explaining that he was no longer under any legal obligation to deal through Bankers Trust Company or with the group, nor was he liable to us for any fee. However, he stated that he wished to deal with the group as it was set up by Mr. Tompkins and said that he would not have any conversation with any other group unless a definite deadlock develops in the present negotiations. Mr. Greene wants to receive early next week if possible, an expression of opinion from the group as to the feasibility of a deal along the lines he proposes. In the meantime, Mr. Gutman suggested that the group go ahead in the matter of investigating the legal and technical requirements involved in the registration, prospectus, etc., and instigate such appraisals as may be necessary. The group agreed to this and another meeting to discuss procedure, etc., was held this afternoon in which Messrs. Palmedo of Lehman and Seligman of Sullivan & Cromwell joined; Messrs. Morris, Brown, Forgan and Fennelly did not attend.

A meeting of the group was called for Friday morning at 10:30 to discuss Mr. Greene's proposal.

I informed Mr. Tompkins of the morning meeting by phone.

DEAR ED: Thank you for your check for $25,000 and for all the nice things you said in your note of December 16th. I think that your Board and the stockholders of your company should be saying equally nice things about your handling of the situation on their behalf.

I talked to Charlie Hayden, Dick Morris and Steele Mitchell today regarding a sub-participation in the bank loan. I told them that our own banking department was loathe to approach the other banks on the matter and that I thought that if a sub-participation were made it might prove considerably embarrassing for you in your relations with the Continental and the Bank of Manhattan. Looking back over the matter the loan probably should have been set up on a basis which would have included both the Continental and the Manhattan and allowed for a participation by the Equitable. But it was closed on the other basis. While I think Hayden Stone & Co. have been most helpful in the situation and while I think their request is a reasonable one, I, nevertheless, feel that the banks who have carried the loan for a great many years should not now be asked to sub-participate and I further believe that the Manhattan and the Continental might have a very just grievance if that were done.

I am leaving for the South tomorrow for a little rest and I hope that you will be able to get away for the holidays. A good Christmas to you and all the luck in the world in the year ahead.

DEAR SIR: This is to confirm the agreement between us respecting future financing by the American Smelting and Refining Company.

In the event of financing under the First Mortgage of the Company, we are to be interested to the extent of 33 $\frac{1}{4}$ %, and yourselves and associates to the extent of 66 $\frac{3}{4}$ %. In the case of such financing, the business is to be directed from our office and the negotiations will be carried on by us.

In the case of financing other than under the First Mortgage, we are to be interested on original terms in the same amount as yourselves, which you have advised us is 22% in the purchase of the Second Preferred Stock now being made, and will be 21% in case the Irving Trust Company should hereafter be included in any transaction. All such business will be directed from your office and negotiated by you.

In circulars, advertisements, syndicate letters, etc., our name will appear first or at the left of your name, the two names comprising the first line of signatures.

Please confirm that the foregoing is in accordance with your understanding.

52 William Street, New York, N. Y.

GENTLEMEN: We and our associates have purchased 175,000 shares of $100.00 par value 6% Cumulative Second Preferred Stock of American Smelting and Refining Company at the price of $100.00 per share flat. We hereby confirm that you have an interest of 22% on original terms in the purchase of said Preferred Stock.

We and our associates are forming a Banking and a Selling Group, of which we will be managers and in which we may participate, the former group to underwrite the sale of said Preferred Stock to the public at $103.00 per share flat. The gross compensation of members of the Purchase Group for their services will be 75 cents per share. Advice concerning your participation and compensation in the Banking and Selling Groups will be sent you in due course.

It is to be borne in mind that the Irving Trust Company, which is not associated in this particular financing, is a member of our Group and in case any business should arise in the future in which they would wish to participate, our interests would accordingly be reduced in order to include them. We have arrived at percentages for this contingency as quoted below:

Kuhn, Loeb & Co.-----	21%	Central Hanover Bank and Trust
Guaranty Company of N. Y.-----	21%	Company-----	8½%
Bankers Company of N. Y.-----	16¼%	New York Trust Company-----	8½%

[From the files of Glorie, Forgan & Co. Letter from John F. Fennelly to J. Russell Forgan]

MAY 24, 1938.

Mr. J. RUSSELL FORGAN,

New York Office.

DEAR RUSS: Referring to our telephone conversation this morning regarding the Indianapolis Power & Light situation, I have talked the whole matter over with Charlie and give you herewith the following summary of his views.

Some weeks ago when Mr. Adams first approached us with regard to helping him work out the reorganization of Utilities Power & Light, he told us that he would like to have us head up the financing of Indianapolis Power & Light. We immediately told him of our commitment to Lehman Brothers and that we had already accepted a position in Lehman's group, subject to that position being satisfactory to us. He then told us that he had no intention of having Lehman head up the business, particularly since he felt it desirable to have the business managed in the middle west. He even told us he had discussed this matter with the SEC in Washington. We advised Mr. Adams that we were unwilling to do anything about this until or unless the whole matter had been straightened out with Lehman Brothers, which so far has not been accomplished.

More recently, Mr. Adams asked us if we could work out a satisfactory arrangement with Lehman Brothers, and advised us that if we could do so he was prepared to proceed immediately with the Indianapolis financing. We have told Mr. Adams that we felt it was entirely possible for us to work out such an arrangement and would proceed to do so at once. Our ideas, as you know, of a satisfactory arrangement are a joint managership account which we should head in the West and which Lehman should head in the East. Pending the reaching of such an agreement, we find ourselves in the awkward position of being unable to talk with Mr. Adams about this financing, and at the same time realizing that practically everybody in the investment business is shooting at him about it, in fact we have good reason to believe that other members of the Lehman account are working independently and actively for the business. Our sincere feeling about this matter is that if Lehman Brothers are willing to agree to a joint managership as outlined above, we can be very helpful in convincing Mr. Adams as to the desirability of proceeding at once with the business. If this is not done, we feel that Mr. Adams is likely to let the whole matter drift, at least until next fall, by which time he may have missed the opportunity to do the job under present favorable market conditions. If Lehman Brothers can not see their way clear to such an arrangement, we shall feel obliged to withdraw from their account. If we do so withdraw, we will agree with them that we will do nothing about this business, either independently or in conjunction with others, for some reasonable length of time. Our idea of a reasonable length of time would be from now until next fall, during which time Lehman Brothers would have a free hand as far as we are concerned, to proceed with their present negotiations.

If you so desire, I see no reason why you should not show this letter to any of the partners of Lehman Brothers.

Very sincerely yours,

JFF: me

P. S.—Since writing the above, I have discussed the matter further with Charlie and we have both agreed it would be dangerous to show this letter to Lehman Brothers. He agrees, however that the letter states his position exactly and that all of the matter contained herein can be used in discussing the matter with them; he is even willing to have you agree to a joint management arrangement for all future Utilities Power & Light financing if you think it desirable. He feels it is most important that Lehman give us an immediate answer on this matter because he has just had another call from Adams asking about the situation and telling him that the finance committee of the Company in Indianapolis is anxious to proceed at once and that pressure is being put on him from all directions.

If the above is not entirely clear to you, I suggest you call me on the phone tomorrow morning as soon as you have read this letter.

Memorandum to partners:

Re: Indianapolis Power & Light Financing and future financing of subsidiary companies of Utilities Power & Light Co.

I met today with Sidney Weinberg and Howard Sachs, of Goldman, Sachs & Company, Harry Addinsell and George Woods, of the First Boston Corporation.

We made the following agreement on Indianapolis Power & Light financing:

Lehman Brothers is to head the business, handle the details in our office and negotiate the deal in behalf of themselves, Goldman, Sachs & Company and The First Boston Corporation.

In the advertising the three firms are to appear on the same line in the following order:

Lehman Brothers Goldman, Sachs & Co. The First Boston Corp.

The management compensation is to be divided as follows: 40% to Lehman Brothers, 40% to Goldman, Sachs & Company, and 20% to The First Boston Corporation. All three firms are to have equal percentages in the underwriting.

We made a similar arrangement on Utilities Power & Light Company and its subsidiaries, i. e. management compensation to be divided into 40% to Lehman Brothers, 40% to Goldman, Sachs & Company, and 20% to The First Boston Corporation.

The question of handling the details of the business in future Utilities Power & Light Company deals was not determined today and the arrangement was to be subject to the approval of the principal by Floyd Odum.

Mr. GEORGE D. WOODS,
*The First Boston Corp., 100 Broadway,

DEAR GEORGE: For the sake of reducing to writing our agreement of today I am setting down below my understanding of it.

With reference to the financing or re-financing of the Indianapolis Power & Light Company, Lehman Brothers, Goldman Sachs & Company and The First Boston Corporation are to have equal percentages in the underwriting. The management compensation is to be divided—40% to Lehman Brothers, 40% to Goldman, Sachs & Company, and 20% to The First Boston Corporation.

Lehman Brothers is to handle the details of the business in their office on behalf of the three firms.

In the advertising the three firms are to appear on the same line in the following order:

LEHMAN BROTHERS GOLDMAN, SACHS & COMPANY THE FIRST BOSTON CORPORATION.

The same arrangement, with the exception of the handling of the business and the order of appearance, which I do not believe we discussed, is to carry through, subject to Floyd Odum's approval, on future financing for Utilities Power & Light Company and its subsidiaries.

I would appreciate your calling me so that I may be entirely clear as to our mutual understanding of the arrangement made.

We are delighted at the amicable way in which the situation worked out and look forward to a most pleasant and profitable relationship with you.

Mr. ROBERT LEHMAN,
Lehman Bros., One William Street, New York City.

DEAR BOBBY: The fact that we own over 60% of the debts of Utilities Power & Light Corporation, in 77 B proceedings, I suppose in fact as well as by past indications gives us no voice in the affairs of that company or its subsidiaries.

But in fairness to myself, as well as to those who are likely to be interested in the future of the estate, I wish to point out that a number of leading houses, including Goldman, Sachs & Co., First of Boston, Dillon, Read and Lazard, had approached me prior to the summer of 1937 with respect to Indianapolis financing, and that I had told them all that I had no control over the situation, didn't believe the financing was imminent and I assumed that the first question the Indianapolis Board would have to pass on would be whether any house or houses had any preferential rights to negotiate.

Also I must say in fairness to myself that Goldman, Sachs and clients own a substantial block of securities of Utilities Power & Light Company; that the same is true of clients of White, Weld & Co.; and that Paul Shields is Chairman of the Preferred Stock Protective Committee and as such has been giving his time to the affairs of Utilities Power & Light Company, and has been helpful also in matters pertaining to the industry as a whole. The same should be said with emphasis for Sidney Weinberg.

Paul Shields has made it emphatically evident to me that he considers that his firm merits far better treatment than has been accorded it in the Underwriting Group. I don't know anything about the Group or about how interests are divided, having just returned from Europe, but I do want to say a word in behalf of Shields & Co. supported by the above recitation of facts.

I also want to say that, not only because of help given in many ways in the past, relationship between Sidney Weinberg and General Wood, one of the Atlas Directors, and also because of personal desires, I strongly hope and ask that Goldman Sachs be given full measure of satisfaction.

I am told by my office and have also been made aware of it by cables and telephone calls to Europe from a number of people that many houses think we have or should have something to do with this situation and have treated them shabbily in favor of Lehman Bros. They apparently find it hard to believe what I tell them about the business.

Sincerely,

FLOYD ODLUM.

JULY 13, 1938.

Mr. FLOYD B. ODLUM,
Eighth Floor, 1 Exchange Place, Jersey City, New Jersey.

DEAR MR. ODLUM: Your letter with reference to the Indianapolis financing, addressed to Mr. Robert Lehman, was delivered to me in the absence of Mr. Lehman. I am taking the privilege of answering inasmuch as I have been in active charge of this matter for Lehman Brothers. I am distressed that the handling of this business has caused you embarrassment. A careful review of all of the history and circumstances surrounding this transaction convinced me that our conduct with reference to this financing would not only meet with your approval but would deserve your commendation.

Our attention was called to the possibility of refinancing Indianapolis before Atlas were large owners of the debt of Utilities Power & Light. Before attempting to secure this business, we considered carefully the question of discussing it with you. We were informed and discovered that charges had been made in Court and through the newspapers that Atlas was attempting to dominate the affairs of Utilities Power & Light and its subsidiaries. We found also that these charges were untrue and that you had stated in open Court and in Court proceedings that you not only did not wish to dominate the affairs of Utilities Power & Light and its subsidiaries, but that you had actively refrained from having anything to do with the management or the affairs of this company. This was particularly impressed upon me in Washington last Friday when counsel for Atlas denied before the S. E. C. that Atlas was represented on the boards of Utilities Power & Light or any of its subsidiaries. In view of that situation, we decided it was only fair not to embarrass you or to injure the record of the Atlas Corp. in the serious Court proceedings pending by discussing the matter of financing with you. We did this even though all of us were desirous of asking your help in view of the close relationship and friendship existing between us.

We, therefore, went about the matter in a direct and independent way. We went to Indiana and approached the officers of the company. The officers had a meeting of the Board and appointed a committee to consider financing. This committee made a thorough investigation of the entire matter. It interviewed banks, insurance companies and other investment banking houses, and after such thorough investigation the Board of Directors of Indianapolis Power &

Light requested Lehman Brothers to advise the company and to form a syndicate to re-finance the outstanding 5% bonds at an opportune time. The minutes of the company bear this out.

When we found the time opportune, we so advised the company. After full negotiations with the company, its officers, its directors and the Trustee of Utilities Power & Light, we were instructed to proceed. And we have proceeded expeditiously.

Other banking houses had a similar opportunity to compete for this business. In view of all the facts, it comes as a surprise to us that after twelve months or more of negotiation, suddenly at this time when the syndicate has been formed and the registration about to become effective, complaints should be imposed upon you. We have endeavored to take care of generously in the syndicate the investment bankers whom you mention as your friends.

How anyone can possibly blame you is beyond our understanding, particularly since you have so carefully made the record clear as to your position with reference to the affairs of Utilities Power & Light and its subsidiaries. Believe me, we have done everything in our power to relieve you of any possible embarrassment. And furthermore, we sincerely believe that our record in this matter sustains your insistently stated position that you never have interfered even slightly with the business and affairs of the Utilities Power & Light Company or its subsidiaries.

Faithfully yours,

JOSEPH A. THOMAS.

Mr. JOSEPH A. THOMAS,

DEAR MR. THOMAS: I have just received your letter of July 13th in answer to mine about Indianapolis financing.

What you say records the facts as I understand them, but it's pretty difficult for the other houses who themselves thought it proper to discuss the situation with us, to understand that you went forward in the way you did without discussing the program with us. You know we have a very heavy investment in U. P. & L. and apart from any question of management or control are naturally very interested in its affairs. Some of these other houses have investments alongside ours or are interested in the Company in different ways.

If all these houses are now satisfied with the generous treatment they have received, then the immediate embarrassment is solved for me. I know of none as of today that express to me dissatisfaction except Shields & Company. Paul Shields, as Chairman of the Preferred Stock Committee of U. P. & L. has given his time generously and I am told has even advanced substantial expense money to the Committee. It should earn for him special consideration. I do hope you will find a way to accord it to him.

Sincerely,

STATE G. & E.

I have talked with the partners here in New York and some of them in Chicago and I want to go over once again exactly what took place. On Friday afternoon at about 3:30 he came in the office (Mr. Hopson) and he went into Mr. Durell's office, and he said he had a chance to sell $5,000,000 New York Electric & Gas bonds. Durell said to him, "Do you mean to some insurance company or investment trust?" and Hopson said, "No, I mean to some bankers". and he would give us no idea who the bankers were. Durell said "You are talking to the wrong man. Wait until I get Iglehart in here". And I came in and he said he had a chance to sell them to bankers, and did we want to make a commitment. Marshall came in while the conversation was going on and he heard him say that he had a chance to sell $5,000,000 bonds, and in a perfectly offhand casual way he said "For Heaven's sake go ahead and sell them", which was the logical thing to say, if you ever had any dealings with Hopson. Now that gave Hopson his release. There is no question in our minds about that. I said to Mr. Hopson "I don't think you can come into this office Friday afternoon and expect us to come to a decision, and I think the least you can do, as long as we have always done this business, is to give us until Monday afternoon". He said he was sorry that he couldn't do this, as the bankers wanted to go to work on it right away. I said the bankers would wait until Monday. He said he was sorry; they wanted to do it immediately. I said "I think you ought to wait until Monday and I will call you Monday afternoon. I didn't wait until Monday afternoon; I called him at a quarter of eleven Monday morning. He said he had already committed himself.

Now we feel that if that was the case a good many conversations must have gone on beforehand. We honestly feel—I am going to be perfectly frank with you—that your having been a member of the group with us, it is a most unusual procedure and we think, frankly, a very unethical one. That is honestly the way we feel about it.

Yes, well I think that you could have found that all out had you come to us and said "He is discussing it with us".

He said that you were ready to make a commitment. Well—that is what he said. Marshall would never have made the statement he did had he not put it that way.

I don't think we wish to discuss it with him one iota. And I would like to explain how Sullivan and Cromwell got their clearance. They called us early Monday morning and said they understood that somebody else was going to be the bankers for the New York State Gas & Electric. I said "I think there is something in that." They said "Is it all right for us to go ahead". I said, "I am sorry, I can't tell you. I will let you know the moment I can". I called Hopson at a quarter of eleven and asked him to come around here. He said he was sorry, he couldn't, that he had already committed himself. There was no reason why we should keep Sullivan & Cromwell from having some law business, so they were released, and those were the conditions under which they were released.

I think that if your house had been, say, E. H. Rollins & Son, and had not been a member of this group, and you had done this business, I think that would have been one thing. But I think when you were partners of ours in the business—to say nothing to us about the conversations—I think the least thing you could do was to tell him to take all his conversations to us, and that if we were not interested, you might be interested in the business.

That was perfectly true last July. When, since then, did he tell you that?

In August we asked him if he was ready to talk about New York State Gas & Electric. He said he would not discuss it at that time. That was the last conversation we had with him.

Before you did anything with him it would have been very much nicer had you come to us. I mean, before you had any dealings with him, I think that, as long as we had been the bankers for that business ever since it was originated, I think if you had come to us and said "Hopson wants to talk about it. Are you not interested?" I think that is the way we would have done the business. Well, you see the way he severed banking relations.

Yes, but N. W. Harris is one thing, and Harris Trust & Savings are another.

Well, if you can tell us any bankers that were doing anything in the month of July in the way of underwriting. Well, I don't know who were. Well, nobody else would have ventured it that I know of.

I think your method of checking may have been fine, in your eyes. I think the check would have been very much better had you come to your partners and asked them about it. I think that would be the real way to check. That is my feeling and the feeling of the partners here.—as long as we were partners in the business and had asked you into the business originally. I think that is an obligation.

I don't expect you to; but that is the way we do feel.

I would go in to see Forrest in Chicago. Yes, he is posted thoroughly. He knows all the details of it.

Well of course the way he freed himself was a perfectly ridiculous way. You would have done exactly what we did under similar circumstances, I think. And I do think that you should have gotten in touch with us, as long as we had originally invited you into the business and it was our business and always had been our business. How he can expect to come in late Friday afternoon and have us give him an answer in fifteen minutes.

Re: New York State Electric and Gas Company.

Mr. PETER R. NEHEMKIS, JR.,
Special Counsel, Investment Banking Section,
Monopoly Study, Securities and Exchange Commission,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. NEHEMKIS: It is my understanding that you wish to introduce into the Record of the Proceedings before the Temporary National Economic Committee copies of the following documents taken from the files of The First Boston Corporation, all of which relate to the proposed financing by New York State Electric and Gas Company:

(a) Memorandum signed by George D. Woods, dated January 25, 1937, relating to a conversation he had had with Fred S. Burroughs, Vice President of Associated Gas & Electric Company;

(b) Letter from Monroe C. Gutman of the firm of Lehman Brothers, dated January 25, 1937, addressed to George D. Woods of The First Boston Corporation to which was attached a memorandum of the same date outlining Mr. Gutman's understanding of certain conversations he had had with Mr. Woods;

(c) Letter from George D. Woods of The First Boston Corporation to Monroe C. Gutman of Lehman Brothers, dated January 29, 1937 commenting on Mr. Gutman's letter and memorandum of January 25, 1937.

Both Mr. Woods and his secretary are at present absent from the City. As counsel for The First Boston Corporation I hereby advise you that I am familiar with the documents above referred to and I am authorized on behalf of The First Boston Corporation to advise you that there will be no objection to your introduction of such documents into the Record.

I will be present in Washington on Monday and if you deem it necessary I will be glad to sign a stipulation to this effect.

Very truly yours,

ARTHUR H. DEAN.

MEMORANDUM RE: NEW YORK STATE ELECTRIC AND GAS COMPANY

About a week ago Mr. Burroughs discussed the situation with respect to this Company's financing with me at some length. Briefly, the Company has sold through an independent group of dealers approximately $13,000,000 of First Mortgage 4% Bonds and has made delivery in the form of interim receipts. The Chase Bank, as Trustee under the First Mortgage, has thus far been unwilling to authenticate the bonds because of inability of the Company to furnish the Bank with an opinion of independent counsel as to the validity of the lien. The interim receipts call for delivery not later than January 31st of either the actual bonds or the return of the cash.

In addition, Mr. Burroughs states there is approximately $30,000,000 worth of profitable refunding still to be done in the picture and approximately $6,000,000 of new money is needed immediately for the construction of a new generating station and certain transmission lines. Mr. Burroughs estimates that over the next eighteen months an additional $15,000,000 will be required to take care of the necessary construction program.

Mr. Burroughs then stated that he had been having discussions with the firm of Lehman Brothers relative to the broad problems of the Associated system and the specific problem of New York State Electric and Gas Company. He said that Lehman had evidenced a great deal of interest and had expressed a desire to be helpful. Specifically, he stated that they were desirous of joining New York State Electric and Gas underwriting group, and as a member of the group having an opportunity of conferring with Sullivan & Cromwell with respect to its problems.

I advised Mr. Burroughs that we and Glore, Forgan and Company were joint managers of the group and stated that this arrangement could not be disturbed but that I would be glad to discuss with Glore, Forgan and Company the question of including Lehman in the group in third position with no participation in the management and with an amount of bonds not greater than the participation of Glore, Forgan or ourselves. This was agreeable to Mr. Burroughs and subsequently proved agreeable to Mr. Freeman of Glore, Forgan and Company.

Mr. Gutman of Lehman Brothers telephoned to me last Friday and we confirmed this arrangement. I undertook to release Sullivan & Cromwell as the group's counsel to talk to Mr. Gutman and I have since done so.

Mr. Gutman brought up the question of the participation of his firm in all financing of Associated operating subsidiaries and asked whether there were other similar joint account arrangements and whether we would be willing to discuss his firm participating as joint manager in other accounts. I stated that so far as I knew New York State Electric and Gas Company was the only situation, where we were the head of the business, which had a joint account arrangement and I said that depending on the situation as it might exist at the time and on the wishes of the Company, there would be no reason why we should not discuss a joint management arrangement.

MEMORANDUM REGARDING RELATIONSHIP OF THE FIRST BOSTON CORP. AND LEHMAN BROTHERS IN CONNECTION WITH ASSOCIATED GAS & ELECTRIC FINANCING

With respect to all future financing for Associated Gas & Electric or its subsidiaries, the two firms are to manage such financing jointly as leaders, (details of the handling of the business to be worked out later) due recognition to be given in such financing to the obligations of The First Boston Corp. to old participants in the Chase-Harris Forbes groups in a manner satisfactory to both firms.

In connection with New York State Electric & Gas Corporation financing, The First Boston Corp. and Glore, Forgan & Co. are to be managers; Lehman Brothers are to be offered an equal participation in amount with the above two firms, Lehman Brothers' name to appear in third place.

DEAR SIR: This will acknowledge your letter of January 25th and the enclosure all in connection with our several telephone conversations relative to Associated Gas & Electric Company matters.

The arrangement stated in the last paragraph of your memorandum is in accordance with my understanding and I have confirmed it with Glore, Forgan & Company.

However, with respect to the first paragraph I feel that the record should clearly indicate that we are not discussing all future financing of Associated Gas & Electric Company and its subsidiaries but only that financing with respect to which Harris, Forbes & Company and/or Chase Harris Forbes Corporation have previously enjoyed the position of leadership. I would also like to add that it is my understanding that in such cases we will discuss the question of joint leadership in the light of circumstances and conditions existing at the time and provided at the time the Company requests that existing syndicate management arrangements be augmented along the lines of your memorandum.

Very truly yours,

MEMORANDUM REGARDING ARMSTRONG CORK COMPANY

Yesterday Mr. M. L. Freeman discussed with me the possibility of doing some financing for the Armstrong Cork Company, with which he has a connection. I told him that I would discuss it here in the office, and asked him to return today.

Having checked up on the Company and found that the original financing had been done by the Guaranty Company, I explained to Mr. Freeman that the Guaranty Company's successor was E. B. Smith & Co. and that naturally we did not want to poach on their preserves. However, he told me that in 1932 the Company had wanted to borrow $2,000,000 from the Guaranty Trust Company, with whom they have an account, and that the Bank was not willing to loan them more than $500,000 at that time. The Armstrong Cork Company was very distressed at this and later raised the money through Pittsburgh banks and therefore at present are not desirous of doing business with the Guaranty Company or their successors. Likewise, Lehman Bros. had approached the Armstrong Cork Company with the idea of buying a block of stock from them, either existing stock in the hands of present holders if they did not need new money or, if they needed new money, treasury stock. However, this did not appeal to the Company.

Mr. Freeman explained that the Company needs from five to ten million dollars for improvement to their plants and would like to issue a preferred stock. He realizes, however, that probably a preferred stock would not be feasible at this time and suggested four or five year notes convertible into stock. I told him that provided he explained in detail to the company that they were coming to us of their own free will, we should be pleased to have a talk with them if he would bring in one of their senior officers the next time he was in New York, which he agreed to do.

Confidential.

Re: The Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co.

Mr. Seward Prosser, late in the afternoon of November 17th, telephoned to me asking whether he could come around to see me and a few minutes afterwards he came in. Mr. Prosser stated that he understood we were negotiating for the Youngstown refunding, and that he, realizing our usual practices, and our friendship for his company, felt we were negotiating under a misapprehension of the Bankers Trust Company's position; that the Youngstown Company and Mr. Campbell, the President, were the closest friends of the Bankers Trust Company, that Mr. Samuel Mather was a director of the Trust Company and it would be a great blow for the Trust Company if they should lose this business. Mr. Prosser stated that some months ago Mr. Campbell told him that he felt that he could get at least 99 for his new bonds and he then had told Mr. Campbell that if he could get such a price from bankers of high rank he, Mr. Prosser, would have to advise him to accept such an offer. Since then, however, conditions in the bond market had improved and even now the company was only getting 98; that he, Mr. Prosser, wished us to realize that the whole question between Mr. Campbell and himself had been one of price. Mr. Prosser seemed to know everything about the transaction including such facts as that the Advisory Committee had been to New York negotiating it and that it had been originally suggested to us by an intermediary who knew someone in our office. In reply I told Mr. Prosser that this matter had been suggested to us originally many months ago by an intermediary and we had at first ridiculed the suggestion, saying to the intermediary that the Bankers Trust Company was the banker of the Youngstown Company. The intermediary insisted that this was not so and that Mr. Campbell would like to do the business with us. We declined to discuss the matter any further with the intermediary and stated that we could only consider the matter if these things were stated to us direct by Mr. Campbell.

Mr. Campbell did come in to see us about three weeks ago, together with Mr. Morris, the Vice President of the Company. The very first thing I said to Mr. Campbell was, "How about your relations with the Bankers Trust Company? Aren't they your bankers? They are very good friends of ours and it is our principle not to interfere with the established relations of our good friends. We would of course be pleased to make a connection with the Youngstown Company; that we had felt that way ever since we had had negotiations some years ago for a merger of the Independent Steel Company and that if he wanted us in the picture we would be glad to do the business with the Bankers Trust Company." Mr. Campbell replied that he had no commitment of any kind to the Bankers Trust Company and that he had told Mr. Prosser some time ago that he intended to make this transaction with others. I had not asked Mr. Campbell for his reasons for this but it developed in the ensuing course of the conversation that an element in it appeared to be Mr. Campbell's desire to make a transaction which would fit in with the possible later merger with the Inland Company. The question of price came up at this first conference and I replied that it was not possible to mention any price until we knew the character of the security the company was willing to make; that we could help them make a bond which would sell very high or we could sell a debenture or anything in between, and I particularly stressed the point that we would not enter into competition with others for the bonds. This first negotiation had been followed by several weeks of intense work (Mr. Prosser here said that they also had been working on it for some time) and that now we had made a transaction subject to the approval of the Board and that we were committed and could not withdraw even if we desired to. Mr. Prosser was entirely familiar with the fact that the Board meeting was to take place this Friday morning. I further stated to Mr. Prosser that what Mr. Campbell had said to us was confirmed by the fact that we had only recently heard that their group had been dissolved and that one of their members had independently tried to get the business or to get in with whoever would get the business. (Mr. Prosser here said that this was not correct, that their group was intact and had had recent meetings.) I further told Mr. Prosser that we had discussed among the partners the question of whether we could not, in some way, offer them a share in the business, but Mr. Prosser immediately said that while that was very nice of us he could not consider that.

Mr. Schiff came in to the room at about this time and most of what was said above was repeated on both sides—Mr. Prosser emphasizing what a blow it would be to his Trust Company to lose this business and Mr. Schiff emphasizing how we had made every effort to be sure that we were not competing with them. I stated that while we never competed for business, we of course could not take the position that if a corporation came to us and told us they were free that we would not deal with them. Mr. Prosser then stated that he now understood our position and wished to say that he felt that they had no grievance against us; that what Mr. Campbell had said was exactly correct, but that Mr. Campbell had evidently remained under the impression that they would not pay higher now than they had suggested many months ago and that he felt that if he sold under 99 he should have come back to them. Mr. Schiff said to Mr. Prosser just before he left, "Think the matter over over-night and perhaps you can make some suggestion tomorrow which will be satisfactory all around."

Immediately after the conference I repeated the substance of it to Mr. Morris, the Vice President of the Youngstown Company, who was at the time still in our office. He assured me that outside of any conversations Mr. Campbell may have had with Mr. Prosser they had had no negotiations and certainly that no work had been done in endeavoring to work out a plan or a mortgage. This morning, after consultation among the partners, I telephoned to Mr. Morris that while we would, of course, prefer to do the business alone, we did not wish to do anything to embarrass Mr. Campbell in any way and if Mr. Campbell desired us to do so we would be willing to offer one-half of the business to the Bankers Trust Company. Mr. Morris, without leaving the telephone, said that he had repeated to Mr. Campbell the substance of what I had told him about Mr. Prosser's visit, and that Mr. Campbell was very much incensed about Mr. Prosser's coming to see us with any such statement and that the only way Mr. Prosser knew about the price was that Mr. Campbell had yesterday telephoned to Mr. Prosser informing him that he had closed with us at 98, possibly speaking to him about the Trusteeship.

J. J. H.

JJH/MC.
11/18/27.

On the morning of Monday, November 21st, I called on Mr. Prosser together with Mr. Morris. It was first arranged that the Bankers Trust Company would accept Trusteeship of the new mortgage and then Mr. Morris left and I told Mr. Prosser that we were going ahead with the offer promptly and offered to him, for his group, a one-half interest in name, subject to the usual management charge, or a one-third silent interest. He immediately replied that he did not see how he could accept but he appreciated our offer, and that he would consult the group and let us have an answer promptly. Shortly thereafter he telephoned to me asking me for the prices at which we expected to syndicate and sell the bonds, which I gave him and a little later he telephoned again to say that it had been decided that they could not participate as a group.

After this Mr. McEldowney of the Union Trust of Pittsburgh telephoned to say that if we would make him the same offer as we had made Mr. Prosser for a $10,000,000 participation in the business they would like to take it and we later in the day arranged with him to give him a participation of $7,500,000.

We suggested to the National City Company (Mr. Davis) that they participate silently in response to which invitation Mr. Hugh Baker later telephoned to George Bovenizer that they felt that under the circumstances they could not accept the participation and they greatly regretted that they had to give up the opportunity of making a nice profit. We offered a participation also to the Guaranty Company (Mr. Harrison) and Mr. Stanley telephoned to me that they didn't feel that they could go along. We offered the Continental and Commercial Co. of Chicago a participation through their New York representative but they also felt that they could not accept it.

Re: Youngstown.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 18TH.

At about 5:00 o'clock P. M. today Mr. James A. Campbell called me on the telephone and said about as follows:

"In reference to the message through Mr. Morris, I want to tell you exactly what happened with the Bankers Trust Company. They came to us first several months ago and said that there was a good opportunity for us to sell a 5% bond to refund our other indebtedness and bid 94½. This did not interest me. A couple of months later they came again and said that the bond market was better and that they could pay 95¼ and then a month or so afterwards bid 95¾. Then I got sore and read the riot act to them and I hoped that they would respond. That they did not do. This man Freeman had been in and said he thought he could get 99 or par from responsible people; but we paid no attention to him; then when the Bankers Trust Company did not respond, we listened to Freeman. Then again, talked with Tilney and again read the riot act. Several weeks elapsed and we heard nothing from them and I felt that they had had every opportunity. We then went in to see you and you told us you wanted us to fix the type of bond first and from then we felt hitched to you until the matter had been decided. Last Tuesday afternoon, after the meeting of the Advisory Committee with you, I ran into Seward Prosser and told him the whole story except price. He only said he was disappointed. I told him we hoped to make him Trustee. I also told him that you had suggested taking them along in the business, to which he replied that if it was good for part it was good for all. Then yesterday, after we had decided the matter among ourselves and notified you that we would sell you 50-Year Bonds, he insisted that we give him the bonds at the same price. I refused saying my word is better than my bond. I called up Dalton who agreed with me and who called up Prosser and told him so. A Vice President of the Guaranty Trust Company said that we (Youngstown) did not know how to sell bonds, that we should have offered the bonds at 97½ or 98 but I felt that they should have done the best they could for us and not try to buy them as cheaply as they could. I would rather resign than break my word. There was no question with the Board of Directors, it was unanimous.

About their participating, that is up to you. They had their day in court. We would of course be pleased if you did so, as we are not angry with them. They are good friends and there are a lot of influential people connected with the Company—Morgans and others—but that matter is entirely up to you."

ARMSTRONG CORK COMPANY

Guaranty Company headed note financing done for this Company several years ago. JRS and CSC to make trip to Lancaster. JNL—10/22/34.

Discussed with J. R. S. feasibility of using excess cash to redeem the debentures and refunding balance with short term notes but it was felt we would not be warranted in making the suggestion to the company. KW—11/14/34.

Mr. Suter and Mr. Powlison of this Company met with JWC, BW and KW at this office 12/5/34 and told us they had been thinking about some sort of refunding operation in connection with their outstanding debentures. We are to give them our ideas as to what we think could be done on various serial and longer term note issues. KW—12/7/34.

Discussed Armstrong Cork with Passmore 12/10/34. He was very strong in his opinion that company should not put out bonds maturing serially. Said that if Company should put out such bonds and then come to him for a bank loan, the serial maturities would loom very large in his mind as an adverse factor. The only way we can see that the Co. could save money by refunding would be to put out one, two, three and four year serial notes. Even on this basis the savings for the four years would apparently not be greater than $50,000 to $75,000 total, after paying expenses and paying us one point for handling the business. JNL—12/12/34.

Mr. Prentis and Mr. Suter had lunch with JWC and myself yesterday. We told Mr. Prentis and Mr. Suter:

1. that a short serial issue could be placed privately on a basis which would show the Company a moderate amount of interest savings but we could not advise their doing this because it would place on them a heavy burden of fixed serial maturities;
2. that we did not believe it would be possible to place privately a ten or fifteen year issue in the amount of $10,000,000 or $12,000,000;
3. that we considered it impossible to put out a ten or fifteen year issue at a price which would save the Company money for the next five and one-half years;
4. that a ten or fifteen year debenture issue convertible into common stock on a scale beginning at 30 could be successfully marketed, if registered, at slightly over a 4½% basis and that our compensation for handling such an issue should probably be nearer four points than three points, exclusive of legal expenses; and
5. that we hardly thought the time had arrived when a preferred stock issue could be placed successfully.

Mr. Prentis made it clear that he was not in favor of putting out short-term serial maturities and the only thing he might consider would be to put out a ten or fifteen year bond issue or preferred stock issue provided this could be done on a basis which would either save money or at least not lose much money and provided further that the issue could be made without having to comply with present very burdensome registration requirements. We told Mr. Prentis that we were hopeful that registration requirements for new issues would be greatly simplified in the near future. It was agreed that both the Company and we would continue to keep their problem in mind and particularly make a point of giving fresh consideration to it if and when registration requirements are made less burdensome. Mr. Prentis invited JWC and myself to visit them at Lancaster and we are planning to do this some time in January. JNL—12/21/34.

Lewis Strauss of KL told JRS and myself 3/14/35 that they had this business, and he asked if we would be interested in joining them. We explained that this was an old account of ours and we believed it was still ours, but it was kind of him to think of us and we would like to consider the situation. I subsequently talked to Roy Passmore at the Bank, who said that he had been in conversation with officers of the Company within the last thirty days and felt very sure that there was nothing in KL's contention, and that the Company would not do anything without discussing the matter with them at the Trust Co. first, and that he could not believe they would accept any other offer without giving us a chance. I suggested it might be well for us to take a day and run down to Lancaster to see the plant, and he thought this would do no harm. JWC—3/19/35.

JRS and I talked to Strauss of KL&Co. and told him that we believed Armstrong to be our business and that when something could be done they would look to us. Strauss said if that were so KL would not compete, and that he would so inform the Armstrong people. If they really wish to make a change and clear with us, KL will then be willing to talk to them. We indicated that if and when the business would be done we would have a place for them. JWC—3/20/35.

Talked with Mr. Suter at Lancaster re going down to see the plant. Said in answer to his inquiry we did not feel he had a definite program to offer but would be glad to continue our discussions of several months ago. Both Mr. Suter and Mr. Prentis were going to be away after their meeting Monday and Tuesday of next week, and therefore, Suter suggested coming down the following week. Meanwhile he said he would as Mr. Powlison, who is in the New York office, to come in and see us tomorrow. JWC—3/21/35.

Heard again from Suter and have made appointment to see him in Lancaster Wednesday morning April 3rd. JWC—3/29/35.

Tried to get RC Jr or CSC to make trip with me but impossible on account previous engagements, so JNL and I plan to go and meet Mr. Suter as arranged. JWC—4/2/35.

JWC and JNL called on Co's officials in Lancaster 4/3/35. Discussed refunding with 4% debts. or pfd. See letter in Buying Dept. file dated 4/4/35 for outline of plans discussed. Suter said Co. had not done any shopping around. Said further there was difference of opinion in their own organization as to whether they should do refunding. Requested us to furnish computations on both 4% debts. and pfd. and said they would have further discussions as to whether they should do refunding and if so whether they should do it with debts. or pfd. Their audited figures for 12/31/34 will not be available much before June 1 due to length of time required to get statements from foreign subs. JNL—4/6/35.

JWC called Suter today. Suter said he had been so busy since getting back last Thursday that he had not had a chance to study our calculations. He said also that he might be in New York Thursday or Friday of this week. JNL—4/23/35.

Lewis Strauss called JRS, said Suter had been in to see him when he was in New York the end of last week and that he had told Suter of his conversation with us. Suter had also been to the Guaranty and talked with Passmore, who said that he felt sure if they were considering immediate action Suter would have spoken to him about it. JWC—5/1/35.

Suter and Powlison came in today and J. W. C. and J. N. L. talked with them. We said if an attractive conversion privilege were given we thought 15 year 4s could be sold around par. A week ago a conversion price of 32½ would have been attractive; because of a recent break in market such price would not now be particularly attractive, but by the time business could be done it might very well again become attractive. We said we thought a non-convertible 15 year 4 might be saleable around 96½ to the public under today's conditions. In referring to spread we mentioned three points. Suter not inclined personally toward preferred stock but asked our ideas because he said Prentis had been interested in preferred. We said we thought a 5% preferred carrying a conversion at a price 10 points or so above the market would be saleable around 99 to 100. Spread on such an issue we thought would have to be 4 points. Prentis has been abroad for several months and will not be back until June 13. Suter indicated they would probably await his return before reaching a decision even though this should result in their not being able to file by June 30. JNL—6/3/35.

Reported to L. Strauss 6/10 our last conversation with Suter, etc. Strauss said he had not seen him recently and believed he had reported to us each and every time the Company had said anything to them. JWC—6/13/35.

We headed group which offered publicly $9,000,000 15-Year 4% Debts. Our participation in underwriting 40%, $3,600,000; others in group included Kidder Peabody & Co. $1,800,000; Lazard Freres & Co. Inc., $1,800,000; Kuhn Loeb & Co. $1,800,000 (non-appearing). EW—7/24/35.

Jan. 8, 1923	$7,000,000 Cum. 7% Pref. Stk. (this issue was called for payment April 1, 1928).	Guaranty Co. 30%; Kidder Peabody (who handled the books) 33¼%; W. E. Hutton & Co. 30%; Marshall Field, Gloré Ward & Co. 6¼%.	5¼ pts. (?)
Jan. 9, 1928	$25,000,000 5% S. F. Gold Debentures due 1948. ¹	Harris Forbes 7%; W. E. Hutton & Co. 7%; Guaranty Co. 10%; Kidder Peabody 7%; Union Trust of Pittsburgh 7%; Field Gloré & Co. 7%.	4 pts.
Oct. 20, 1930	$15,000,000 Three-Year 4½% Gold Notes due Nov. 1, 1933 (this issue was refinanced principally by giving holders new 5% Convertible Notes due 1938).	Guaranty Co. 30%; Chase Securities Corp. 20%; National City Co. 10%; W. E. Hutton & Co. 30%; Union Trust of Pittsburgh 5%; Mellon National (non-appearing) 5%; Kidder Peabody; Field Gloré & Co. Latter two appeared because they elected to do so, but neither had any interest in purchase group because Chase, National City and the two Pittsburgh banks had been included since Guaranty Co. had previously headed the business and therefore purchase group in this piece of business was filled.	1.75 pts.
July 21, 1933	$13,992,000 5% Convertible Notes due Nov. 1, 1938.	Pursuant to the terms of a Plan and Deposit Agreement dated July 21, 1933, these Notes were offered in exchange, par for par, for the Company's 4½% Gold Notes due November 1, 1933, which were outstanding in the amount of $13,992,000 as of July 21, 1933 and which could not be refunded in the usual manner nor paid at maturity. The Company paid no commissions or other remuneration to bankers or dealers to solicit deposits, but in May, June, and July 1933 various methods for meeting the Nov. 1, 1933 maturity were discussed with Guaranty Co., which in turn had several conversations with Chase Harris Forbes, National City Company, W. E. Hutton & Co. and Union Trust of Pittsburgh. Guaranty Co. did a considerable amount of work in connection with investigating the Company, determining terms of Plan, and preparing necessary papers (such as indenture, etc.) called for by the Plan.	None.

W. W.
February 4, 1935.

¹ Harris Forbes apparently got this piece of business because they had a director on the Board and had the assistance of the National Bank of Commerce in New York (which was the original trustee). Union Trust of Pittsburgh was included because of its interest in Columbia Steel Co. which had been recently purchased by American Rolling Mills. Guaranty Co. was originally offered an appearing position, with a 6% interest in banking group, but no position in origination. After J. R. S. talked to Harris Forbes, they gave Guaranty Co. 10% in origination; 6% in banking group and 4% in selling group. Harris Forbes also agreed to take care of Kidder Peabody and Field, Gloré & Co. separately, which took care of Guaranty Co.'s obligation to them.

Memorandum for Mr. J. W. Cutler

DOW CHEMICAL COMPANY

Fred Kraymer informed me today that he had been approached by Wertheim & Co. to form a joint account to buy rights to subscribe to this company's preferred stock with the idea of subscribing for the stock and marketing it. Recognizing us as the company's bankers, he had told Wertheim & Co. that Brown Harriman would do nothing without first talking to us and therefore wanted to know (1) whether we wanted to join Brown Harriman and Wertheim in such a joint account, (2) if we did not want to go along, did we have any objection to their approaching the large stockholders with the idea of making a bid for their rights, or (3) did we prefer that they take no action whatever.

After discussing the matter with JWC, CWK and Hamilton Wilson, who discussed the whole story with Mr. Dow, I informed FK that Mr. Dow had told us that he had received many letters from brokers who had common stock in their names and were endeavoring to acquire additional rights to which he had replied that he knew of no blocks of rights that were available for sale, that he and Mrs. Dow (his mother) had not yet made up their minds what they were going to do with their rights but that when they were ready to take any action they would surely talk to us about it. Also told FK that under the circumstances we did not want to do anything about the matter at this time and that, of course, if they wished to approach the large stockholders we could not very well object, although we did not think it would do them any good.

After some further discussion, FK said that under all the circumstances they would do nothing about it but asked that, if we did acquire any stock for sale and wanted a partner, we bear them in mind, and I told him that I would make a note of the interest they had expressed.

DPWG&R are of the opinion that any group acquiring rights and subscribing for the preferred stock with the idea of distribution would become underwriters under the Securities Act and no action in connection with the purchase and sale of any of this stock or rights should be taken without thorough discussion with DPWG&R. CWK is familiar with all details in connection with this matter.

Memorandum for Files.

JULY 23, 1935.

IN RE: PURE OIL COMPANY

JRS and CSC called on Henry Dawes in Chicago on October 22, 1934, and discussed generally with him the possibilities of doing a refunding job when market conditions warranted. In view of the fact that Edward B. Smith & Co. had inherited the Guaranty Company's position, we stated to Mr. Dawes that we felt we should be given first consideration. Mr. Dawes said that it was too early to discuss the matter but that he appreciated our stopping in and that he would let us know whenever he had anything to talk about.

Rawleigh Warner, Vice President of the Company, called on January 3 and discussed with JRS and CSC the possibility of funding the bank loans and their outstanding debenture issues. On the same date Henry Dawes sent JRS a letter from a promoter by the name of M. L. Freeman stating that he felt he could place privately for the company $19,000,000 to $20,000,000 of 4¼% notes at 98. JRS advised Dawes we doubted Freeman's ability to accomplish any such thing but that if Dawes desired to have Edward B. Smith discuss the matter with Freeman, we would be glad to do so.

On January 10, CSC called on Mr. Dawes and Mr. Warner in Chicago and they advised him that they were not interested in dealing with Freeman but would like to have us bear in mind the possibility of selling a convertible note issue.

On February 13 Henry Dawes stopped in the New York office and saw Burnett Walker and C. L. Austin. He said he was going to Bermuda and suggested that we discuss the matter of refunding with Mr. Warner. B. W. advised him that CSC would be in Chicago the following week and would take the matter up with Mr. Warner and stressed the necessity of our insisting upon having an independent examination and report of the properties. This seemed agreeable to Mr. Dawes who advised that we obtain someone not affiliated with his competitors.

On February 18 and 19 CSC had several long discussions with Warner in Chicago regarding their refunding plans. He, Warner, was anxious for us to proceed with our investigation. CSC advised him that he would communicate with him not later than the first week in March.

Upon CSC's return to New York he discussed with JRS the possibility of locating the right man to make such an investigation. CSC when in Philadelphia talked three or four times with Mr. J. Howard Pew, President of Sun Oil Company, and Mr. J. N. Pew, Vice President, both of whom hold large interests in the common stock of the Pure Oil Company, as to the advisability of Edward B. Smith & Co. doing a financing job for the Pure Oil Company. Mr. J. Howard Pew felt that if we could satisfy ourselves on the marketing end of their business and the facts as to rumors that some of the junior officers were getting a split from operations of some of the subsidiary companies, he felt that we would be perfectly justified in offering to the public bonds of this company. He felt that Pure Oil Company had very fine producing properties, in fact he went so far as to say that he believed Standard Oil of Indiana would be glad to pay an amount considerably in excess of the Company's total outstanding funded debt and stock and intimated that they might pay as high as $100,000,000 for the producing properties alone. CSC then asked him who he thought we could get to make a report on the company. Mr. J. Howard Pew and Mr. J. N. Pew gave the matter considerable thought and suggested a man by the name of Murray M. Doan, formerly with the Gulf Oil Company, for production, Mr. Primrose for refining and Paul Blazer for marketing. These names were given to Mr. Warner and he said he would consider them.

Mr. Warner then discussed the possibility of refunding only one issue, $13,500,000 bonds due in 1937, leaving the other issue outstanding. CSC said this would not leave the company in proper shape and felt the whole job should be done simultaneously. This conversation took place on March 4.

CSC further discussed the matter with JRS who took up the question of a man to report on the Company with Mr. Morris Kellogg, of the Kellogg Manufacturing Company, who suggested the name of R. C. Holmes, formerly President of the Texas Company. CSC checked with Mr. J. Howard Pew and Mr. Van Dyke, of the Atlantic Refining Company. The latter gave Mr. Holmes a very good recommendation while Mr. Pew stated that in his opinion there was nobody better qualified to give such a report who was available and not connected with any competing company. He said he could not understand why he had not thought of him and we should consider ourselves very very lucky if we could get Mr. Holmes to make the report. JRS and CSC took the matter up with Mr. Luther Cleveland, of the Guaranty Trust Company whose connections with the Texas Company are very close, and while he was not as enthusiastic about Mr. Holmes as Mr. Pew he did admit he knew the oil business. We then suggested to Mr. Dawes and Mr. Warner that we use Mr. Holmes to do this work and they both agreed immediately that we could not get a better man. Mr. Holmes was sent for by Mr. Dawes and agreed to make such a report.

Mr. Holmes went to Chicago about the middle of May and after ten days to two weeks intensive work in the Company's office wrote a report dated May 25. Mr. Holmes told us that his investigation had thoroughly convinced him that the Company had an excellent future, that it had already definitely turned the corner and that he had confidence in it as a profitable going concern at the present time. Shortly thereafter Mr. Holmes came on to New York at CSC's request to lunch with JRS, RC, JR, CSC, BW, Mr. Addinsell and Mr. Leness of the First Boston Corporation. We asked Mr. Holmes many questions about the company and all agreed that we were satisfied after talking to Mr. Holmes that it was proper for us to form a group to do the financing.

In addition, Mr. Addinsell obtained a check on the company from Mr. Sherrill Smith, of the Chase Bank, and advised CSC the check was a very satisfactory one.

JRS and CSC went to Chicago the first week of June and discussed with Mr. Dawes and Mr. Warner the other houses to be included in the underwriting. It was finally agreed to ask The First Boston Corporation, Halsey Stuart, Field Glore, Blyth and Central Republic. Dillon Read were also discussed. BW talked with Mr. Forrestal of Dillon Read who stated that they were not inclined to go along in any deals unless they had a very substantial interest. We advised them that their interest would not be more than 15% and they finally turned the deal down, partly because of this account and partly because they felt they wanted their own independent engineer to check the property which we advised them could not be done.

Blyth & Co. had made repeated calls on the company asking to do the business. When Mr. Lieb was approached by JRS he said they appreciated being asked in the deal and was sorry they were not offered more than 9%. He took the matter up with his partners and three or four days later reported that unless they could have a report by their own engineer they would not wish to go along as they questioned the "present management".

After a further discussion with Mr. Warner and Mr. Dawes, Kidder Peabody, who had made many requests to get into the business, were invited to take Blyth & Co.'s position and accepted.

Following the receipt of Mr. Holmes report dated May 25, a copy of which accompanies this memorandum in the file, CLA went to Chicago, arriving there Monday, June 3rd, for the purpose of making a further investigation of The Pure Oil Company and for checking the Company's Registration Statement and Prospectus in connection with the note issue, which documents were at that time in course of preparation. Mr. L. H. Coleman, a partner of Davis Polk Wardwell Gardiner & Reed joined CLA in Chicago on Wednesday, June 5. In turn, Coleman was joined by Mr. Frederick Sheffield of his office. Sheffield was later replaced by Mr. Edward Wardwell Jr. With these assistants, Coleman worked with us until the conclusion of the issue. Sherlock Hibbs of our office joined CLA in Chicago on June 10 and remained until the conclusion of the issue.

Our first steps in Chicago, aside from a preliminary review of the progress of Registration Statement, were to discuss with the Company officials, particularly Mr. Arthur Brereton, Comptroller, a list of questions in connection with the Company and its operations, which we felt were supplemental to the information required for the Registration Statement and which it was desirable to have answered in order to more completely inform us as to the facts of the Company's operations. A copy of this questionnaire with answers submitted by the Company and other supplemental information received from the Company accompanies this memorandum in the file.

During the first few days in Chicago we also obtained from the Company a comparative summary of earnings for the four months ended April 30, 1934, and for the same period of 1935. A copy of this comparison with notes taken during a conversation with Mr. Brereton accompanies this memorandum in the file. From the 5th of June, intensively, through until the 26th of June, Counsel and ourselves worked on the Registration Statement, checking by question and answer and by cross use of information, statements made therein with regard not only for the accuracy of such statements as were made but also as regards clarity, omissions, etc.

The following outline takes up each item of the Registration Statement by number with particular comments which might be constructive as to the record of the investigation:

Item 1. Nothing.

Item 2. Nothing.

Item 3. Checked by Counsel.

Item 4. This item was checked by Counsel against minute books of Company and subsidiaries and considerable time was spent by all of us in talking with Messrs. Brereton, Harvey (office Counsel), Bailey (Assistant Comptroller) and Mulligan (Assistant Secretary in charge of subsidiary records). Substantial revisions were made in the list of subsidiaries and in the footnotes on account of our check, such revisions including particularly the inclusion of inactive companies and footnotes explaining defaults in preferred dividend payments.

Item 5. This item was entirely revised by us in the light of available information in written and verbal form.

Item 6. This item was materially expanded, revised and corrected by us after discussions not only with Messrs. Brereton and Bailey but also Messrs. Warner, Westcoat, Irwin and Harvey, also the man in charge of the Company's Map Room.

Item 7. Same as item 6.

Item 8. This item was checked in detail particularly with Mr. Harvey and the department head in charge of pipe line right-of-way.

Item 9. This item was checked carefully with the financial officers of the Company particularly in respect of footnotes by Counsel and ourselves.

Item 10. Same as item 9.

Item 11. We were flatly informed by officials of the Company that there were no such guarantees, furthermore any such guarantees would have been indicated by Messrs. Arthur Andersen & Co.

- Item 12a. We were flatly informed by officials of the Company that there had been no warrants or rights granted.
- Item 12b. No investigation required.
- Item 13. No investigation required.
- Item 14. Checked by counsel.
- Item 15. Same as Item 14, except as to (k) and (l) which are entirely on responsibility of the Company.
- Item 16. Same as Item 14.
- Item 17. Same as Item 14.
- Item 18. See Item 11.
- Item 19. See Item 13.
- Item 20. No investigation required.
- Item 21. Checked by counsel.
- Item 22. Information furnished separately by each underwriter.
- Item 23. Checked by counsel.
- Item 24. No checking required.
- Item 25. Checked by counsel.
- Item 26. No checking required.
- Item 27. Checked originally by counsel with Brereton and re-checked by counsel.
- Item 28. We double checked this item.
- Item 29. Not applicable.
- Item 30. Not necessary to check.
- Item 31. Discussed this answer with Brereton and Bailey.
- Item 32. Discussed this answer with Warner, Brereton, Bailey and Harvey.
- Item 33. No further check possible.
- Item 34. No further check possible. Information as regards underwriters furnished separately by them through us.
- Item 35. Discussed this question fully with Warner, Westcoat, Brereton, Bailey and Harvey.
- Item 36. No further check considered necessary. We did not go to Company's private payroll books.
- Item 37. Discussed this question in connection with Arthur Andersen and Company decided inasmuch as their compensation was under $20,000 for the year, even though expenses brought the disbursement to them above that amount, it was not necessary to refer to them.
- Item 38. Discussed generally with financial officers of the Company.
- Item 39. Discussed this question with financial officers of the Company.
- Item 40. The answer to this question was prepared by Mr. Harvey and was discussed at length by our counsel and ourselves with Harvey, Warner and Brereton. Copy of letter from Texas counsel addressed to the Company will be placed in this file.
- Item 41. Considerable time was spent on the answer to this item, not only by the writer in consultation with Harvey and financial Officers of the Company but also by counsel. In addition, Sheffield and Wardwell read all pertinent contracts carefully and went through the minute books of the Company and subsidiaries to check the completeness of the answer. Many corrections were made to the summaries of contracts by counsel and ourselves by reason of reference to the contracts themselves, and from our discussions and checkings we had every reason to believe that all material contracts had been summarized.
- Item 42. Not applicable.
- Item 43. Did not check this except as it applied to ourselves.
- Item 44. We received direct verbal answer as to item 44 from Harvey but did not further check this item.
- Item 45. This item was checked by Messrs. Arthur Andersen & Co., a letter from them thereon to the Company, dated June 26, 1935, being included in this file.
- Item 46. Discussed this matter with Garrett Burns, partner of Arthur Andersen & Co.
- Item 47. This question was discussed as to completeness and accuracy with H. M. Dawes, Warner, Westcoat, Brereton and Harvey, each one of whom told us they could think of nothing more that should go in this item as regards an adequate and complete disclosure. The possibility of having Mattison and Davey, independent tax counsel, qualify as experts as to statements on the income tax situation was discussed and the conclusion was reached by ourselves and counsel that this was not necessary and would add very little in actual effect.

Financial Statements. Except for presentation, clarity and completeness of footnotes, upon which we spent considerable time, we relied entirely upon Messrs. Arthur Andersen & Co., although we discussed at length with Garrett Burns, partner, and Martin, associate, of Arthur Andersen & Co., accounting principles used by the Company and questions of presentation. We were entirely satisfied that the financial picture was properly presented and that accounting principles followed were sound.

Work was begun on the prospectus a week or ten days prior to the filing of the Registration Statement. We considered carefully with the Company what portions of the Registration Statement were required by regulation to go into the prospectus and also what other portions it was advisable to include from the point of view of completeness of information.

In addition to information taken from the Registration Statement and included in the prospectus there are three main headings in the prospectus which are in addition to information included in the Registration Statement. These are the captions "Earnings", "Working Capital" and "Depreciation and Depletion Policies".

We had previously requested the Company to prepare five months earnings figures for 1935 in comparison with such figures for the same period of 1934 and to have the figures reviewed to the greatest extent possible by Arthur Andersen & Co. Both the Company and Arthur Andersen & Co. came to the conclusion that it was not feasible to show earnings for five months of 1934 on a basis comparable to 1935 without undue delay, so such figures were dropped from consideration. An audit of the 1935 figures was discussed but it was agreed by Arthur Andersen & Co., the Company and ourselves that it was unnecessary and impracticable from the standpoint of time and organization.

When the 1935 figures were completed we discussed them at length with the Company and with Messrs. Burns and Martin of Arthur Andersen & Co. We had been most concerned about the portion of the five months earnings which might prove to have accrued by reason of the increase in crude oil inventories during the period. CLA felt that this figure might run to as much as $800,000 to $700,000 but when the figures came to hand we were assured by both the Company and Arthur Andersen & Co. that this question had been thoroughly investigated and that the figure of approximately $300,000 as shown in the prospectus was correct. We endeavored to show in the prospectus as clearly as possible the main reasons why the 1935 earnings were so substantially better than the previous year. Such reasons were set forth to be the development of the Bosco pool, lower dry hole costs and exploration expense, and the inventory profit above mentioned in the amount of approximately $300,000. The summary of earnings as set up in the prospectus was checked carefully by Arthur Andersen & Co. as confirmed in their letter to us dated July 26, 1935 and made a part of this file.

The computation of annual interest requirements was made up in the Treasurer's Department of the Company and checked by Mr. Rawleigh Warner in the presence of CLA.

The pro forma current position shown in the prospectus was based on the balance sheet which had been checked to the extent possible by Messrs. Arthur Andersen & Co. and their letter of July 18, 1935, made a part of this file, sets forth their check of the presentation.

The review which Arthur Andersen & Co. made of the consolidated balance sheet of the Company and subsidiaries as of May 31, 1935 and of the income statement and summary of surplus for the five months ended that date is covered in their letter to us dated July 13, 1935, made a part of this file.

Item 45 of the Registration Statement, as partially included on pages 18, 19, 20 and 21 of the Prospectus, was reviewed by Martin of Arthur Andersen & Co. who considered it to properly and adequately set forth the facts. (Note above on item 45 of the Registration Statement). The section on depreciation and the depletion policy included in the prospectus was checked by Mr. Wiley of The Pure Oil Company and also by Mr. Brereton. CLA further asked Mr. Warner if, in his opinion, it clearly set forth the facts and that there was no special retirement policy of the Company which should be mentioned therein, obtaining a satisfactory answer to such question.

We discussed at considerable length the depletion policy which the Company adopted at the end of the 1934 fiscal year. A memorandum from Mr. Westcott on the subject dated February 4, 1935 is included in the folio of questions and answers dated June 13, in the file and referred to above. He informed me that before the policy was adopted and put in effect, it was discussed with the Securities and Exchange Commission and with the New York Stock Exchange, who seemed to be convinced that the policy was well founded. In addition, Mr. Westcoat informed me very confidentially, that the Company had an outside firm of accountants in New York give their opinion on the policy. I believe this firm was either Haskins & Sells or Price, Waterhouse. The opinion of this firm according to Mr. Westcoat had been favorable to the policy.

We came to the conclusion that the depletion policy seemed perfectly reasonable and that the disclosure made in the Prospectus and Registration Statement was full and complete.

Both Messrs. Burns and Martin of Arthur Andersen & Co. informed CLA that they considered the Company's depreciation rates adequate.

The summaries of the items "Contracts" and "Pending Litigation" in the prospectus were carefully checked by our Counsel as being adequate and sufficient.

To conclude, it seems fitting to state that the Company's officials and organization from beginning to end were most cooperative and apparently willing and desirous to furnish all pertinent information in connection with the Company and its operations. We found no disposition to hold back nor any wilful attempt to give mis-information. We have every reason to believe and do believe that all information furnished by the Company and included in the Registration Statement and prospectus was thoroughly checked and re-checked by the Company's officials and staff.

We have received no information from Mr. R. C. Holmes or any other source which would indicate that the presentation of the facts in the prospectus or Registration Statement was incorrect or misleading.

Representatives of the other underwriting houses met in Chicago with us on June 24 and 25 and again in New York with us on July 8. While in Chicago they had every opportunity to talk with officials of the Company and check the information contained in the registration statement and prospectus. A considerable number of their suggestions were incorporated in these documents.

$25,000,000 KOPPERS COMPANY FIRST MORTGAGE AND COLLATERAL TRUST BONDS, SERIES A, 4%, DUE NOVEMBER 1, 1951

This business was under consideration for several months beginning in the early part of summer of 1936. Considerable amount of work was done beginning in June covering an analysis and investigation of the Company's business and corporate affairs.

When the underwriting group was selected, every effort was made to give due consideration to past history and connections with the Company's previous financing and to some extent with the financing of its subsidiary, Eastern Gas & Fuel.

On account of business relations with Standard Gas and Electric in connection with Northern States Power, Bancamerica-Blair, Schroder Rockefeller & Co., Inc. and Parrish & Co., were included in the business at the particular wish of the Koppers Company who also suggested the inclusion of Byllesby & Co. Byllesby & Co., however, declined to go along. They had been offered the same amount as the two former. Dillon, Read & Co. were invited to participate and declined, stating that though they liked the business, they had not yet seen their way clear to do business in the State of Pennsylvania.

We stated clearly to Edward B. Smith & Co., and First Boston Corporation that we had no choice as to the selection of either house to appear second in the business: Smith on account of the indirect relationship through the Guaranty Company to the Koppers business, and First Boston on account of their relationship with Eastern Gas and Fuel. A solution was suggested by George Woods of the First Boston Corporation. He stated that they would be glad to take third position provided they could give us some help in the syndication of the deal by having Mr. Frank Stanton of their organization come down to Pittsburgh. He made it clear that in no sense would they propose to inject themselves into the management of the syndication.

Following is a list of the underwriting participations with amounts:

	Mellon Securities Corporation.....	$8,000,000
	Edward B. Smith & Co.....	2,500,000
	The First Boston Corporation.....	2,500,000

JONES AND LAUGHLIN STEEL CORPORATION

This business was first discussed with us in November 1935 by the Company. Although we considered that we had no obligation with respect to the account to any other banking house, we discussed the business first with Morgan Stanley & Co. to determine whether that firm would care to assist us with the business. Mr. Harold Stanley said that he would be very glad to give us any help he could, but that if Morgan Stanley & Co. appeared in the business, they would insist on having the leadership. He made it clear that they would very possibly like to participate in the business in any event on a non-appearing basis. We decided to proceed on the latter basis.

We then approached Messrs. Swan and Walker of Edward B. Smith & Co., who were formerly connected with the Guaranty Company of New York, which had second position to the Union Trust Company of Pittsburgh in the previous preferred stock issue of Jones and Laughlin, and asked them if they would be prepared to help us on the registration and syndication of the business on the basis that it was clearly understood it would be our leadership and not a joint leadership.

Edward B. Smith & Co. were entirely satisfied to proceed on the above basis and it was not until the business had been completed that the amount of their compensation was discussed with them and agreed upon.

There were no commitments made to anyone in this business with respect to continuing arrangements for the future.

MEMORANDUM

OCTOBER 29, 1935.

JONES & LAUGHLIN STEEL CORPORATION

Mr. W. J. Creighton, Vice President of Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation, advised me today that he had discussed with Price Waterhouse, the corporation's auditors, the question of closing the books on October 31 for the purpose of an audit in connection with their proposed new bond issue.

For various reasons, it was determined that it would be advisable to delay the bond issue until after the end of the year, using the year-end figures in the registration statement, etc. The auditors have agreed to have the audit completed by February 10; and the various data for the Securities Exchange Commission, February 20. Under this schedule, the proposed issue would be out of registration by March 15.

This course was decided upon when it was realized that if the closing were October 31, it would be approximately March 1 before the proposed issue could be released from registration.

In view of the fact that it is anticipated the earnings for the fourth quarter will be very satisfactory, it seems advisable to follow the time schedule above outlined.

NOVEMBER 8, 1935.

We have discussed the J & L financing with Harold Stanley of Morgan Stanley & Co. and also with Messrs. Swan, Cutler and Walker of E. B. Smith & Co. In the discussion with Mr. Stanley it was made clear that Melseco would be glad to have Morgan Stanley & Co. take a substantial participation in the business. Mr. Stanley stated that if they appeared in the financing, it would be necessary for them to manage the business and have the first appearing position. After considerable discussion in Pittsburgh, Mr. Stanley was informed that this would not be satisfactory to Melseco and that we felt it necessary to lead the business.

Thereupon E. B. Smith & Co. were offered and accepted the opportunity to appear second to Melseco and to take part in the management of the business under our leadership. It was made clear by F. R. D. that relative amounts of underwriting of participation and any management fee would be discussed at a later time, which was satisfactory to E. B. Smith & Co. We are now working with council and with the company on various matters concerning the security to be set up, such as business of mortgage, and lien of the mortgage, etc.

WILSON & COMPANY

For some time Messrs. Safro and Nye in the Investment Advisory organization have been interested in the possibility of the recapitalization of Wilson & Co. George Nye did considerable work on a possible plan.

Herman Safro has talked recently with a Mr. Paul Appenzellar (formerly of Swartwout & Appenzellar) who indicated that a plan had been worked out by someone and had the approval of the Wilson management.

At Mr. Safro's suggestion I talked this morning with Mr. E. A. Potter, Jr. and told him of the interest which has existed in the possibility of the Wilson recapitalization by some of the members of this organization. I outlined to him the information which Mr. Safro had obtained from Mr. Appenzellar. Mr. Potter told me that many people, including Hornblower & Weeks, had been suggesting various plans to the Company for its recapitalization. He said that, whereas the Company was interested in the possibility of recapitalization and hoped to effect some plan, he believed the present was too early for this to be accomplished and thought that it would be not earlier than 1935 before anything would be done.

I asked Mr. Potter if he thought there would be any chance for this organization, having worked out a plan satisfactory to the Company, to make a profit in carrying it out. Mr. Potter said that he thought that was a possibility; that it would have to be done by working closely with the inner councils of the Company, which he indicated would be somewhat more difficult than ordinarily because of the fact that so many people were already knocking at the door. I took his reply, however, to be encouraging. It seems to me that if you want to go further with this, the best way to do it would be for you to have a talk with Mr. Potter sometime at your convenience with the idea that through him you might be brought into contact with the executive management of the Company for the purposes of discussion.

Memorandum for Mr. Karl Weisheit.

In furtherance of the tentative plans of recapitalization of Wilson & Co. Inc. which were submitted to you by George L. Nye of this Department on August 13, I would like you to have the following information:

I talked today with Mr. Paul Appenzellar (formerly of Swartwout & Appenzellar) who has been interested in various reorganizations for a number of years including an active part in the M-K-T reorganization. Mr. Appenzellar stated that a plan of recapitalization of Wilson & Company has been worked up with the knowledge and consent of the Wilson management and which, according to present plans, meets with the latter's approval. In effect this plan provides as follows:

- (1) Payment of the accruals due on the Preferred and Class A stocks to be made in 5% Debentures (maturity not mentioned) and which Mr. Appenzellar stated would be worth at least 80.

- (2) Elimination of the Class A stock by conversion into common at some ratio not stated.
- (3) Reduction in consideration of all the above in the Preferred stock from a 7% rate to a 6% rate.
- (4) The payment of dividends on the common stock to be ultimately outstanding at some rate between $1 and $2 per annum.

Mr. Appenzellar personally owns several hundred shares of the Preferred stock and is interested in an investment trust that holds 1,000 shares. His attitude toward the above plan is favorable with the exception of the reduction in the Preferred from $7 to $6 to which he strongly objects and which, in his estimation based upon experience, will cause the entire plan to fall through. He urged that we use our influence upon those in touch with the situation (he meant E. A. Potter, Jr.) to eliminate this change in the regular dividend rate on the preferred.

WHITE, WELD & CO.,
July 8, 1935.

Mr. JOHN W. CUTLER,
Messrs. E. B. Smith & Co.,
35 Nassau Street, New York, N. Y.

DEAR JOHN: You and Burnett Walker for your firm and Ben Clark and I for White, Weld & Co. have had several conversations during the course of the last several months with respect to refunding operations for Wilson & Co., Inc. Inasmuch as the understandings had between us were primarily between yourself and myself, I am sending this letter to you with a chronological history taken from our files on this matter. The history is as follows:

On February 26, 1935 an entrepreneur by the name of M. L. Freeman discussed with us the question of refunding the outstanding bond issue.

During the same week Mr. Freeman demonstrated that he was not merely presenting an idea which is, of course, open field for all free lance promoters but introduced in our office J. D. Cooney, Vice President of Wilson & Co., Inc. and the whole discussion was with respect to the matter of refunding their outstanding bonds. After such discussion, Mr. Cooney said that they would in the next few weeks decide on their program and said he would again discuss with us the question of what sort of a trade we might be able to work out.

We subsequently confirmed with Mr. Halstead Freeman that there was an open field for the business.

We recognized also that of the original houses in the major position on this business, all but one had discontinued activities.

Recognizing, however, that some of the partners of your firm had previously been officers of the Guaranty Co., which had discontinued its business, and not knowing whether you were active in considering this business, we decided to discuss it with you and, if you wished us to do so, join hands with you in its development.

On March 6th Ben Clark saw Joe Swan and advised him of the above and Mr. Clark's report on the meeting states that "Joe was frank to say that they had no discussion so far." Further that Joe said "I do not want to tie you up in any way and I will look into it with the idea that we are two friends and you will hear from me when I get posted."

On March 11th you telephoned to me about this matter, stating that you understood Freeman had been in to see us saying that he had authority to represent the company. You stated that this had been checked with the company and it had been found that Freeman was not authorized to negotiate and you further stated that on account of your close friendship with the Guaranty Trust Co. you had as good a position as anyone to negotiate with Wilson & Co. and it was your thought that we should tell Mr. Freeman we were not in a position to deal with him and that your firm would follow the matter with the company and come back to us as matters developed.

On March 18th you telephoned me saying that the old account at the Guaranty was joint with Hallgarten & Co., that you had talked with Hallgarten & Co., whose Chicago partner is a director of the company, and had arranged that we were to be included in the business. You said further that you hoped it would be agreeable to us to let the matter of our percentage rest for the present as you intended to work out a fair and reasonable place for us. I told you this was satisfactory and left the matter in your hands.

I asked you whether there was any indication of serious competition from other directions and you stated that you did not see how with the friendship of E. A. Potter and Emerich there could be much doubt as to your getting the business. We consequently folded our hands to await developments.

Recently when it became apparent that the business was in the immediate making and not having heard from you, I called your office but could not reach you. Later the same day Burnett Walker telephoned me asking for a review from us of the Wilson & Co. matter as between ourselves and yourselves. I gave him the above story.

I did not hear further from Burnett Walker but he came over and saw Ben Clark, expressed extreme regret and stated that embarrassing as it was to your firm, we could not be included in the Wilson & Co. business, that Field, Glore & Co. and the company itself had refused your request that we be included.

(Handwritten): B. Walker says this incorrect. Field OK on us for ptcn.

The above chronological story of this matter is based on memoranda made immediately after the various conversations took place and, hence, is neither hazy in our minds nor subject to misunderstanding or faulty recollection.

The above is not sent to you as a record on which we make any claim on you for Burnett Walker has already stated your position.

The experience, however, makes it necessary for us to raise a question as to another matter so I request that you show this letter to Joe and ask that he let us know just what he wishes us to understand with respect to the position reserved for us in the matter of Columbia Gas & Electric, about which I have never had any conversation with him but it was cleared with Joe by our mutual good friend, Jim Hutton.

In order that you and Joe may have before you the Columbia Gas & Electric situation, I might say that on April 11th I discussed with Jim Hutton the entire Columbia Gas & Electric situation, as a result of which Jim advised me that so far as he was concerned we could not only participate on original terms but might also appear in the public advertising. He said he would take it up with Joe Swan along these lines and that he, Jim, would advise me what he had been able to work out.

On April 26th Jim told me he had had a very satisfactory talk with Joe and that Joe had agreed with the principle that our firm was to have a participation on original terms and an "appropriate" place in the public advertising.

We here trust that none of you will receive this letter as being in any sense controversial but will also, we believe, recognize the necessity of our knowing at this time just where we stand in regard to this further piece of business which has been discussed with you.

With regards to you all, I am,

Sincerely,

FARIS R. R.

Financing of Industrial and Public Utility Corporations

FIFTEEN WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK, February 25, 1935.

Re: Wilson & Co., Inc.

GUDON WATTLES, Esq.,

WHITE, WELD & Co., 40 Wall Street,
New York, N. Y.

DEAR MR. WATTLES: Referring to our telephone conversation of this morning, you no doubt know that the company is the third largest meat packers, preceded by Armour & Co. and Swift & Co. There are about $18,000,000. outstanding 6% first mortgage bonds, series A, originally underwritten by Guaranty Trust Co. and associates. The bonds are due April 1, 1941 and are callable at $107½ on any interest date on eight weeks notice. They are listed on the New York Stock Exchange and have been selling currently between $109½ and $110. The low for 1934 was $97½, the high $110. Times interest earned were as follows:

1928.....	2.15
1929.....	2.17
1930.....	2.49
1931 deficit $525,527 before interest.
1932.....	1.04
1933.....	3.59
1934 (fiscal year Oct. 27, 1934).....	5

The earnings for the first quarter of this fiscal year were approximately $1,500,000. which is a better showing than for the like quarter 1933 and 1934.

The current assets as of October 27, 1934 were $34,289,841, current liabilities $8,260,614, leaving a working capital of $26,029,227. The plant and equipment as of that date were carried after depreciation at $37,059,861.

I had negotiations with Mr. Edward Foss Wilson, President, pertaining to the possibility of arranging an issue of between $17,000,000. and $20,000,000. of 4½% twenty-year first mortgage bonds with a fixed sinking fund of $200,000. per annum, callable at $103. for the first three years, to be scaled down after that. The price to be $97.

Herewith is a copy of a letter from Mr. Edward Foss Wilson, President, of February 21st, in which he expressed a desire that I discuss the matter with him, Mr. W. C. Buethe, Treasurer, and Mr. Thomas E. Wilson, Chairman of the Board.

In view of the fact that it is essential to telephone Mr. Wilson tomorrow, I shall appreciate it if you would be kind enough to advise me whether you would be prepared to go to Chicago, and, if so, when.

Very truly yours,

M. L. FREEMAN.

Mr. M. L. FREEMAN,

DEAR SIR: We have your kind letter of February 19th in which you mention your interest in arranging purchase of bonds from our Company.

We would be very glad to discuss your proposition whenever you happen to be coming out to Chicago. If you will let us know when this will be, I believe we can arrange to have both our Treasurer, Mr. W. C. Buethe, and Mr. Thomas E. Wilson also on hand to enter into the discussion.

As you of course realize, our biggest problem in refunding our present bond issue due in 1941 is the call price of 107½.

Yours very truly,

Memorandum for Mr. Timpson.
Re: Wilson & Co.

Mr. M. L. Freeman has brought to us a refunding proposition which he claims E. F. Wilson, President of the above company, is willing to entertain. This is for the issuance of between $17,000,000 and $20,000,000 of 4½% 20 Year First Mortgage bonds with a sinking fund of $200,000 per annum, bonds to be callable at 103 for the first 3 years with a scale price thereafter. The price to the company to be 97.

The company has outstanding at the present time $16,000,000 First Mortgage 6s due 1941 and callable at 107½ on 8 weeks notice. The present bonds are currently selling on the New York Stock Exchange at 109½, to yield 4.20% and have ranged during the last year between 97¾ and 110.

These bonds are not held by any of the large institutions. Mr. Stiles of the Prudential Insurance Co. told me today on my checking with him that Wilson & Co. had not been considered one of the best packing companies but had been doing considerably better lately, that without making a rather thorough study he could not give me an opinion as to whether the bonds would be of interest to the large insurance companies. He suggested our getting a check from either the First National Bank or the Continental Illinois National Bank in Chicago or Samuel McRoberts, former head of the Chatham Phenix here in New York, in order to get a quick check as to whether the company was one that would be desirable to endeavor to work out a financing picture with.

Mr. Haggerty of the Metropolitan Life stated that they did not like packing company bonds and considered Wilson & Co. a Class B company and would not be interested in the bonds.

Mr. M. L. Freeman suggested that on a basis of say 3 points gross in the business there would be a division of underwriting profit of say ¼ of a point to ½ of a point, commitment profit of say ¾ of a point and selling group profit of say 1¼ to 2 points. On such a basis he said he would want to have ⅓ of the originating profit. This would mean that he would get ⅓ of either ¼ of a point or ½ a point depending on which was settled on as an originating profit on the above basis.

(Signed) G. W. WATTLES.

M. L. FREEMAN, Esq.,

15 William Street, New York City.

DEAR MR. FREEMAN: With reference to your letter of February 25, 1935 regarding Wilson & Co., Inc., if, as a result of the negotiation with you, we should complete a deal for the refunding of Wilson & Co.'s bonds substantially as outlined in your letter, we hereby agree that out of the compensation or profit which may be received by White, Weld & Co., we will pay you as follows.

The proposal outlined by you contemplates a gross spread of three points for placing these bonds. This spread will probably be divided by us into a selling group proportion of from $1\frac{1}{4}\%$ to 2% ; an underwriting proportion of probably $\frac{1}{4}$ of 1% , and an originating profit of probably $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ of 1% . It is agreed that we are to pay you one-third of such originating profit, as we may receive, after out-of-pocket expenses properly chargeable to such profit. Such one-third shall be payable to you upon receipt by us of our share of the originating profit and the determination of said out-of-pocket expenses.

While, as stated above, it is at present contemplated that the originating profit will probably be $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ of 1% , the final actual percentage is to be determined by us in our sole discretion. It is understood that we may also participate in such underwriting and selling groups as may be formed and receive profits as a result of such participations, but that you shall not be entitled to any share or participation in any profits which may accrue to us by reason of our participation in such groups or either of them.

If the foregoing is in accordance with your understanding, will you kindly so indicate by signing and returning to us the enclosed duplicate of this letter.

WILSON & Co.

CLA talked with E. A. Potter reference possibility of our working on recapitalization plan. JRS should talk with EAP before seeing officials of company. JWC—9/11/34.

JRS has talked with EAP and we are now discussing possible plans which we might suggest to Company. Believe Company is actually considering specific plans. CLA—10/9/34.

CLA had a talk with Mr. E. A. Potter, Jr., of the Guaranty Trust Company on October 17th and BW and CLA together had additional conversation with Mr. Potter the following day, as a result of which Mr. Swan is planning to be available to Mr. Potter in Chicago on Tuesday, October 23rd, at which time there is scheduled a Directors' meeting of the Company. CLA—10/19/34.

Talked with E. A. Potter as to outcome of Directors' meeting in Chicago this week, in which it was understood plans of reorganization would be taken up. JWC—10/27/34.

JRS and JWC talked with EAP Jr. yesterday. Referring to the directors meeting last week he said that a plan of reorganization, looking towards funding the 26% Pfd dividend in arrears with (1) debentures or (2) 5% Pfd, had been opposed and that the matter had been returned to the Committee for further study. He indicated the Co's business for the first 11 months of their year had been extremely good ($4,700,000 net). JWC—10/30/34.

E. A. Potter said that at a Directors meeting yesterday in Chicago the Reorganization Plan was again postponed for thirty days, largely because he did not feel the terms were quite generous enough. JWC—11/30/34.

Talked with Ned Potter, who said he had spoken to Mr. Wilson in our behalf and would keep us advised. Doubtful if there is anything we can do here. JWC—1/2/35.

Clark of White Weld called me, but in my absence spoke to JRS saying that M. L. Freeman had been in to see them regarding refunding of Wilson 6% Bonds, stating that he spoke with authority from the Company. I subsequently talked with E. A. Potter Jr., who called Mr. Wilson on the telephone. Mr. Wilson denied that they had given Freeman any authority to speak for them, and asked Mr. E. A. Potter, Jr., to please so state if asked. E. A. Potter Jr. suggested if we are interested, that we write Mr. Wilson and say than when he was ready, we will be glad to have a chance to figure. The matter will receive consideration some time in the near future, and has been pushed forward on account of the Swift Refunding and a probable Cudahy Refunding. JWC—3/8/35.

I reported to Farris Russell my conversation with Ned Potter, who has talked with Mr. Wilson. Mr. Russell said they would leave the matter of following this to us, and rely on us if anything developed. JWC—3/11/35.

CLA and I talked again with Ned Potter and submitted plan for replacing 6's with $16 million 15 year 4's, to be sold on a 4.25 basis. This would involve bank credit of $2,300,000. EAP said he would prefer no bank loan. He also suggested we write Wilson direct, and the matter, while not up at the moment, would probably come up at the March meeting on or about the 25th. JWC—3/12/35.

Talked again with Potter on telephone, who called me. Explained that the Guaranty had handled previous financing for Company, and had associates in those former deals, some of whom would have to be taken care of. Russell said he understood and would leave it to us to take care of his firm in the proper way. JWC—3/12/35.

JRS and I talked with Maurice Newton of Hallgarten 3/14/35 and the next day JRS talked with Emerich of Hallgarten, a director of Wilson. We told him we had been working on the business and referred to the old joint account they had with the Guaranty and asked them to join us, which they said they would be glad to do. We also told them that we were committed to White Weld & Co. for an interest if business resulted. I subsequently reported this to Farris Russell, who again said they were entirely agreeable to leaving the makeup of the group and interests to us. I also reported the Hallgarten development to Ned Potter, who thought it was a wise move. Mr. O'Connor of Wilson & Co.'s New York office subsequently called JRS and said Mr. Wilson had received his letter and also added that H. G. Freeman was advising them in their financing. JWC—3/18/35.

H. D. Freeman dropped in later to say the same thing and indicated there was no hurry, as if they decided to call the bonds Oct. 1st notice would not go out before August 1st. JWC—3/20/35.

Newton reported from Emerich, who attended directors meeting today, that the matter of refinancing was not discussed. JWC—3/26/35.

JRS called on Mr. T. E. Wilson in Chicago 4/1 and was very cordially received by him. Explained to him the dissolution of Guaranty Company and status of EBS&Co. and advised him we were very anxious to be given consideration in connection with any financing which he might do. As he had already advised JRS, he is consulting with Halstead Freeman but said he would certainly have us very much in mind. JWC—4/4/35.

Ned Potter said Company had engaged Price, Waterhouse to begin necessary work looking towards registration. As far as he knew they had made no commitments with any bankers. JWC—5/3/35.

JRS spoke to Newton re inclusion of Field, Glore & Co., on account of Halstead Freeman, who is being retained by the company in connection with proposed financing. Speak to First Boston before going further. JWC—5/14/35.

JRS talked to H. Freeman on telephone. Nothing very urgent as yet. Confirmed new audit in process of being made. Will be glad to discuss situation with us. JWC—5/31/35.

Mr. Briggs of Byllesby & Co. talked to me about Wilson. I told him we were hopeful but were not in position to talk. He asked if we were put in charge of the business what our attitude would be towards them and I said that he could start out with the assumption that we would be delighted to have them in any piece of business with us although the way business was being presented to people today we had to recognize that in many instances groups were practically made to order by the companies—all of which he understands. They, however, must be considered in this connection. Mr. Briggs called my attention to the business which they were very glad to have had us in and would like us to be in Duquesne, Oklahoma and, of course, Northern States business which will come along a little later. BW—6/6/35.

Saw Halstead Freeman 6/4/35 at Palmer House, Chicago. Very friendly and believe he will be of help. JWC—6/4/35.

T. E. Wilson expected back about June 12th. JWC—6/5/35.

W. C. Buethe called JRS on telephone today and said they were actively discussing refunding operation and they wanted to put the matter in our hands jointly with Field Glore. JRS mentioned leadership but Buethe apparently did not want to get into that. JRS to see in Chicago. JWC—6/6/35.

Judge Cooney stopped in today and stated that they had in the past 1½ years made capital additions of some $4,000,000, which could form the basis for the issuance of additional bonds. He stated that there had been some discussion in their office about the advisability of raising $4,000,000 or $5,000,000 additional capital for working capital purposes, and if we thought that there was any chance that there would be a substantial rise in interest rates within the next year or two, they would give consideration to the issuance of additional debt, either under the mortgage or as 1 to 5 year serials. Judge Cooney stated that with the light run of live stock which they have been experiencing and which they would probably experience for another year or two in view of the drought and government slaughter program, there was little danger of their running into working capital shortage. When, however, the run of live stock returns to normal, they will require larger working capital for inventory purposes. If, however, we felt that there would be no material change in interest rates for a minimum of two years, it was his thought that they could borrow so cheaply at the banks that public financing would be unnecessary; particularly in view of the fact that if they could hold off public financing for a period of two years and the live stock run did not come back until that time, they would probably not require any financing because of the building up of cash resources in the meantime.

He asked us to communicate with them immediately if we felt that any marked change in interest rates was impending. JJB—12/11/36.

BW and CWK met with Mr. Halstead Freeman of Glore Forgan and Judge Cooney of Wilson & Co. on Wednesday, March 17, to discuss a revised proposal. The revised plan suggested was the issuance by the Co. of $6,000,000 to $6,500,000 Conv. Debs. convertible at $12.50 or $13. per share, depending upon market conditions. It was agreed that bankers would match their time against the Company's and go ahead and prepare the necessary documents for registration on such a proposal, subject to an agreement on price to the Co. at a later date. Thursday morning BW and CWK met with Mr. Wilson and Judge Cooney and H. Freeman in Mr. Wilson's room at the Biltmore Hotel. Mr. Wilson was apprised of the general agreement which had been made the previous day; this was satisfactory to him. Also discussed at this meeting the relationship between Glore Forgan and E. B. S. and the handling of the syndication and books of this deal. BW stated that on a deal of this kind it would be impossible to handle it as the previous one had been, and that one of the two firms would have to have complete control, even the pecuniary compensation was the same for each firm. No decision was reached at the meeting as Mr. Wilson wanted to give the matter further thought. The latest proposal is contained in a memorandum dated March 17, 1937. CWK—3/18/37.

We appeared first in public offering today of $6,500,000 Conv. 3½% Debs. at 101½ and acc. int. EW—5/12/37.

Mr. THOMAS E. WILSON,
Chairman of the Board, Wilson & Co., Inc.,
41st St. & Ashland Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

DEAR MR. WILSON: During the past few months various of my partners and I have had conversations with Mr. E. A. Potter, Jr., with respect to the possibility of a refunding operation in connection with your outstanding 6% Bonds. Within the last few days we have been informed by Mr. Potter that the Company is considering such an operation.

Although we understand that you perhaps are not ready to come to a decision in this matter immediately, I wish to inform you that my firm stands ready to be of service to you in this connection. We believe that an operation profitable to the Company can be worked out and are prepared to discuss a definite proposal with you. I should be glad to come to Chicago to talk over this matter with you any time it suits your convenience.

I would like to take this opportunity of congratulating you upon the success of your Reclassification Plan.

With kindest regards, I am,

Sincerely yours,

Memo to: Mr. C. L. Austin, Wilson & Company.

Clark of White Weld called me, but in my absence spoke to J. R. S. saying that M. L. Freeman had been in to see them regarding refunding of Wilson 6% Bonds, stating that he spoke with authority from the Company. I subsequently talked with E. A. Potter, Jr., who called Mr. Wilson on the telephone. Mr. Wilson denied that they had given Freeman any authority to speak for them, and asked Mr. E. A. Potter, Jr., to please so state if asked.

E. A. Potter, Jr., suggested if we are interested, that we write Mr. Wilson and say that when he was ready, we will be glad to have a chance to figure.

The matter will receive consideration some time in the near future, and has been pushed forward on account of the Swift Refunding and a probable Cudahy Refunding.

J. H. BRIGGS, Esq.,

Vice President, H. M. Byllesby and Company,
231 South LaSalle Street, Chicago, Illinois.

DEAR JOE: On last Thursday Joe Swan of Edward B. Smith & Co. called up Harry Addinsell and told him that they were working on a refunding operation for Wilson & Co.

In checking up our past historical records, it came to my attention that over a period of years the financing for Wilson & Co. was handled by a group of which the Guaranty Company was the manager and in which were included Chase Securities Corporation, Blair & Co., Halgarten & Co., First Trust and Savings Bank, Chicago, Continental and Commercial, Chicago and Illinois Merchants Trust Company, Chicago.

For your confidential information, the Guaranty, Chase, Blair and Halgarten each had an interest of approximately 18.75%.

In the early part of March Miles Warner told me of the discussions which he had had with one of the Wilsons and asked if we would be interested in figuring on the business and on the 15th of March, in response to a wire from George Leness, I indicated to Miles that we were unwilling to undertake a deal along the terms similar to Swift or to enter into negotiations which involved a high degree of competition and stated that if the company was prepared to sit down and discuss the best form of financing, we would be interested in principle in so doing. I did not hear anything further about this matter and assumed that it had died a natural death.

At the time of my discussions with Miles, I did not realize that the Chase Securities Corporation had always been in the group headed by the Guaranty Company of New York. As Mr. Swan indicated that they had discussed this matter, we told him that we would be delighted to join with him in discussing the re-formation of the old group. We told Mr. Swan of Miles Warner's connection with one of the Wilsons and of our discussions with him and said that we would like to see—when, as and if the group is formed—that H. M. Byllesby and Company had a position in the business and that we assumed that this would be agreeable to him. He indicated to us that he also wanted to consider the inclusion of White, Weld and Field Glore.

I know that you will protect me on this information, but I want you to know the facts in connection with these discussions and while, naturally, I would not want to attempt to involve you in making any decision, it seems to me that it is most logical that the old group should have a legitimate claim on the business—particularly with the tie-in with the Guaranty Trust Company and if we can work it around so that H. M. Byllesby and Company has an original interest and an appearance position, it would seem to be the desirable thing to do—rather than to get into a competitive mess.

In addition, I want you, personally, to know that we urged the inclusion of H. M. Byllesby and Company and will do everything in our power to see that a place is made in the business for you if you so desire. In the meantime, I know that you will protect me in giving you this information as—frankly, we have not attempted to obtain clearance with Mr. Swan to discuss the matter with you.

Please let me know sometime early next week if you would like to have us continue to advance the argument that you should be included in this group with an appearance position and I know in the meantime that you will protect me in this matter, as will Miles, in case anything is said to him.

With kindest regards,

Sincerely yours,

DRL/g

WILSON & COMPANY, INC.

Mr. Swan asked me yesterday whether we would join with them in reconstituting the old group which the Guaranty headed for Wilson & Co. business. After discussion here I told Mr. Swan that we would be glad to do so. I called his attention to the fact that Mr. Miles Warner of Byllesby, who is a personal friend of some of the younger Wilsons, had talked with Mr. Leness about the matter some months ago, but that we told Mr. Warner that we would not want to be drawn into competition for the business and we have heard nothing about it since.

I therefore suggested to Mr. Swan that if a group was getting together, some consideration be given to including Byllesby in it on some basis. He subsequently called me back to say that he thought for certain reasons that it would be desirable to include White Weld and Field Glore and asked if we would consider this question and give him our views.

SEPTEMBER 9, 1935.

WILSON & Co., INC., FIRST MORTGAGE TWENTY-YEAR BONDS--SERIES A 4%, DUE JULY 15, 1955.

Before actual work on the deal was begun a preliminary meeting was held on 6/10/35 in the Chicago Offices of Field, Glore & Co., attended by Chas. Glore and Maurice Bent of Field, Glore and BW and JJB of EBS. Glore advised that he had been informed by Russ Forgan from New York that he (Forgan) and JRS had tentatively discussed the following syndicate:

E. B. S.	25%	Eastern Manager
Field Glore	25%	Western "
The First Boston Corp.	10%
Speyer & Co.	10%
Hallgarten & Co.	10%
Bancamerica Blair Corp.	10%
White Weld & Co.	5%
Goldman, Sachs & Co.	5%
	100%

In this meeting Chas. Glore stated that he would like to make room for Lee Higginson Corp. and BW stated that he would like to make room for Byllesby & Co.

On 6/11/35 a meeting was held at Wilson & Co.'s Chicago Offices attended by Messrs. Buethé, Cooney, and Hoffman, officers of Wilson & Co., Halstead Freeman, then representing Wilson & Co. in an advisory capacity, Glore and Bent of Field, Glore and BW and JJB. After discussing the claims of various underwriting houses the company, through Mr. Buethé, indicated that they would be pleased with a syndicate composed of (or at least including) the following houses: E. B. S., Field Glore, Speyer, Kuhn, Loeb, Hallgarten, Lazard Freres, Lee Higginson, Hornblower, Goldman Sachs.

In discussing the various underwriters under consideration Mr. Buethé specifically excluded White Weld by name, despite the fact that BW had indicated that he would be pleased to have White Weld included in any group formed. Pressed for our views of the group BW stated that he had no exception to any name on the list, but did feel that the issue would need "selling" and that he would prefer to see the group contain greater retail distribution ability, and when asked to be specific BW stated that if he were to choose a group without regard to what obligations the company might be under to other houses, he would suggest as the four leaders in the business E. B. S., Field Glore, First Boston and Brown Harriman. Later in the discussion he also mentioned Byllesby as having good distribution among Chicago houses. Chas. Glore agreed entirely with BW.

Mr. Buethé insisted that Speyer appear ahead of all houses except the two leaders, because Speyer had been helpful on the reclassification of the stock last winter and had offered the first refunding plan for the company's consideration. Goldman Sachs were included at the company's request because they had dealt in the company's commercial paper, and Hornblower was included at the company's request because they also had been of assistance to the company in the matter of reclassification of the company's stock. The other underwriting houses were proposed by the company primarily because they already had submitted refunding plans to the company.

Ultimately it was agreed (and confirmed at another meeting the next day, 6/12/35) that the group tentatively would be as follows, subject to approval of Mr. Thos. E. Wilson, who was expected to return from Europe within a few days:

E. B. S.....	$5,000,000	25%
Field Glore.....	5,000,000	25
Speyer.....	2,000,000	10
First Boston.....	2,000,000	10
Hallgarten.....	2,000,000	10
Goldman Sachs.....	800,000	4
Bancamerica-Blair.....	800,000	4
Lazard Freres.....	800,000	4
Hornblower.....	800,000	4
Lee Higginson.....	800,000	4
	$20,000,000	100%

with the reservation that it might be necessary to make room for Kuhn Loeb, who, through Elisha Walker, had put considerable pressure on the company for the business. (Blair, Walker's former affiliation, having had largest interest in previous financing.) Ultimately Kuhn Loeb was included to the extent of $2,000,000, or 10%, and participations of all other members were reduced by 10%, and about midway in the registration period Kuhn Loeb decided not to appear in the advertising or on the face of the prospectus and requested that its name appear last in the list of underwriters appearing inside the prospectus and in the registration statement.

It was agreed that E. B. S. be Eastern Manager and that Field Glore be Western Manager, E. B. S. to lead in every respect except for publicity and advertising in Chicago territory.

Accordingly the offering was made on July 30, 1935 by the following group, with the participations indicated (Kuhn Loeb not appearing publicly):

Edward B. Smith & Co.....	$4,500,000
Field, Glore & Co.....	4,500,000
Speyer & Co.....	1,800,000
The First Boston Corporation.....	1,800,000
Hallgarten & Co.....	1,800,000
Goldman, Sachs & Co.....	720,000
Bancamerica-Blair Corporation.....	720,000
Lazard Freres & Company, Incorporated.....	720,000

CHICAGO, May 23, 1935.

DEAR MR. WILSON: The matter of refunding the bonds has been discussed between Edward, Mr. Bueth, Mr. Hoffman, Mr. Freeman and myself, and we all feel that as the time approaches, that there is a serious question whether ample time would remain after you return to Chicago, around June 15. It seems to us that it is necessary to decide upon the bankers who are to underwrite the issue and to discuss with them and settle some of the details with reference to the trust deed and prospectus, especially such questions as whether an appraisal of the property is necessary, the kind of opinion of title required, whether or not the fixed assets of the subsidiaries are to be pledged directly under the mortgage or through collateral trust agreements, as well as the interest rate, call price, sinking fund provisions and underwriter's commissions. These latter details, however, would not be finally settled until you return. We feel that it is highly desirable that the underwriting house be determined upon at an early date in June and discussion of the above matter be had. As you know, the following firms have indicated a desire to discuss the matter with us:

1. Kuhn, Loeb & Co.
2. E. B. Smith & Co.
3. Speyer & Co.
4. Field, Glore & Co.
5. Lazard & Co.
6. Hallgarten & Co.
7. Hornblower & Weeks.
8. White, Weld & Co.
9. Lee, Higginson & Co.

It is felt that it might be desirable to have two firms instead of one to head the underwriting syndicate. With the exception of Hallgarten & Co., none of the houses who have handled our Company's previous issues are still in existence, although some of the former heads are in going firms. E. B. Smith & Co. do a good deal of the business of the old Guaranty Company and as you know, Mr. Swan is their President. Speyer & Co. have been active in making recommendations and Field, Glore & Co., while a relatively new house might be advantageous because of their Chicago origin. Mr. Buethe, and Mr. Freeman definitely recommend that the two houses should be picked out of the last above named three firms, namely, E. B. Smith & Co., Speyer & Co., and Field, Glore & Co. If this is done, it could probably be arranged that any of the other firms would be invited to participate in a substantial way at our request.

We understand that Armour & Co. are now having an audit made and are negotiating for the refunding of their bonds and it is said that Cudahy Packing Company are also discussing the matter actively.

If you are agreeable to definitely picking the underwriting bankers before you return, will you please indicate your choices by cable, quoting the number opposite the firm's name and if you agree that it is advisable to have two houses, will you please indicate the houses.

I think it would be entirely possible to delay any discussions with the bankers till after June 15, and still be able to make and conclude all arrangements prior to August 5, the date it is necessary to call our outstanding bonds. However, I believe that to do so would be rather hazardous as there might be a possibility of having to meet some of the bankers' requirements, especially having to do with the form of the trust deeds, the appraisal or clearing up the title, that could not be done in so short a time.

Yours very truly,

JAMES D. COONEY.

WILSON & COMPANY

While Mr. Burnett Walker of Edward B. Smith & Co. was here this afternoon, he explained the banking politics in connection with the proposed issue of $20,000,000 bonds for this company.

Field, Glore are going to head the business in the west and Edward B. Smith & Co. in the east. The respective interests in the business are as follows:

Field, Glore & Co.	25%
Edward B. Smith & Co.	25%
Speyer & Co.	10%
The First Boston Corporation.	10%
Hallgarten & Co.	10%
Goldman, Sachs & Co.	4%
Bancamerica-Blair	4%
Lazard Freres & Co., Inc.	4%
Hornblower & Weeks	4%
Lee Higginson Corporation.	4%

While it has not yet crystallized, it is probable that only the first five names will appear in the advertisement. Mr. Walker explained, confidentially, to me that the senior Mr. Wilson originally wanted Field, Glore to head the business in the west and Kuhn, Loeb in the east, but that for various reasons, Edward B. Smith & Co. was finally selected. Mr. Walker stated that he might want to offer a slight interest to Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and that while he had not definitely made up his mind to do so, he might ask each member of the group to give up 10% of their total to a pool. However, if there is any resistance, he frankly feels that Field, Glore and themselves should make the contribution.

I told Mr. Walker that as far as we were concerned he could write his own ticket. He stated that probably in the course of the next four or five days further details would be made available to us.

Mr. JOHN W. CUTLER,
Messrs. E. B. Smith & Co.,
35 Nassau Street, New York, N. Y.

WHITE, WELD & Co.,
40 Wall Street, New York, July 8, 1935.

DEAR JOHN: You and Burnett Walker for your firm and Ben Clark and I for White, Weld & Co. have had several conversations during the course of the last several months with respect to refunding operations for Wilson & Co., Inc. Inasmuch as the understandings had between us were primarily between yourself and myself, I am sending this letter to you with a chronological history taken from our files on this matter. The history is as follows:

On February 26, 1935 an entrepreneur by the name of M. L. Freeman discussed with us the question of refunding the outstanding bond issue.

During the same week Mr. Freeman demonstrated that he was not merely presenting an idea which is, of course, open field for all free lance promoters but introduced in our office J. D. Cooney, Vice President of Wilson & Co., Inc. and the whole discussion was with respect to the matter of refunding their outstanding bonds. After such discussion, Mr. Cooney said that they would in the next few weeks decide on their program and said he would again discuss with us the question of what sort of a trade we might be able to work out.

We subsequently confirmed with Mr. Halstead Freeman that there was an open field for the business.

We recognized also that of the original houses in the major position on this business, all but one had discontinued activities.

Recognizing, however, that some of the partners of your firm had previously been officers of the Guaranty Co., which had discontinued its business, and not knowing whether you were active in considering this business, we decided to discuss it with you and, if you wished us to do so, join hands with you in its development.

On March 6th Ben Clark saw Joe Swan and advised him of the above and Mr. Clark's report on the meeting states that "Joe was frank to say that they had no discussion so far." Further that Joe said "I do not want to tie you up in any way and I will look into it with the idea that we are two friends and you will hear from me when I get posted."

On March 11th you telephoned to me about this matter, stating that you understood Freeman had been in to see us saying that he had authority to represent the company. You stated that this had been checked with the company and it had been found that Freeman was not authorized to negotiate and you further stated that on account of your close friendship with the Guaranty Trust Co. you had as good a position as anyone to negotiate with Wilson & Co. and it was your thought that we should tell Mr. Freeman we were not in a position to deal with him and that your firm would follow the matter with the company and come back to us as matters developed.

On March 18th you telephoned me saying that the old account at the Guaranty was joint with Hallgarten & Co., that you had talked with Hallgarten & Co., whose Chicago partner is a director of the company, and had arranged that we were to be included in the business. You said further that you hoped it would be agreeable to us to let the matter of our percentage rest for the present as you intended to work out a fair and reasonable place for us. I told you this was satisfactory and left the matter in your hands.

I asked you whether there was any indication of serious competition from other directions and you stated that you did not see how with the friendship of E. A. Potter and Emerich there could be much doubt as to your getting the business. We consequently folded our hands to await developments.

Recently when it became apparent that the business was in the immediate making and not having heard from you, I called your office but could not reach you. Later the same day Burnett Walker telephoned me asking for a review from us of the Wilson & Co. matter as between ourselves and yourselves. I gave him the above story. *Misunderstanding here.*¹

I did not hear further from Burnett Walker but he came over and saw Ben Clark, expressed extreme regret and stated that embarrassing as it was to your firm, we could not be included in the Wilson & Co. business, that Field, Gloré & Co. and the company itself had refused your request that we be included.

The above chronological story of this matter is based on memoranda made immediately after the various conversations took place and, hence, is neither hazy in our minds nor subject to misunderstanding or faulty recollection.

The above is not sent to you as a record on which we make any claim on you for Burnett Walker has already stated your position.

The experience, however, makes it necessary for us to raise a question as to another matter so I request that you show this letter to Joe and ask that he let us know just what he wishes us to understand with respect to the position reserved for us in the matter of Columbia Gas & Electric, about which I have never had any conversation with him but it was cleared with Joe by our mutual good friend, Jim Hutton.

In order that you and Joe may have before you the Columbia Gas & Electric situation, I might say that on April 11th I discussed with Jim Hutton the entire Columbia Gas & Electric situation, as a result of which Jim advised me that so far as he was concerned we could not only participate on original terms but might also appear in the public advertising. He said he would take it up with Joe Swan along these lines and that he, Jim, would advise me what he had been able to work out.

On April 26th Jim told me he had had a very satisfactory talk with Joe and that Joe had agreed with the principle that this firm was to have a participation on original terms and an "appropriate" place in the public advertising.

We here trust that none of you will receive this letter as being in any sense controversial but will also, we believe, recognize the necessity of our knowing at this time just where we stand in regard to this further piece of business which has been discussed with you.

With regards to you all, I am,

Sincerely,

FABIS R. RUSSELL.

Schedule of operations followed by Smith, Barney & Co. when acting in capacity of head manager in wholesaling a new issue—Continued

Details	By whom handled	Time
31. Covering short position—Purchases in market, direct from Selling Group members or underwriters. All purchases into Syndicate Trading Account out of which short position was sold.	Market purchases by Trading Department and purchases from Underwriters and Selling Group members by Selling Farmer and Syndicate Department.	Sometimes starting the day after offering date and continuing until short position is covered.
32. Temporary Bonds—If bonds are to be delivered in temporary form, the form of temporary bond is prepared.	Buying Department in conjunction with our counsel and issuing company and their counsel.	Soon as practicable after contract has been signed.
33. Delivery Notices—Letters mailed to Selling Group members advising them of date of delivery and payment.	Syndicate Department.	As soon as definite date of delivery is set.
34. Preparation of cards—Form Syn 6—representing total bonds to be delivered to each Selling Group member.	Syndicate Department—prepares cards. Principal and interest figured by Purchase and Sales Department.	As soon as definite date of delivery is set.
35. Preparation of fanfold form CC203 (office working copies) from form Syn 5.	Cashier's Department.	As soon as form Syn 5 is received from Purchase and Sales Department.
36. Recording instructions for delivery and payment on form Syn 5.	Cashier's Department.	As soon as fanfold forms have been completed and instructions are received from Selling Group members.
37. Preparation of closing schedule covering details to be carried out by each of the underwriters supervised by head manager.	Office Manager, Cashier and counsel, working with Buying Department.	Several days prior to delivery date.
38. Arrangements made to receive final opinion of counsel on or prior to delivery date.	Buying Department and counsel for bond manager.	On or prior to delivery date.
39. Advance preparation for delivery—Counting, checking and allocating bonds for each Selling Group member by setting aside specified number of bonds with each card (Form Syn 6) and recording bond numbers on journal copy of fanfold form.	Certain members of Cashier's Department at office of Trustee.	Probably during two days prior to delivery date, the bonds being in possession, and under control of Trustee.
40. Settling up accounts on books—Separate accounts are set up for the Selling Group, Special Sales, Purchase Account for Smith, Barney & Co. and Retail Account.	Office Manager and Cashier.	A few days prior to delivery date.
41. Delivery Date—Meeting of representatives of all Underwriters at office of head manager or other designated place—Presentation of individual checks of Underwriters to representative of issuing company in exchange for bonds. Each Underwriter contributes his share of bonds, against receipt, to be delivered to Selling Group members and to special Sales, if any, retaining balance for retail sale.	Partner, Office Manager, Cashier and Representatives of Underwriters and the issuing company.	Delivery date.
42. Delivery of bonds to Selling Group members and Special Sales, if any, against payment.	Cashiers Department.	Delivery date and thereafter if bonds not all taken up on delivery date.
43. Accounting between Head Manager and Underwriter—At close of business on delivery date Head Manager accounts to each Underwriter for his proportionate share of funds received from Selling Group members and Special Sales, if any, based on price paid issuing company (difference between cost price and delivery price being retained on books of Head Manager until later date). On any bonds not paid for by Selling Group members on delivery date, Head Manager will account to Underwriters when they are paid for or arrange a loan on undelivered bonds and account to Underwriters in full on delivery date.	Office Manager and Cashier.	At close of business on delivery date.

44. Posting completed transactions on books as permanent record.	Bookkeeping Department.....	Day after delivery date when posting is done. The day after delivery date.
45. Repurchased number system—If deal is outstanding success and price of bonds goes to substantial premium, there is no necessity of putting in effect system for checking numbers. However, if there is some sales resistance and especially if a substantial short position is taken, then a system is established by recording on a small form the name of each participant and the bond numbers delivered to him. These forms are filed numerically.	Cashiers Department.....	As soon as possible after repurchased bonds have been delivered.
46. Reporting repurchased bonds—On all syndicate bonds repurchased in market the numbers are checked against the numerical file and a report is furnished on form No. Syn 11 to the Syndicate Department, where Selling Group members or Underwriters are responsible, and on form No. 3-4-290, where members were delivered to customers of Smith, Barney & Co. A copy of each report is available for advising a branch office, if desired. The actual bonds covering reports on form No. Syn 11 are retained in the vault pending release by Syndicate Department. This is to enable Syndicate Department to redeliver actual numbers repurchased if they have such privilege and elect to do so.	Syndicate Department.....	As soon as possible after report is received by Syndicate Department. The underwriter is advised by telephone and date for redelivery is agreed upon. If a deal is a real success Selling Group is terminated shortly after delivery date, sometimes on delivery date.
47. Redelivery of repurchased bonds—If, as shown by reports on form No. Syn 11 any Underwriters are responsible for repurchased numbers such bonds are redelivered to them at the repurchase cost price provided the agreement between Underwriters gives the manager this privilege.	Syndicate Department.....	As soon as practicable after selling operations have ceased.
48. Termination of Selling Group—Telegrams or letters are sent to all members of Selling Group advising them that group is terminated and price restrictions are removed. It is customary to notify all Underwriters of our intention to do this and request their approval.	Syndicate Department.....	As soon as practicable after selling operations have ceased.
49. Performance list—Preparation of list showing total sales by Selling Group members and repurchased bonds, if any; also includes table of Underwriters with their interests and amount of bonds retained for retail sale. Copies of this list usually given to larger Underwriters in deal and possibly to certain of other Underwriters upon request.	Syndicate Department.....	As soon as practicable after termination of Selling Group.
50. Syndicate Department records—Performance of Underwriters and each member of Selling Group is entered as permanent record on special card file in Syndicate Department.	Checks drawn by Cashier's Department and letters prepared and mailed with checks by Syndicate Department.	Shortly after Selling Group discount has been paid.
51. Payment of Selling Discount to Selling Group members—Figured and checked on original Syndicate card. Deductions made for repurchased bonds. Letters mailed with checks show numbers of bonds repurchased, if any, on which penalty is applied as per terms of Selling Group.	Syndicate Department.....	At the time or shortly after accounts are checked against Accounting Department records.
52. Analysis of Accounts—A summary of the various accounts is set up on work sheets in Syndicate Department showing the profit derived by Underwriters on bonds sold to Selling Group and special sales, if any. This accounting is checked against the books in Bookkeeping Department in order that any errors or adjustments may be caught and rectified.	Syndicate Department.....
53. Expense—Expenses have been accumulating in an expense account set up for this purpose in Accounting Department. These expenses are analyzed and segregated as to expenses which are properly chargeable to Underwriters and those incurred on behalf of Smith, Barney & Co. alone.	Syndicate Department.....

Schedule of operations followed by Smith, Barney & Co. when acting in capacity of head manager in wholesaling a new issue—Continued

Details	By whom handled	Time
54. Final accounting to Underwriters—After all accounts are in proof and the contract and Underwriting Agreement checked to see that all accounting terms have been complied with, the remaining profit due Underwriters is charged with the expenses (properly chargeable) thereof, including a reserve to take care of unforeseen future expenses. The compensation due the head manager (so-called management fee), if Underwriting agreement calls for such compensation, is deducted from remaining profit due each Underwriter and checks are mailed accompanied by proper letter of enclosure and statement showing summary of expenses and figuring of profit. Sometimes management fee is paid to Head Manager by other Underwriters on closing day.	Syndicate Department.	As soon as practicable after accounts are in proof.
55. Distribution of unused reserve.—If reserve is not used up the remaining balance is distributed pro rata among the Underwriters.	Syndicate Department.	Probably 30 to 60 days after final accounting is made to Underwriters.
56. Definitive Bonds.—Preparation of permanent bonds to be exchanged for outstanding temporary bonds.	Buying Department in conjunction with our counsel, issuing company and their counsel.	No set time. Definitive bonds of course must be ready at least one month prior to due date of first coupon.
57. Advice to Underwriters and Selling Group members regarding exchange of temporary for permanent bonds.—Letters mailed showing date and bank where such exchange may be made.	Syndicate Department.	As soon as we are officially advised that permanent bonds are ready.

MEMORANDUM FOR INDUSTRIAL DIVISION OF BUYING DEPARTMENT

INDUSTRIAL INVESTIGATIONS

Outline for use as guide in conducting investigations of industrial companies

[Revise of November 1930. Approved: K. Weisheit]

MEMORANDUM FOR INDUSTRIAL DIVISION OF BUYING DEPARTMENT

INDUSTRIAL INVESTIGATIONS

The attached outline has been compiled for use as a guide for members of this Department in conducting investigations of industrial companies. The amount and character of the data must of necessity be adjusted in each case to fit the particular situation and the purpose and scope of the investigation.

This outline is in form believed to be convenient for use while conducting an investigation, but its form and order are not such as should be followed necessarily in connection with the preparation of a report on the investigation.

Form of report.—In the preparation of the report, the following form (with such variations as may be required to fit the particular case) is recommended:

A. On the outside cover of the report, the following should be clearly stated:

- (1) SUBJECT, which should not consist merely of the name of the Company investigated but should be descriptive, i. e., "Financial Condition of X Y Z Company", etc.
- (2) DATE of the report.
- (3) Name of the investigator

B. On the first pages of the report, the following should be presented in the order given:

- (1) A statement of the PURPOSE and SCOPE of the investigation. (It will frequently be helpful to state the purpose in the form of definite questions which the investigation is designed to answer.)
- (2) A brief SUMMARY of the salient features of the report, especially those on which the conclusions are based.
- (3) The CONCLUSIONS of the investigator, which should be so stated as to present the answers to the questions which prompted the investigation.

C. On the next page following should be given a complete INDEX to the report.

- D. Next should follow the body of the report proper, which should contain the information which the investigation was designed to obtain, in whatever detail may be required by the scope and purpose of the investigation.

No form or order for the presentation of the body of the report is suggested, as this must necessarily vary considerably according to its purpose and nature. In general, however, it is advisable to bring out the more important facts first while at the same time keeping the order as logical as possible. In the interpretation of statistical data graphic illustrations should be utilized whenever practical.

- E. All other useful information obtained during the investigation, which either does not bear directly on the points under consideration or which is in too great detail to be presented in the report proper, should be segregated in an appendix. This may be either attached at the back of the report or bound separately, according to the nature and volume of the data in such appendix.

K. WEISHEIT.

NOVEMBER 1930.

FINANCIAL

List of financial statements, schedules and data to be obtained. It should be noted that this list is given merely as a guide and must be adjusted in each case to fit the particular situation being investigated. The periods to be covered by the various statements, as given in this list, are also merely suggestions and must be changed to fit the requirements of the situation.

I. BALANCE SHEET

Comparative Balance Sheets—for past 5 fiscal years and as of latest possible date—in approximately the form shown on page 16, with such variations and additional items as may be necessary to fit the business or accounting methods of the Company.

NOTE.—In the case of a holding company or a company having important subsidiary companies, separate balance sheets should be obtained showing consolidated balance sheet, balance sheet of the parent company alone and separate balance sheets of each important subsidiary (this should preferably be set up in tabular form on one sheet, showing inter-company eliminations, with the last column showing a consolidated summary from which inter-company items have been eliminated).

Schedules and other data relative to Balance Sheets

- A. Receivables.—1. Statements—as of latest date only—showing—

- (a) Each class (notes, accounts and acceptances) subdivided into those received from customers, officers and employees, and from others, with explanations of those received from others.
- (b) List of those secured by collateral and statement of such collateral.
- (c) Overdue items in each class listed according to age.
- (d) Advanced datings listed according to due dates.
- (e) Detailed list of largest items in each class with due dates.
- (f) Statement of any receivables pledged, notes discounted, or endorsements given on notes of associated companies, with explanation of liability.

2. Bad Debts.—Statements—as of latest date only—showing—

- (a) Statement showing amount and percentage of sales and/or total receivables charged off in each of the years covered by the financial statements.
- (b) What is policy as to setting aside reserves for doubtful accounts?
- (c) What contingencies would operate to reduce the value of the Company's receivables? (This applies particularly in case product is sold chiefly to some special class).

B. Marketable Securities.—latest only—detailed list showing par, cost, book and market values.

C. Inventories and Cost System.—1. Comparative statement of inventories—for 5 years and quarterly or monthly for past 2 years—showing division into raw materials, goods in process, finished products, and other materials and supplies, and main subdivisions of each class.

2. Statement explaining how inventories are carried on books, how often inventories taken, and how often values are adjusted to changes in market. Is it possible for investigator to make spot-check?

3. Cost System.—

- (a) Does Company keep a running inventory?
- (b) At what prices are inventories carried at various stages?
- (c) How often adjusted to market?
- (d) Are any inter-department or inter-company profits reflected in inventories?
- (e) On what basis is unproductive labor carried into costs?
- (f) What items of overhead are carried into costs and how allocated?
- (g) Are by-products handled separately or their proceeds used to reduce costs of chief products?
- (h) Is cost system on a standard or actual basis? If standard costs are used how often are they adjusted to actual costs?
- (i) What is the margin of error in cost system on final inventory and audit as shown by past experience?

D. Plant and Property Account.—1. Statement, subdivided into main classes of property, and showing depreciation or depletion reserve applicable to each. approximately as follows:

Land used as site for plant.
 Other land used in business.
 Improvements on land used in business.
 Buildings used for manufacturing.
 Other buildings used in business.
 Machinery, equipment, etc.
 Furniture and fixtures.
 Property owned but not used in business.

(These subdivisions are suitable for most manufacturing companies, but in case of certain companies important property will come under such heads as ore, coal or oil lands, rolling stock, etc.).

2. Explanation of basis used in determining book values of properties.
 3. Copies of any appraisals, signed if possible. Note particularly date, basis, and for what purpose made.

4. Explanation of any write-up (or down) of property account.

5. Leased property—

Are leases capitalized and if so on what basis. Cost, terms rental and renewal factors.

To what extent are improvements to leased property capitalized and how are they amortized?

6. Depreciation and Depletion—

- (a) What is Company's policy as to depreciation and depletion?
- (b) Schedule of depreciation and depletion rates used.

7. Maintenance.—

- (a) If possible obtain schedules showing expenditures for maintenance.

8. Obsolescence—

- (a) To what extent does obsolescence enter into business?
- (b) Is it adequately provided for?

E. Investments in Associated Companies—latest only—list of companies showing par and book values (before and after elimination of intangibles) of securities of each which is owned, totals outstanding, and percentages owned.

F. Advances to Associated Companies—latest only—list of amounts due from each and explanation of origin of indebtedness or reason for advance. Security if any? What is repayment schedule?

G. Deferred Charges—latest only—statement showing subdivision into principal items, such as prepaid insurance, prepaid interest, bond discount, etc. Are there any items which should have been charged to operations, such as advertising, etc.

H. Goodwill—

- (a) Basis for valuation.
- (b) To what extent are development and research costs capitalized?

I. Patents.—

- (a) How valued and expiration dates of most important.

J. Notes Payable.—1. Statements—5 years and quarterly or monthly for past 2 years—subdivided into those given for merchandise, to banks, and sold through brokers, classified according to maturities, and separate list of those secured by collateral with statement of such collateral.

2. Explanation of any notes given for merchandise.

3. Current Borrowings.—

(a) List of bank accounts, showing lines of credit, present borrowings and balances, and rates and commissions paid.

(b) Relations with banks, noting especially any interlocking directors, etc.

(c) Are bank lines clean, or if secured what sort and margin of collateral is required?

(d) What are maximum and minimum borrowing periods and amounts?

K. Accounts Payable.—

1. Statement—latest only—classified according to due dates, with explanation of any over-due accounts.

2. What is Company's policy in regard to meeting its accounts payable? Does it discount all bills?

L. Federal Taxes.—1. On what basis does Company set up reserves for Federal taxes?

2. What years' tax returns, if any, have been checked by Government officials?

3. Full details of any tax questions which may be in dispute or might be a contingent liability.

M. Reserves.—latest only—explanation of nature of each and whether amounts are based on expected demands or contingencies, or have been set up largely for tax purposes.

N. Capitalization.—1. Funded debt—statement, as to each issue, showing amounts authorized, issued, held in treasury, held in or retired by sinking fund, and outstanding.

2. Stock—statement, as to each class, showing amounts (par value and number of shares) authorized, issued, held in treasury, retired, and outstanding. Are there any options or warrants outstanding for the purchase of the Company's stock, and if so to whom and at what prices?

3. Has Company any liability or obligation, either direct or contingent, in connection with any outstanding issues, either funded debt or stock, of subsidiary or associated companies?

4. Minority interest in subsidiaries—Amounts and class of stock held by them.

O. Contingent Liabilities.—1. Has Company any contingent liabilities? If so, explain.

2. Has Company any important law suits now pending or in prospect?

P. Unusual Items in Balance Sheet.—Explanation.

Q. Monthly trial balances from date of latest balance sheet to present time.

R. Mortgages or Liens on Equipment.—Do any exist? If so, what on, to whom payable and maturity dates?

S. Separate Balance Sheet for each affiliated or associated company, together with all necessary supporting data, along the lines of the statements relating to the Company and its subsidiary companies.

II. EARNINGS

Comparative Statements of Earnings—for past 5 fiscal years and for the latest period available—in approximately the form shown on page 17, with such variations and additional items as may be necessary to fit the business or accounting methods of the Company.

Note: In the case of a holding company or a company having important subsidiary companies (especially if not 100% owned), separate statements should be obtained covering consolidated earnings, earnings of the parent company alone and separate earnings of each important subsidiary.

Schedules and other data relative to Statements of Earnings

A. Division by Products.—In case the Company has a variety of products, show sales, costs and profits for each product or class of products for the period covered by the Earnings Statements.

B. Selling Expenses—2 years only—divided according to—

1. Direct expenses (subdivided into salaries, traveling, branch offices, etc.) ;
2. Advertising (subdivided into newspaper, periodical, radio, sign board, circulars, catalogues, etc.).

C. Administrative Expenses—2 years only—subdivided into main classes.D. General and Miscellaneous Expenses—2 years only—subdivided into main classes.

L. Comparison with competitors in respect to financial condition, return on invested capital, sales turnover, etc.

GENERAL DATA CONCERNING THE COMPANY AND THE INDUSTRY

The following outline refers particularly to manufacturing companies and in cases of companies engaged in a trading or other non-manufacturing business must necessarily be adjusted to suit the circumstances.

I. HISTORY AND BUSINESS

A. Brief history of Company, including time and place of inception of business, date and State of incorporation, any changes in name or type of business, consolidations, reorganizations, etc., with special reference to any financial, legal or operating difficulties through which the Company has passed.

B. Location of plants and products manufactured in each.

C. List of all subsidiary and associated companies, showing Company's ownership in each.

D. Description of business of each subsidiary and associated company showing how it fits into the general scheme.

E. Explanation of methods of inter-company business.

F. Corporate chart presenting graphically relation between the Company and its subsidiary and associated companies.

II. MANAGEMENT

A. List of officers and directors, with notation of their chief outside connections or interests. Organization chart showing lines of authority.

B. What is management's experience in the industry and with the Company? Previous history and experience of management.

C. Is it a one man management, or a well rounded organization with competent understudies?

D. Are officers on long term contracts at high salaries? Is any bonus system provided?

E. What impression is gained as to the honesty, caliber and efficiency of those directing the Company's affairs, and particular fitness for place filled?

F. How much of Company's stock does management hold and variation in holdings? Stock market activities?

III. CHARACTER OF PRODUCT

A. Is product a necessity, a habit commodity (such as tobacco or coffee), or a luxury? A consumer's product or manufacturer's product.

B. How is its use affected by changes in styles, season, weather or other variable conditions?

C. What is its use in relation to other lines of business, and how is demand affected by condition of other industries or the general business situation?

D. Is it subject to deterioration or obsolescence and what is the renewal demand?

E. Is it a large or a small unit?

F. Is it a standard or specialty line?

G. What are the factors governing prices in the industry, with particular reference to those which may cause sudden fluctuations? In other words, what proportion of the total cost of the finished product is attributable to (1) labor, (2) raw materials, and (3) overhead, and possible economies in these costs? Cost trends?

H. Is product protected by tariff or other legislation and how would it be affected by any change?

I. Is any legislation pending or probable which would affect the industry?

J. What proportion of Company's business represents manufacture and sale of replacement parts?

IV. RAW MATERIALS

A. What raw materials are used and what is the source and stability of the supply? Time required to secure raw materials.

B. Table of prices, annual production, annual consumption, etc., of principal raw materials.

C. What are the factors governing prices of raw materials, with particular reference to those which may cause sudden fluctuations? Are prices artificial (supported by cartels or any organized effort) or does demand and supply have free play?

D. What is present situation, particularly if raw materials are agricultural products or otherwise subject to variation according to season?

E. Does Company by necessity or policy speculate in raw materials, or pursue a hand-to-mouth buying policy, and what storage facilities has the Company?

F. Is any conservation legislation pending or probable which would affect the supply of raw materials?

G. Other pertinent information to show whether the industry and the Company have a sound basis in regard to raw materials, as to present and future supply, storage, fire hazards, deterioration, etc.

V. INTEGRATION AND DIVERSITY

A. To what extent is Company integrated (both vertically and horizontally) and how does this affect its ability to meet competition?

B. What is the possibility of further integration? Would this be beneficial either in meeting competition or in efficiency of operation?

C. What is the diversity of the Company's products? Does diversity level out production curve with respect to seasonal factors? Does diversity of products tie in with main plan of manufacture and distribution, or do products require different manufacturing and sales methods?

D. What is the practicability of increasing diversity, with special reference to the possibility of some developments which would curtail the demand for a product, necessitating the development of new products?

E. Are the products too diverse for economical manufacture?

VI. COMPETITION

A. What is Company's rank in the industry and for how long has it been held?

B. List of leading competitors with information as to relative size and importance.

C. Comparison of Company's product with that of leading competitors, as to cost of production, quality, selling price, reputation, special features, etc.

D. Is there any outstanding product in the industry whether made by the Company or a competitor?

E. Is Company's product protected by patents or otherwise, giving it an advantage in competition? Have they been litigated? Does Company have any secret processes?

F. How is Company's ability to meet competition affected by location of its plants with respect to transportation, raw material supplies, power, labor and markets?

G. How is competition, or possibility of future competition, affected by requirements for operation in the industry as regards experience, skill, control of raw materials, exclusive contracts, etc.

H. What is the situation as to possible competition from substitutes?

I. Has Company or any competitor ever been investigated by the Federal Trade Commission, or is such investigation likely? (Obtain copy of Federal Trade Commission report).

J. Does Company operate under licenses from others or grant licenses under its patents to competitors and what are royalty arrangements?

VII. MARKETS

A. Location of Company's principal markets and relative importance of each.

B. In what area do transportation costs give the Company an advantage over competitors? How permanent is this likely to be?

C. What are Company's estimates of potential markets and on what facts are they based? (This is especially important if any expansion is contemplated).

VIII. SELLING POLICY AND METHODS

A. To what class of customers does Company sell, i. e., to wholesalers, jobbers, retailers or direct to consumers, and what percentage to each?

B. What are relations of Company with its customers?

C. List of largest customers, showing amounts purchased by each during past year.

D. Description of Company's selling organization and sales methods, and method of paying salesmen.

E. What are the usual terms as to time and method of payment? Goods returned?

F. What discounts and commissions are allowed, and how do these compare with those of competitors?

G. How do Company's prices compare with those of competitors?

H. Statement—current and monthly for past 5 years—showing advance bookings, gross sales and returns, sub-divided into main classes of products, giving both values and units in each case.

I. List of all sales contracts with summary of each, showing period covered, amount, contract prices (in comparison with current prices), delivery terms, and any special clauses covering cancellations, penalties, etc.

J. Description of credit and collection organization and methods (examine representative credit files).

K. What are relations between credit and sales departments, and do they facilitate co-operation?

M. What is Company's advertising policy? How much does it spend and what is its budget for the current year?

N. What is Company's merchandising policy with respect to carrying inventory for customers?

O. How recently has market survey been made and sales budget prepared, and what has been actual experience in relation to budget?

P. Contracts with credit companies to finance sales.

IX. OPERATING POLICY AND METHODS

A. Description of operating processes, with special reference to any unusual features, and time consumed in manufacturing operations.

B. Does Company manufacture to fill orders, or on production schedule based on anticipated demand?

C. What is current schedule of production and estimated output for period in advance?

D. What has been Company's experience in respect to the accuracy of its estimates of future demands?

E. Does Company use machinery to the fullest extent practicable, or is operation unduly expensive because of unnecessary hand labor?

F. What impression is gained as to the efficiency of the routing system?

G. What impression is gained as to the general efficiency of Company's manufacturing methods?

H. What is Company's policy in regard to experimental and development work? Is it keeping abreast with scientific developments in industry with particular reference to new machines and processes? Is it spending unreasonably large amounts on such work?

I. Does Company contemplate any material changes in its policy and methods, and if so what will be the probable effect of such changes?

J. Effect of any seasonal factors on Company's operating policy and attempts to straighten out any seasonal fluctuations.

K. Does Company make any attempt to reclaim or otherwise utilize scrap materials?

X. INVENTORIES

A. Statement of inventories—for past 5 years and quarterly for past 2 years—expressed in quantities of materials, sub-divided into raw materials, goods in process, finished products, other materials and supplies, and main subdivisions of each.

B. What is the method of valuation of inventories?

C. Comparative statement—for the past 5 years—showing inventory prices per unit compared to market prices.

D. What contingencies would materially affect the value or saleability of the inventory?

E. Division of present inventories into—

1. Readily saleable at inventory prices.
2. Not readily saleable because of
 - (a) lack of demand;
 - (b) length of manufacturing process; or
 - (c) some other circumstances affecting saleability.

3. Obsolete or deteriorated.

F. Where are inventories located?

G. Latest detailed physical inventory.

H. What period of production is provided for by raw materials now on hand and how does this compare with normal?

I. Estimated most desirable normal inventory (approximate only) within maximum and minimum limits.

XI. PURCHASING POLICY AND METHODS

A. What determines the purchasing policy, i. e., does Company buy only to fill orders, or because prices are believed to be low? To what extent does it speculate on market?

B. Where and how does Company purchase materials? List of its chief sources of supply.

C. What are relations between Company and those from whom it purchases?

D. What methods are used in making payment for goods purchased?

E. Are purchasing methods sufficiently flexible to permit quick adjustment in period of depression?

F. List of all purchase contracts with summary of each, showing period covered, amounts contracted for, contract prices (comparison with present market), delivery terms, and any special clauses covering cancellation, penalties, etc.

XII. LABOR

A. What class of labor is employed in the industry, and how long is training period?

B. Is labor in the industry unionized? If so does Company operate on closed or open shop basis?

C. What is the record of strikes, etc., with special reference to the Company?

D. Does Company operate any profit-sharing, bonus or employee stock ownership system?

E. What is the situation in regard to an available supply of labor in case of strikes or expansion?

F. What is Company's labor turnover?

G. What is attitude of different classes of employees toward Company, and what does Company do in the way of compensation insurance, medical service, pension system, etc.?

H. What is accident record and is industry subject to occupational diseases?

XIII. DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY, INCLUDING SUCH ITEMS AS—

A. Type, age and condition of all plants. Economics of plant location.

B. Arrangement, with special reference to efficiency of operation, flexibility and possibility of expansion. Railroad, highways and water transportation facilities?

C. Power equipment, including arrangements for reserve power in case of break-down.

D. Storage facilities, with special reference to their adequacy to accommodate probable maximum inventories.

E. Fire protection, including sprinkler system, water supply, inspection service, insurance, etc.

F. What is the capacity of the plants: (a) maximum, (b) minimum to run without loss, and (c) most efficient?

G. What, if any, is the "neck of the bottle"?

H. What is the possibility of using any of the buildings and machinery in other lines of business, with special reference to their probable value in case of forced sale?

I. To what extent would the machinery be saleable in case of forced sale?

EXHIBIT No. 1889-1

[Letter from Smith, Barney & Co., to Investment Banking Section, Monopoly Study, Securities and Exchange Commission]

SMITH, BARNEY & Co.,

14 Wall Street, New York, September 1, 1939.

Mr. W. S. WHITEHEAD,

Securities and Exchange Commission,

120 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

DEAR SIR: In our conversation in Mr. Swan's office on Wednesday, August 30, you asked certain questions pertaining to the mechanics and methods commonly used by underwriters in financing the purchase of securities from issuing corporations and arrangements for intermediate financing in the event an issue is unsuccessful and unsold bonds remain in the hands of the underwriter after date of offering and through date of closing the deal with the issuing corporation.

You are no doubt aware that each underwriter is severally responsible to the issuing corporation for the amount he contracts to underwrite. Each underwriter must therefore arrange to have a certified or bank cashier's check payable in New York Clearing House funds to the order of the issuing corporation in the hands of the Manager at an early hour, to facilitate closing the deal, on the day payment is to be made to the issuing corporation. The Manager, acting for himself and the other underwriters severally, delivers the underwriters' checks, at the place scheduled for the closing, to the issuing corporation, and proceeds with the mechanics incidental to closing of the deal and the acceptance of the securities.

You have asked specifically how the following issues were paid for and what arrangements were made for the carry of unsold securities after closing date:

Issue:	Closed
Pure Oil Co. 5% Cumulative Convertible Preferred Stock	October 22, 1937
Bethlehem Steel Corp. 15-Year Sinking Fund Convertible 3½%, 1952	October 11, 1937
Shell Union Oil Corp. 15-Year 2½% Debentures, 1954	July 24, 1939
Pennsylvania Power & Light Co. First Mortgage Bonds, 3½%, 1969 4½% Debentures, 1974	August 11, 1939

The mechanics incidental to payment to an issuing corporation on closing date for the amount of securities underwritten briefly are as follows: Bank balances are maintained in at least a certain minimum amount which experience shows will take care of normal day-to-day requirements. When funds build up to a level beyond this point—loans are reduced; when it is apparent that the bank balance would fall below this minimum amount—loans are increased. However, this rule is not applied the day before a large commitment must be paid for. On that day funds are ordinarily concentrated in the bank on which the check will be drawn to the issuing corporation. In addition, a Day Loan is ordinarily made.

A Day Loan is a temporary extension of credit granted by a bank for a period of a business day to facilitate the clearing of securities. There is attached hereto a form of Day Loan Agreement. The loan must be paid off in full at the end of the day. For this accommodation, interest at the rate of 1% is charged by the bank. This rate has been in effect for some years past.

An examination of the attached schedules shows how the purchase of each of the above securities was financed on the closing day, that is, the amount of the Day Loan and the amount of bank balance used in the payment to the issuing corporation.

On a successful syndication such as the Pennsylvania Power & Light securities, the underwriter on the closing date is reimbursed the amount paid the issuing corporation as a result of his retail sales and sales to the Selling Group. Thus, the underwriter is put in funds in excess of the amount required to pay off his Day Loan at the bank at the close of business.

It has been the policy of this firm to obtain Day Loan accommodations from The Guaranty Trust Company, Bankers Trust Company, Chase National Bank and Central Hanover. The selection is usually based on service and facilitation. For example, if the deal is to be closed at the Guaranty Trust Company, Trust Department, that bank is used; if at the Bankers, that bank, etc.

On slow moving deals the unsold balance is usually financed entirely from funds at the disposal of the firm in the form of bank balances or the creation of bank balances through the medium of borrowing on other securities available for that purpose as was the case in the Shell Union deal. At no time while we had unsold Shell Union bonds on our hands were they used for borrowing purposes.

As shown by the attached schedules, however, collateral loans were made by Edward B. Smith & Co. in the case of the Pure Oil Preferred Stock and Bethlehem Steel Bonds. All of the Pure Oil Preferred Stock, namely 58,936 shares, was hypothecated at The Guaranty Trust Company on the closing day, October 22, at a loan value of 64 per share. The difference between 64 and 100, the price paid for the stock, was financed by the firm. Details of that loan from the date it was made until paid off through sale of a balance of 57,723 shares of stock to the Ebsco Corporation on December 23, 1937, is attached.

In the case of the Bethlehem Steel Bonds, $5,913,500 par value remained unsold on the closing day, October 11. These bonds were hypothecated at The Guaranty Trust Company on that day at a loan value of 80. The difference between 80 and 100, the price paid for the bonds, was financed by the firm. Details of that loan from the date it was made until paid off through sale of a balance of $2,074,300 principal amount to the Ebsco Corporation on December 23, 1937 is attached. Both of these loans were made under a Collateral Loan Agreement, a specimen copy of which is attached.

The Ebsco Corporation was a corporation formed in connection with the liquidation of Edward B. Smith & Co.

It has been the policy of the firm to use the following banks for collateral loan accommodations:

Bank of Manhattan Company
Bank of New York & Trust Company
Bankers Trust Company
Brooklyn Trust Company
Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co.
Chase National Bank
Chemical Bank & Trust Co.
Fidelity Union Trust Co. of Newark, N. J.
Fifth Avenue Bank
First National Bank
Guaranty Trust Company
Irving Trust Company
Marine Midland Trust Co.
National City Bank
National Shawmut Bank, Boston
New York Trust Co.
U. S. Trust Co.

Very truly yours,

Per Pro SMITH, BARNEY & CO.

DAY LOAN AGREEMENT

NEW YORK, -----, 193-----

$-----

The undersigned hereby applies to THE NATIONAL CITY BANK OF NEW YORK, (hereinafter called "the Bank") for a loan of-----

----- Dollars, to be credited to the account of the undersigned with the Bank, upon the terms and conditions below stated, and to be repaid, at the Bank's Head Office or Branch at which the loan was made, at or before the close of business this day, together with interest at the rate of One Per Cent per annum. The avails of said loan shall be received and used by the undersigned only for one or both of the following purposes: To pay, in whole or in part, the purchase price of, and thus to obtain, certain securities which the undersigned has contracted to purchase and receive; or, to pay, in whole or in part, another loan or other loans heretofore made to the undersigned, and thus to release certain securities held as collateral to such other loan or loans. The undersigned, as Trustee for the Bank, shall obtain possession of the securities aforesaid; and shall deliver, or cause to be delivered the same to the Bank, as security for this loan, before the close of business this day, unless in the meantime the amount of this loan shall have been repaid to the Bank. The undersigned may, however, before the close of business this day, sell or transfer, for cash or its equivalent, or pledge for money contemporaneously borrowed, or exchange for other securities, any or all of said certain securities, but the proceeds of such sales, transfers and pledges, shall be received by the undersigned as Trustees for the Bank, and shall be delivered by the undersigned to the Bank before the close of business this day where they shall be credited in payment pro tanto of said loan, and the securities received in exchange shall be in all respects charged with the same trust, and subject to the same right of the Bank to possession, and otherwise, as herein provided in respect of the certain securities so exchanged. The undersigned further agrees forthwith upon demand of the Bank at any time to execute and deliver to the Bank an instrument in writing designating the securities so held by the undersigned hereunder in trust for the Bank and reciting that a security interest therein remains in or will remain in or has passed to or will pass to the Bank.

It is agreed that the Bank shall have the right at any time, in event of default in payment of the said loan, to sell without advertisement or notice to the undersigned, at any broker's board in the City of New York, or at public or private sale in the said City or elsewhere, or otherwise to dispose of the same in the discretion of any of the officers of the Bank, without notice of amount due or claimed to be due, and without notice of the time or place of sale, each and every of which is hereby expressly waived, any or all of the securities which may come into the possession of the Bank hereunder or pursuant to the provisions hereof, applying the proceeds thereof upon the said indebtedness, together with legal interest and expenses, the undersigned to be liable for any deficiency with legal interest. It is further agreed that, upon the sale by virtue hereof, the Bank may purchase the whole or any part of such property discharged from any right of redemption, which is hereby expressly released to the Bank, which shall have a claim as above defined against the undersigned for any deficiency arising from such sale.

The undersigned, as further security to the Bank, hereby assigns to the Bank, its successor and assigns, all right, title and interest of the undersigned in and to the securities hereinabove referred to, and any and all claims of the undersigned against third parties for the purchase price, or any unpaid balance thereof, of any of said certain securities which have been or may hereafter be sold by the undersigned.

Nothing herein contained is intended to lessen the liability of the undersigned to the Bank arising from the making of said loan; nor to impair the effect of any General Collateral Agreement given by the undersigned to the Bank; nor to confer upon the undersigned any authority to create any liability on the part of the Bank.

NEW YORK, _____ 193_____

$_____

The undersigned hereby applies to THE CHASE NATIONAL BANK OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK (hereafter called "the Bank") for a loan of_____ _____ Dollars, to be credited to the account of the undersigned, upon the terms and conditions below stated, and to be repaid at or before the close of business this day. The avails of said loan shall be received and used by the undersigned only for one or both of the following purposes: To pay, in whole or in part, the purchase price of, and thus to obtain, certain securities which the undersigned has contracted to purchase and receive; or, to pay, in whole or in part, another loan or other loans heretofore made to the undersigned, and thus to release certain securities held as collateral to such other loan or loans. The undersigned, as trustee for the Bank, shall obtain possession of the securities aforesaid; and shall deliver, or cause to be delivered the same to the Bank, as security for this loan, before the close of business on this day, unless in the meantime the amount of this loan shall have been repaid to the Bank. The undersigned may, however, before the close of business this day sell or transfer, for cash or its equivalent, or pledge for money contemporaneously loaned, or exchange for other securities, any or all of said certain securities, but the proceeds of such sales, transfers and pledges, shall be received by the undersigned as Trustee for the Bank, and shall be delivered by the undersigned to the Bank before the close of business this day where they shall be credited in payment pro tanto of said loan, and the securities received in exchange shall be in all respects charged with the same trust, and subject to the same right of the Bank to possession, and otherwise, as herein provided in respect of the certain securities so exchanged.

The undersigned, as further security to the Bank, hereby assigns to the Bank, its successors and assigns, all of the right, title and interest of the undersigned to and in the securities hereinabove referred to, and to and in any and all claims of the undersigned against third parties now existing and that may be created this day for the purchase price, or any present unpaid balance thereof, of any of said certain securities sold or that may be sold by the undersigned, and to and in all claims of the undersigned against customers of the undersigned for the balance due or to become due this day of the purchase price of any of said certain securities delivered or deliverable to such customers.

Nothing herein contained is intended to lessen the liability of the undersigned to the Bank arising from the making of said loan; nor to impair the effect of any General Collateral Agreement given by the undersigned to the Bank; nor to confer upon the undersigned any authority to create any liability on the part of the Bank.

Day Note

$----- New York,-----193-----
The undersigned hereby applies to

MANUFACTURERS TRUST COMPANY, NEW YORK

(hereinafter called "the Trust Company") for a loan of----- Dollars ($-----), to be credited to the account of the undersigned, upon the conditions below, and to be repaid by the close of business this day.
The avails of said loan shall be used only for the following purposes:

- (1) To pay, in whole or in part, the purchase price of securities which the undersigned has contracted to purchase and receive; or
- (2) To pay, in whole or in part, other loans heretofore made to the undersigned, and to release to the undersigned securities held as collateral to such loans.

Securities received under either of the foregoing subdivisions shall be kept separately from all other securities and, upon their receipt by the undersigned or the undersigned's agent or representative, shall be held in trust for and deposited with the Trust Company as collateral security for this loan and for any other obligation or indebtedness of the undersigned to the Trust Company.

The undersigned may, however, before the close of business this day, sell or transfer, for cash or its equivalent, or pledge for money contemporaneously loaned, or exchange for other securities, any or all of said securities so pledged, but the proceeds of such sales, transfers, and pledges shall be deemed substituted security hereunder. Before the close of business this day, unless in the meantime the amount of this loan shall have been repaid to the Trust Company, such securities shall be delivered to the Trust Company.

The undersigned, as further security for the said obligation to the Trust Company, hereby assigns to the Trust Company, its successor and assigns, all of the right, title, and interest of the undersigned to and in the securities hereinabove referred to, and to and in any and all claims of the undersigned against third parties now existing and that may be created for the purchase price, or any present unpaid balance thereof, of any of said securities sold or that may be sold by the undersigned, and to and in all claims of the undersigned against customers of the undersigned for the balance due or to become due of the purchase price of any of said securities delivered or deliverable to such customers.

Nothing herein contained is intended to lessen the liability of the undersigned to the Trust Company arising from the making of said loan; nor to impair the effect of any General Collateral Agreement given by the undersigned to the Trust Company; nor to confer upon the undersigned any authority to create any liability on the part of the Trust Company.

EXHIBIT No. 1891

THE NATIONAL CITY BANK OF NEW YORK,

NEW YORK, N. Y.

Date _____, 193____

(Address of Head Office or Branch)

To induce THE NATIONAL CITY BANK OF NEW YORK (hereinafter called the "Bank"), in its discretion, to make loans or otherwise give, grant or extend credit at any time or from time to time to the undersigned (or any one or more of us), the undersigned agree(s) to pledge and do(es) hereby pledge to the Bank as security for any and all obligations or liabilities of the undersigned (or any one or more of us) to it, now or hereafter existing, any and all property of the undersigned (or any one or more of us), which is now or may at any time hereafter come into the possession or control of the Bank, or of any third party acting in its behalf, whether for the express purpose of being used by the Bank as collateral security or for safekeeping or for any other or different purpose, including such property as may be in transit by mail or carrier for any purpose, or covered or affected by any documents in the Bank's possession, or in possession of any third party acting in its behalf, it being understood that the Bank shall have and is hereby given a lien on any and all such property for the aggregate amount of any and all such obligations or liabilities; and the undersigned hereby authorize(s) the Bank, at its option, at any time(s), whether or not the property held by it as security is deemed by it adequate, to appropriate and apply upon any or all of the said obligations or liabilities, whether then due or not due, any and all moneys now or hereafter in the hands of the Bank, on deposit or otherwise, to the credit of or belonging to the undersigned (or any one or more of us), and should the aggregate market value of the above mentioned collateral so held or controlled by the Bank, or by any third party acting in its behalf, at any time suffer any decline or fall to conform to legal requirements, or if the Bank should at any time deem said collateral insufficient by reason of the decline in the market value of any part thereof, the undersigned hereby agree(s) to make such payments on account of the aforesaid obligations or liabilities or, as additional collateral therefor, to deposit and pledge with the Bank such other property, as may be satisfactory to it.

Upon the non-payment of all or any part of the principal of, or the interest upon, any of the obligations or liabilities above mentioned, or upon the failure of the undersigned forthwith, with or without notice, to furnish satisfactory additional collateral or to make payments on account as hereinbefore agreed, or to perform or to comply with any of the other terms or provisions of this agreement, or in case of the death, failure in business, dissolution or termination of existence of the undersigned (or any of us), or if any petition in bankruptcy be filed by or against the undersigned (or any of us), or if any proceedings in bankruptcy, or under any Acts of Congress relating to the relief of debtors, should be commenced for the relief or readjustment of any indebtedness of the undersigned (or any of us), either through reorganization, composition, extension or otherwise, or if a receiver of any property of the undersigned (or any of us) should be appointed at any time, or if the undersigned (or any of us) should make an assignment for the benefit of creditors or take advantage of any insolvency law, or if any funds or other property of the undersigned (or any of us) which may be or come into the possession or control of the Bank, or of any third party acting for the Bank as aforesaid should be attached or distrained, or should be or become subject to any mandatory order of court or other legal process, then, or at any time after the happening of any such event, any or all of the aforesaid obligations or liabilities of the undersigned (or any one or more of us) to the Bank, then existing, shall, at the option of the Bank, become due and payable forthwith, without demand or notice to the undersigned (or any one or more of us), and likewise upon the happening of any such event, or at any time thereafter, either before or after the maturity of any one or more of the aforesaid obligations or liabilities, the Bank is hereby authorized and empowered in its discretion to appropriate and apply upon all or any of the aforesaid obligations or liabilities, any or all of the property hereby pledged and/or any other property upon which the Bank may then have a lien hereunder, and to sell, assign and deliver the whole, or any part thereof, at any broker's board, or at public or private sale, at the option of the Bank, either for cash or on credit, or for future delivery, without assumption of any credit risk, and without either demand, advertisement or notice of any kind, all of which are hereby expressly waived. At any such sale, the Bank may itself purchase the whole or any part of the property so sold, free from any right of redemption on the part of the undersigned (or any of us), all such rights being also hereby waived and released. In case of any sale or other disposition of any of the property aforesaid, after deducting all costs or expenses of every kind for care, safekeeping, collection, sale, delivery or otherwise, the Bank may apply the residue of the proceeds of the sale(s), or other disposition thereof, to the payment or reduction, either in whole or in part, of any one or more of the said obligations or liabilities to it, whether or not except for this agreement such liabilities or obligations would then be due, making proper allowance for interest on obligations or liabilities not otherwise then due, and returning the overplus, if any, to the undersigned, (or the one(s) of us whose property may have yielded the overplus); all without prejudice to the rights of the Bank as against the undersigned (or any one or more of us) with respect to any and all amounts which may be or remain unpaid on any of the obligations or liabilities aforesaid at any time or times. No delay on the part of the Bank, or any assignee or transferee of the Bank hereunder, in exercising any rights or options hereunder, shall operate as a waiver of any such rights or options, or prejudice the rights of the Bank, its successors or assigns, as against the undersigned (or any of us).

The undersigned further agree(s) that any and all rights and liens of the Bank hereunder shall continue unimpaired and that the undersigned (and each of us) shall be and remain obligated in accordance with the terms hereof notwithstanding the release or substitution of any of the property held as collateral hereunder, at any time or times, or of any rights or interests therein, or any delay, extension of time, renewal, compromise or other indulgence granted by the Bank in reference to any of the obligations or liabilities hereinbefore referred to, or any promissory note, draft, bill of exchange or other instrument given in connection therewith, the undersigned hereby (severally) waiving all notice of any such delay, extension, release, substitution, renewal, compromise or other indulgence, and hereby consenting to be bound thereby as fully and effectually as if the undersigned (and each of us) had expressly agreed thereto in advance.

The Bank is hereby authorized, at its option and without any obligation to do so, to transfer to or register in the name of its nominee(s) all or any part of any securities or other property hereinbefore referred to, and to do so before or after the maturity of all or any of the obligations or liabilities above mentioned and with or without notice to the undersigned (or any of us).

The Bank may assign or transfer this instrument, or any instrument evidencing all or any of the obligations or liabilities hereinbefore mentioned, and may deliver all or any of the property then held as security therefor, to the transferee(s), who shall thereupon become vested with all the powers and rights in respect thereto given to the Bank herein or in the instrument(s) transferred, and the Bank shall thereafter be forever relieved and fully discharged from any liability or responsibility with respect thereto, but the Bank shall retain all rights and powers hereby given with respect to any and all instruments, rights or property not so transferred.

The word "property" as used herein includes goods and merchandise, as well as any and all documents relative thereto; also, funds, securities, choses in action and any and all other forms of property, whether real, personal or mixed, and any right, title or interest of the undersigned (or any of us) therein or thereto.

This is a continuing agreement and shall remain in full force and effect and be binding upon the undersigned (and each of us) and the (respective) legal representatives, successors and/or assigns of the undersigned until any and all indebtedness and/or obligations of the undersigned (or any one or more of us) to the Bank, whether now existing or hereafter arising, shall have been fully satisfied and discharged; provided, however, that should the undersigned (or any of us) serve on or deliver to the Bank, at its address above set forth, written notice revoking or terminating this Agreement, such notifying party (or parties) shall be released from all obligations or liabilities incurred relative hereto after receipt by the Bank of such notice, but no such notice shall in any manner affect or impair the rights of the Bank against any such party (or parties) with respect to obligations or liabilities theretofore incurred hereunder, or against any other(s) of the parties hereto, with respect to any obligations or liabilities hereunder, whether theretofore or thereafter incurred. The undersigned further agree(s) that if this Agreement is terminated or revoked by operation of law as against the undersigned (or any one or more of us), the undersigned will (jointly and severally) indemnify and save the Bank, its successors or assigns, harmless from any loss which may be suffered or incurred by the Bank in making, giving, granting or extending any loans or other credit, or otherwise acting, hereunder prior to receipt by it of such notice in writing of such termination or revocation.

This agreement shall be deemed to be made under and shall be governed by the laws of the State of New York in all respects, including matters of construction, validity and performance.

SE 1512 REV. SEPT. 1935

In consideration of the sum of one dollar paid to the undersigned by THE NATIONAL CITY BANK OF NEW YORK (receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged) and of the making by said Bank of any loan or the extension by it of any credit referred to in the within agreement to any one or more of the parties thereto, all of which loans and/or credits so extended are to be deemed as being hereby requested by the undersigned, the undersigned hereby (jointly and severally) guarantee(s) to THE NATIONAL CITY BANK OF NEW YORK, its successors and assigns, the punctual payment at maturity of any and all such loans or other indebtedness so made or incurred by any one or more of the parties to said agreement, and hereby assent(s) to all the terms and conditions of the said agreement, and consent(s) that the securities for any such loan or other debt may be exchanged or surrendered from time to time, or the time of payment for all or any part thereof extended, without notice to or further assent from the undersigned, who will remain bound upon this guaranty, notwithstanding any such exchange, surrender or extension. Notice of the acceptance hereof and of the making of any such loans or extension of credit, and promptness in making any demand hereunder or in demanding or enforcing payment of any of the indebtedness hereby guaranteed, are hereby expressly waived.

EXHIBIT No. 1892

GENERAL LOAN AND COLLATERAL AGREEMENT

In order to obtain loans from and otherwise deal with Bank of the Manhattan Company (whose corporate title is President and Directors of the Manhattan Company) (hereinafter referred to as the "Bank"), whether acting in its own behalf and/or in behalf of others, it is hereby agreed by the undersigned that the Bank shall have the rights hereinafter set forth in addition to those created by the circumstances associated with the incurrence of any "Liabilities" as hereinafter defined and with the "Security" as hereinafter defined.

(1) The term "Liabilities" as herein used shall include any and all loans, advances and credits by the Bank, both in its own behalf and in behalf of others, to the undersigned, any and all indebtedness, notes, bonds, obligations and liabilities of any kind of the undersigned, whether to the Bank and/or to any other or others in whose behalf the Bank shall have acted in creating the same, now or hereafter existing, or heretofore or hereafter acquired from another by the Bank and/or by anyone for whom it has acted or shall act in acquiring the same, whether absolute or contingent, secured or unsecured, due or not due, direct or indirect, arising by operation of law, contractual or tortious, liquidated or unliquidated, at law, in equity, in admiralty or otherwise, and whether heretofore or hereafter incurred or given by the undersigned as security or otherwise. The term "Security" as herein used shall include any deposit account maintained by the undersigned with the Bank or heretofore maintained by the undersigned with the Bank of Manhattan Trust Company (hereinafter called the Trust Company) or any other claim of the undersigned against the Bank or the Trust Company, all money, negotiable instruments, commercial paper, bonds, stocks, credits, choses in action, claims, demands, or any interest in any thereof, and any other property, rights and interests of the undersigned, or any evidence thereof, which have been delivered to the Trust Company or which have been or at any time shall be delivered to the Bank or any of its agents, associates or correspondents, for any purpose, whether or not accepted for the purpose or purposes for which they are delivered; and all such money, negotiable instruments, commercial paper, bonds, stocks, credits, choses in action, claims, demands, or any interest in any thereof, and any other property, rights and interests, or any evidence thereof as have come into the possession, control or custody of the Trust Company or as have or shall come into the possession, control or custody of the bank or of any of its agents, associates or correspondents, or others acting in its behalf, for account, subject to the order, or otherwise for the benefit or under the control of the undersigned. The Bank shall be deemed to have possession, control or custody of any security actually in transit to or set apart for it or any of its agents, associates, correspondents or others acting in its behalf.

(2) As security for any and all such Liabilities, the undersigned hereby pledge(s) to the Bank all such Security capable of pledge and bargain(s), sell(s), assign(s) and transfer(s) to the Bank, and/or give(s) it a general lien upon, all right, title and interest of the undersigned in and to any thereof incapable of pledge or inadequately pledged, such pledge and/or sale, assignment, transfer and/or lien being made or created for the protection and security of the Bank and/or any other or others (but pro rata if held for the benefit of more than one) for whom it has acted or shall act as agent in connection with the creation of any such liability; and in trust for the benefit, and to the extent of the interest, of any such other or others therein.

(3) The Bank, at its discretion, may, whether or not any of such Liabilities be due, in its name and/or in the name of anyone for whom it has acted as agent in connection with the creation of any such liability, or in the name of the undersigned, demand, sue for, collect and/or receive any money or property at any time due, payable or receivable on account of or in exchange for, or make any compromise or settlement deemed desirable with respect to, any Security, but shall be under no obligation so to do. If the Security shall consist of or include negotiable instruments and/or other choses in action and/or promises or agreements of any character to pay money, they may be sold in the manner hereinafter provided with respect to the sale of any Security; or the Bank, and/or anyone in whose behalf it has acted or shall act in obtaining such Security, may extend the time of payment of any such obligation, or arrange for its payment in installments, or otherwise modify the terms thereof as to any other party liable thereon, without thereby incurring responsibility to, or discharging or otherwise affecting any liability of, the undersigned thereon or in connection therewith. The Bank, and/or anyone for whom it has acted or shall act as agent as herein provided, upon default (in payment, furnishing security or otherwise) hereunder or in connection with any such Liabilities (whether such default be that of the undersigned or of any other party obligated thereon in whole or in part), may sell in the Borough of Manhattan, New York City, or elsewhere, in one or more sales or parcels, at such price or prices as the Bank and/or anyone for whom it has so acted or shall so act as agent, may deem best, and either for cash or on credit, or for future delivery, all or any of the Security, at any broker's board or at public or private sale, without demand of performance or notice of intention to sell or of time or place of sale, and the Bank, and/or anyone in whose behalf it has acted or shall act as hereinbefore provided, may be the purchaser of any or all property, rights and/or interests so sold and thereafter hold the same absolutely free from any claim or right of whatsoever kind, including any equity of redemption, of the undersigned, any such demand, notice or right and equity being hereby expressly waived and released. The undersigned will bear and pay all expenses (including expenses for legal services of every kind) of, or incidental to, the enforcement of any of the provisions hereof or of any liability or Liabilities, or of any actual or attempted sale, or of any exchange, enforcement, collection, compromise or settlement of any Security, and/or of receipt of the proceeds thereof, and will repay to the Bank, and/or to anyone for whom it has acted or shall act as agent as herein provided, any such expense incurred; and such expense shall be deemed an indebtedness within the terms of this agreement. The Bank, and/or anyone for whom it has so acted or shall so act as agent, at any time, at its and/or his and/or their option, may apply all or any of the net cash receipts from or on account of any Security to the payment in whole or in part of any or all of the Liabilities, applying or distributing the same as it and/or he and/or they shall elect, whether or not the item or items on which such payment is applied be due, making proper rebate of interest or discount in case of payment on any item not due. Notwithstanding that the Bank, whether in its own behalf and/or in behalf of another and/or of others, may continue to hold Security and regardless of the value thereof, the undersigned shall be and remain liable for the payment in full, principal and interest, of any balance of said Liabilities and expenses, at any time unpaid.

(4) If at any time the Security for any of such Liabilities shall be unsatisfactory to the Bank, or any of its officers, and the undersigned shall not on demand furnish such further security or make such payment on account as shall be satisfactory to the Bank, or if any sum payable upon any of said Liabilities be not paid when due, or if the undersigned or any maker, obligor, endorser, guarantor, surety, issuer of, or other person liable upon or for any of said Liabilities, or any maker, obligor, endorser, guarantor, surety, issuer of, or other person liable upon or for any Security, shall die or shall become insolvent (however such insolvency may be evidenced), or to make a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, or, if the undersigned or any copartnership of which he is a member shall suspend the transaction of his or its usual business, or upon the commencement of any proceeding of any nature by or against the undersigned or any copartnership of which he is a member under the Bankruptcy Act or any amendment thereof, or if a receiver shall be appointed of or a warrant of attachment issued against any of the property or assets, or any part thereof, of the undersigned, or of any such copartnership, or of any such maker, obligor, endorser, guarantor, surety, issuer, or any other person, thereupon, or upon the commencement of any proceeding against the undersigned or any copartnership of which he is a member under Article 45 of the New York Civil Practice Act, as amended, unless the Bank and/or anyone in whose behalf it has acted or shall act as hereinbefore provided, shall otherwise elect, any and all of said Liabilities shall become and be due and payable forthwith, without presentation, demand, protest, notice of protest or other notice of dishonor of any kind, all of which are hereby expressly waived.

(5) The Bank may, without any notice to the undersigned, transfer or cause to be transferred all or any part of the Security to its name or to the name of its nominee, and repledge all or any part of the Security separate from any of the Liabilities for which it is pledged by the undersigned.

(6) The Bank, and/or anyone in whose behalf it has acted or shall act as agent in connection with the creation of the same, may assign or otherwise transfer any or all, or any part of any, of said Liabilities, and may transfer and/or deliver to any transferee any or all of the Security for the liability, or part thereof, assigned or transferred; and shall be thereafter fully discharged from all claim and responsibility with respect to any and all Security so transferred and/or delivered and the transferee be vested with all the powers and rights of the transferor and/or transferors hereunder with respect to such Security, but the Bank, and/or anyone in whose behalf it has so acted or shall so act, shall retain all rights and powers hereby given with respect to any Security not so transferred. The Bank may also transfer this agreement and in the event of such transfer, the transferee hereof shall have the same rights and remedies hereunder as if originally named herein in place of the Bank.

(7) No delay on the part of the Bank and/or of anyone in whose behalf it has acted or shall act as herein provided, or of any transferee, in exercising any power or right hereunder shall operate as a waiver thereof; nor shall any single or partial exercise of any power or right hereunder preclude other or further exercise thereof or the exercise of any other power or right. The rights and remedies herein expressly specified are cumulative and not exclusive of any rights or remedies which the Bank and/or anyone in whose behalf it has acted or shall act as herein provided, or its and/or his and/or their transferees, may or would otherwise have.

(8) Unless otherwise agreed, the loans, advances or credits heretofore or hereafter obtained from or through the Bank by the undersigned shall be repayable at the principal place of business of the Bank in New York City upon demand and shall bear interest at the rate of six percent. (6%) per annum.

(9) The undersigned, if more than one, shall be jointly and severally liable hereunder and all provisions hereof regarding Liabilities or Security of the undersigned shall apply to any liability or any security of any or all of them. These presents are to be binding upon the heirs, executors, administrators, assigns or successors of the undersigned.

New York....., 19.....

GENERAL LOAN AND COLLATERAL AGREEMENT

In order to obtain loans from and otherwise deal with THE CHASE NATIONAL BANK OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK (hereinafter called the "Bank"), the undersigned hereby agree(s) that the Bank shall have the rights hereinafter set forth in addition to those created by the circumstances associated with the incurrence of any "Liabilities" as hereinafter defined and with the "Security" as hereinafter defined.

The term "Liabilities" as herein used shall include any and all indebtedness, notes, bonds, debentures, obligations and liabilities of any kind of the undersigned to the Bank and also to others to the extent of their participations granted to or interests therein created or acquired for them by the Bank, now or hereafter existing, arising directly between the undersigned and the Bank or acquired outright, conditionally or as collateral security from another by the Bank, whether absolute or contingent, joint or several, or joint and several, secured or unsecured, due or not due, direct or indirect, including, without limiting the generality of the foregoing, liabilities to the Bank of the undersigned as a member of any partnership, syndicate, association or other group, arising by operation of law, contractual or tortious, liquidated or unliquidated, at law, in equity, in admiralty or otherwise, and whether heretofore or hereafter incurred or given by the undersigned as principal, surety, endorser, guarantor or otherwise. The term "Security" as herein used shall include the balance of every deposit account, now or at any time hereafter existing, of the undersigned with the Bank or any other claim of the undersigned against the Bank, all money, negotiable instruments, commercial paper, notes, bonds, stocks, credits, choses in action, claims, demands, or any interest in any thereof, and any other property, rights and interests, of the undersigned, or any evidence thereof, which have been or at any time shall be delivered to or otherwise come into the possession or custody or under the control of the Bank or any of its agents, associates or correspondents, for any purpose, whether or not accepted for the purpose or purposes for which they are delivered or intended. The Bank shall be deemed to have possession, control or custody of any of the Security actually in transit to or set apart for it or any of its agents, associates, correspondents or others acting in its behalf.

As security for any and all the Liabilities, the undersigned hereby pledge(s) to the Bank all such Security capable of pledge and bargain(s), sell(s), assign(s) and transfer(s) to the Bank, and/or give(s) it a general lien upon, and/or right of set-off of, all right, title and interest of the undersigned in and to any thereof incapable of pledge or inadequately pledged, such pledge and/or sale, assignment, transfer and/or lien and/or right of set-off being made or created for the protection and security of the Bank and/or any other or others (but in such proportions as the Bank may determine if held for the benefit of more than one, such determination of the Bank to be conclusive) having participations or interests in the Liabilities as aforesaid, and in trust in the proportions aforesaid for the benefit of such other or others to the extent of the said participations or interests of any other or others therein.

To the extent and in the manner permitted by law, the right is expressly granted to the Bank, at its option, to transfer or cause to be transferred to, or registered in the name of, itself or its nominee or nominees, any and all stocks, bonds, and other securities and property included in the Security, and whether or not so transferred or registered, to receive the income and dividends thereon, including stock dividends and rights to subscribe, and to hold the same as a part of the Security and/or apply it on the principal of and/or interest on any of the Liabilities, at its discretion to exchange all or any of the Security for other property upon the reorganization, recapitalization or other readjustment of any corporation and in connection with any such reorganization, recapitalization or readjustment to deposit all or any of the Security with any committee or depository upon such terms and conditions as it may determine, after such transfer or registration to vote or cause its nominee or nominees to vote all or any of such stocks, bonds and securities, and to exercise or cause its nominee or nominees to exercise all or any powers with respect to any stocks, bonds or other securities or property forming a part of the Security, with the same force and effect as an absolute owner thereof, all without notice and without liability except to account for property actually received by it.

The Bank, at its discretion, may, whether or not any of the Liabilities be due in its name and/or the name of anyone for whom it has acted or shall act as agent in connection with any such liability, or in the name of the undersigned, demand, sue for, collect and/or receive any money, securities or other property at any time due, payable or receivable on account of or in exchange for, or make any compromise or settlement deemed desirable with respect to, any Security but shall be under no obligation so to do. If the Security shall consist of or include negotiable instruments and/or other choses in action and/or promises or agreements of any character to pay money, they may be sold in the manner hereinafter provided with respect to the sale of any of the Security; or the Bank may extend the time of payment of any such obligation, arrange for payment of any thereof in installments, or otherwise modify the terms thereof as to any other party liable thereon, without thereby incurring responsibility to, or discharging or otherwise affecting any liability of, the undersigned thereon or in connection therewith. The Bank upon default (in payment, furnishing security or otherwise) hereunder or in connection with any of the Liabilities (whether such default be that of the undersigned or of any other party obligated thereon or in respect thereto in whole or in part), may sell or cause to be sold in the Borough of Manhattan, New York City, or elsewhere, in one or more sales or parcels, at such price or prices as the Bank may deem best, and either for cash or on credit, or for future delivery, without assumption of any credit risk, all or any of the Security, at any broker's board or at public or private sale, without demand of performance or notice of intention to sell or of time or place of sale, and the Bank, and/or anyone in whose behalf it has acted or shall act as hereinbefore provided, or anyone else, may be the purchaser of any or all property, rights and/or interests so sold and thereafter hold the same absolutely free from any claim or right of whatsoever kind, including any equity of redemption, of the undersigned, any such demand, notice or right and equity being hereby expressly waived and released. The undersigned will bear and pay all expenses (including expense for legal services of every kind) of, or incidental to, the enforcement of any of the provisions hereof or of any of the Liabilities, or of any actual or attempted sale, or of any exchange, enforcement, collection, compromise or settlement of any of the Security, and/or of receipt of the proceeds thereof, and for the care of the Security, including expense of insurance, and will repay to the Bank, and/or to anyone for whom it has acted or shall act as agent as herein provided, any such expense incurred; and such expense shall be deemed an indebtedness within the terms of this agreement. The Bank, at any time, at its option, may apply or reapply all or any of the net cash receipts from or on account of any of the Security to the payment in whole or in part of, and may for any purpose allocate all or any of the Security to, any or all of the Liabilities, applying or reapplying or distributing or allocating the same as it shall elect, whether or not the item or items on which such payment is applied or to which such allocation of Security is made be due, making proper rebate of interest or discount in case of payment on any item not due, the determination of the Bank in all such matters being conclusive. The Bank, in its discretion, may surrender or release or exchange or otherwise deal with all or any part of the Security, without the consent of or notice to any other or others having a participation or interest therein as aforesaid or any party hereto. Notwithstanding that the Bank, whether in its own behalf and/or in behalf of another and/or of others, may continue to hold Security and regardless of the value thereof, the undersigned shall be and remain liable for the payment in full, principal and interest, of any balance of the Liabilities and expenses, at any time unpaid.

If at any time the Security for all or any of the Liabilities shall be unsatisfactory to the Bank, the undersigned hereby agree(s) that, upon the demand of the Bank at any time or from time to time, the undersigned will furnish such further security or make such payment on account as will be satisfactory to the Bank, and if the undersigned fail(s) so to furnish such security or to make such payment, or if any sum payable upon any of the Liabilities be not paid when due, or if the undersigned or any maker, obligor, endorser, guarantor, surety, issuer of, or other person liable upon or for any of the Liabilities or Security shall die or shall become insolvent (however, such insolvency may be evidenced), or commit any act of insolvency, or make a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, or, if the undersigned or any copartnership of which the undersigned is or may be a member (or if more than one) are or may be members, shall suspend the transaction of his or its usual business, or be expelled from or suspended by the New York Stock Exchange, or any other exchange, or if an application is made under Article 45 of the New York Civil Practice Act by any judgment creditor of the undersigned for an order directing the Bank to pay over money, or if a petition in bankruptcy shall be filed by or against the undersigned, or if a petition shall be filed by or against the undersigned or any proceeding shall be instituted by or against the undersigned for any relief under any bankruptcy or insolvency laws or any laws relating to the relief of debtors, readjustment of indebtedness, reorganizations, compositions or extensions, or if any governmental authority or any court at the instance of any governmental authority shall take possession of any substantial part of the property of the undersigned, or shall assume control over the affairs or operations of the undersigned, or if a receiver shall be appointed of, or a writ or order of attachment or garnishment shall be issued or made against any of the property or assets, of the undersigned, or of any such copartnership, or of any such maker, obligor, endorser, guarantor, surety, issuer, or other person liable upon or for any of the Liabilities or Security, thereupon, unless the Bank shall otherwise elect, any and all of the Liabilities shall become and be due and payable forthwith.

The Bank, and/or anyone in whose behalf it has acted or shall act as agent in connection with the creation or acquisition of the same, or to whom it shall have granted a participation or interest therein, may assign or otherwise transfer any or all, or any part of any, of the Liabilities, and the Bank may transfer and/or deliver to any transferee any or all of the Security for the liability, or part thereof, assigned or transferred; and thereafter shall be fully discharged from all claim and responsibility with respect to any and all Security so transferred and/or delivered and the transferee be vested with all the powers and rights of the transferor hereunder with respect to such Security, but the Bank, and/or anyone in whose behalf it has so acted or shall so act, shall retain all rights and powers hereby given with respect to any of the Security not so transferred. The Bank may also transfer this agreement and/or any of its rights and powers hereunder, and in the event of such transfer, the transferee hereof or of such rights and powers shall have the same rights and remedies hereunder as if originally named herein in place of the Bank. No delay on the part of the Bank and/or of any transferee, in exercising any power or right hereunder shall operate as a waiver thereof; nor shall any single or partial exercise of any power or right hereunder preclude other or further exercise thereof or the exercise of any other power or right; nor shall the Bank be liable for exercising or failing to exercise any such power or right. The rights and remedies herein expressly specified are cumulative and not exclusive of any rights or remedies which the Bank, and/or anyone in whose behalf it has acted or shall act as herein provided, or its and/or his and/or their transferees, may or would otherwise have. The undersigned hereby waive(s) presentment (except for acceptance when necessary), protest, notice of protest and notice of dishonor of any and all drafts, notes, bills of exchange, checks and other instruments included in the Liabilities or the Security or herein mentioned, whether upon inception, maturity, acceleration of maturity or due date, or at any other time, and any and all other notice and demand whatsoever, whether or not relating to such instruments.

No provision hereof shall be excluded, modified or limited except by a written instrument expressly referring hereto and setting forth the provision so excluded, modified or limited.

Unless otherwise agreed, the loans, advances or credits heretofore or hereafter obtained from or through the Bank by the undersigned shall be repayable at the principal place of business of the Bank in New York City upon demand and shall bear interest at the rate of six per cent. (6%) per annum.

The undersigned, if more than one, shall be jointly and severally liable hereunder and all provisions hereof regarding the Liabilities or Security of the undersigned shall apply to any liability or any security of any or all of them. These presents are to be binding upon the heirs, executors, administrators, assigns or successors of the undersigned; they are to constitute a continuing agreement, applying to all future as well as existing transactions, whether or not of the character contemplated at the date of this agreement, and if all transactions between the Bank and the undersigned shall at any time or times closed, they shall be equally applicable to any new transactions thereafter; they shall so continue in force notwithstanding any change in any partnership party, if any, hereto, whether such change occurs through death, retirement or otherwise; and they are to be construed according to the laws of the State of New York.

New York ----- 19-----

KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS, That the undersigned, in consideration of financial accommodations given, or to be given or continued to the undersigned by the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, including any accommodations given on behalf of any disclosed or undisclosed principal, hereby agree, jointly and severally, with the said Trust Company that whenever the undersigned shall become or remain directly or contingently, indebted to the said Trust Company for money lent, or for money paid for the use or account of the undersigned, or for any overdraft, or upon any endorsement, draft or guarantee, or upon any other claim, or in any other manner whatsoever, the said Trust Company shall then and thereafter have the following rights, in addition to those created by the circumstances from which such indebtedness may arise, against the undersigned, or his or their executors, administrators, successors, or assigns, namely:

1. All securities deposited by the undersigned with said Trust Company, as collateral to any such obligations or liabilities of the undersigned to said Trust Company, shall subject thereto also be held by said Trust Company as security for any other obligation or liability, direct or contingent, of the undersigned to said Trust Company, whether then existing or thereafter arising; and said Trust Company shall also have a lien upon any balance of the deposit account of the undersigned with said Trust Company existing from time to time, and upon all property of the undersigned of every description given unto or left with said Trust Company for safe keeping or for any other purpose, or coming into the hands of said Trust Company in any way, or in transit to or from said Trust Company, as security for any obligation or liability of the undersigned to said Trust Company now existing or hereafter contracted.

2. Said Trust Company shall at all times have the right to require from the undersigned that there shall be deposited and pledged with said Trust Company as additional security, securities satisfactory in character and amount to said Trust Company; and upon the failure of the undersigned at all times to keep a margin of securities with said Trust Company for any or all such obligations or liabilities of the undersigned satisfactory to said Trust Company, or to furnish such additional margin when required, or upon non-payment of either interest or principal of any obligation or liability to the Trust Company when due, or upon the insolvency of the undersigned, or the filing of a petition in bankruptcy by or against the undersigned or the filing of a petition for reorganization of the undersigned under the bankruptcy laws, or the making of an assignment for the benefit of creditors by the undersigned, or the application for the appointment, or the appointment of any receiver of or of any of the property of the undersigned, or the issuance of any warrant of attachment against any of the property of the undersigned, then and in any such event all obligations or liabilities of the undersigned to said Trust Company shall, at the option of said Trust Company, become immediately due and payable without notice, notwithstanding any credit or time theretofore allowed to the undersigned on any of the said liabilities, provided, however, that in the event of the adjudication in bankruptcy of, or appointment of a Receiver of, or of any of the property of, or of the expulsion or suspension by the New York Stock Exchange or other Exchange as a member, of any of the undersigned, all said obligations or liabilities shall forthwith become due and payable without demand or notice.

3. Upon failure of the undersigned either to pay the interest or principal of any obligation or liability to said Trust Company when becoming or made due, or to maintain the margin of collateral securities as above provided for, then and in any such event said Trust Company may immediately, without demand of payment, without advertising, and without notice to the undersigned, which hereby are expressly waived, sell any or all of the securities or other property of the undersigned held by it as aforesaid as against any or all of the obligations or liabilities of the undersigned, and in connection therewith may grant options, either at the New York Stock Exchange or at any broker's board or at public or private sale, and apply the proceeds of such sale as far as needed toward the payment of any or all of such obligations or liabilities, whether then due or not, together with interest and expense of sale, the undersigned to remain responsible for any deficiency remaining unpaid after such application. If any such sale be at either the New York Stock Exchange, or at a broker's board or at public auction, said Trust Company may itself be a purchaser at such sale of the whole or any part of the securities or other property sold free from any right or equity of redemption of the undersigned, such right and equity being hereby expressly waived and released. Upon default as aforesaid, said Trust Company may also apply toward the payment of said obligations or liabilities all balances of any deposit account of the undersigned with said Trust Company then existing.

4. If any tangible property shall at any time become subject to the lien created hereby or by any other agreement between the undersigned and the Trust Company, the undersigned agrees at its own expense at all times to keep the same fully insured with responsible companies acceptable to the Trust Company, against loss by fire and any other risk to which said property may be subject. The insurance policies or certificate of acceptable companies will be deposited with the Guaranty Trust Company of New York on demand, said Trust Company being designated in the policies as the Assured in the following form: Guaranty Trust Company of New York for account of whom it may concern. Loss, if any, to be adjusted with _____ and payable to the Guaranty Trust Company of New York for account of whom it may concern. In case of failure on the part of the undersigned to effect such insurance, the Trust Company may itself insure such property for account of the undersigned. The Trust Company may at any time transfer into its own name or that of its nominee securities in registered form held as collateral security. In case during the term of this agreement transactions of the character referred to herein shall be had between said Trust Company and any one or more of the undersigned, the security herein provided for shall be applicable to and the provisions hereof shall govern each of such transactions. The undersigned hereby consents that any and all property deposited with the Trust Company as collateral hereunder may be removed by the Trust Company from the State or Country in which it may be held or deposited to any other State or Country, and may there be dealt with by the Trust Company as hereinabove provided.

It is further agreed that these presents constitute a continuing agreement applying to any and all future as well as to existing transactions between the undersigned and said Trust Company.

Dated, New York, the _____ day of _____ 193_____

Form 13-4-208

EXHIBIT No. 1893

NEW YORK, _____ 19_____

The undersigned hereby applies to the GUARANTY TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK (hereinafter called "the Trust Company") for a loan of _____ Dollars ($_____), to be credited to the account of the undersigned, upon the conditions below, and to be repaid by the close of business this day.

The avails of said loan shall be used only for the following purposes:

(1) To pay, in whole or in part, the purchase price of securities which the undersigned has contracted to purchase and receive; or

(2) To pay, in whole or in part, other loans heretofore made to the undersigned, and to release to the undersigned securities held as collateral to such loans.

The securities received as aforesaid shall be kept separately from all other securities, and upon their receipt by the undersigned, a lien or mortgage shall arise in favor of the Trust Company and an itemized list of said securities may be attached to this instrument and made a part thereof, before the close of business this day, and the undersigned hereby agrees to attach such itemized list in accordance with these terms at the demand of the Trust Company. The undersigned may, however, before the close of business this day, sell or transfer, for cash or its equivalent, or pledge for money contemporaneously loaned, or exchange for other securities, any or all of said securities mortgaged, but the proceeds of such sales, transfers and pledges shall be substituted as security for this loan. Before the close of business this day, unless in the meantime the amount of this loan shall have been repaid to the Trust Company, such securities shall be delivered to the Trust Company.

The undersigned, as further security to the Trust Company, hereby assigns to the Trust Company, its successors and assigns, all of the right, title and interest of the undersigned to and in the securities hereinabove referred to, and to and in any and all claims of the undersigned against third parties now existing and that may be created this day for the purchase price, or any present unpaid balance thereof, of any of said securities sold or that may be sold by the undersigned, and to and in all claims of the undersigned against customers of the undersigned for the balance due or to become due this day of the purchase price of any of said securities delivered or deliverable to such customers.

Nothing herein contained is intended to lessen the liability of the undersigned to the Trust Company arising from the making of said loan; nor to impair the effect of any General Collateral Agreement given by the undersigned to the Trust Company; nor to confer upon the undersigned any authority to create any liability on the part of the Trust Company.

KIDDER, PEABODY & CO.

NEW YORK, August 29, 1939.

SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION,
120 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

(Attention: Mr. Whitehead.)

DEAR SIR: In accordance with your verbal request made yesterday, we are pleased to submit the following information:

1. PANHANDLE EASTERN PIPE LINE CO. 48 DUE 1952

Our participation in this issue was $4,000,000 principal amount of bonds out of the total issue of $24,000,000 bonds. The offering was originally made on March 30, 1937 and the settlement date was April 8, 1937. On the latter date we obtained a day loan in the amount of $4,000,000 from the National City Bank of New York.

This was done by completing a Day Loan Agreement form similar to the one enclosed bearing their name and sending it to said Bank, together with a check to the order of the National City Bank of New York for the face amount of the loan, and another check for interest for one day at the rate of 1% per annum which in this case was $111.11. The afore-mentioned probably arrived at the National City Bank at 9 A. M. on the morning of April eighth at which moment the Bank gave Kidder, Peabody & Co. immediate credit for the total of the loan. In the normal course of business, that is, by the end of that day, we had delivered most of our bonds to the accounts to which they were sold and received checks in payment. These checks are generally deposited in the bank from which the day loan is obtained, thereby building up a balance sufficient to allow the Bank to charge the dealer's account with the check which accompanied the day loan application; and in that way the Bank is reimbursed for such day loan. In this particular case, there were several hundred thousand dollars principal amount of bonds sold which could not be delivered against payment for some days, the purchasers having requested us to delay delivery.

Occasionally an insurance company requests a delay in delivery in order to give its legal department sufficient time to review certain legal phases of the bonds. In this instance we do not appear to have borrowed funds on these bonds over the night of April eighth but on April ninth we did borrow $300,000 from the National City Bank of New York, using as collateral $325,000 of said bonds. This loan was repaid by us on April twelfth with interest at the rate of 1% per annum.

2. COMMERCIAL CREDIT CO. 2 $\frac{3}{4}$ % DUE 1942

Our participation in this issue was \$6,500,000 principal amount of bonds. The offering was initially made on June 16, 1937 and the cash date was June 18, 1937. On the latter date we obtained a day loan in the amount of \$6,500,000 from the Chase National Bank, New York. In this instance the mechanics of the day loan were similar, in general, to those previously described. The interest on the aforesaid day loan amounted to \$180.56. However, in this case we did not sell all of our bonds prior to the date of payment but appear to have had on that date a substantial long position. On June eighteenth we obtained a demand loan from the Chase National Bank of \$1,200,000, using as collateral of \$1,321,000 of these bonds. This loan, which carried interest at 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ %, was repaid and the bonds withdrawn as follows:

Date	Bonds Withdrawn	Reduction in Loan	Date	Bonds Withdrawn	Reduction in Loan
6/21/37	$195,000	$200,000	7/2/37	$58,000	$45,000
6/22/37	95,000	100,000	7/6/37	10,000	None
6/23/37	131,000	100,000	7/7/37	20,000	20,000
6/24/37	325,000	300,000	7/22/37	75,000	70,000
6/24/37	25,000	25,000	7/23/37	50,000	50,000
6/25/37	85,000	50,000	7/26/37	190,000	160,000
6/28/37	59,000	60,000
6/29/37	25,000	20,000	Total	$1,321,000	$1,200,000

3. PURE OIL COMPANY 5% CUMULATIVE CONVERTIBLE PREFERRED STOCK

On October 22, 1937 we purchased 24,547 shares of said stock from the Pure Oil Co. On this day we obtained a loan from the New York Trust Co. of $1,470,000, using this stock as collateral. This loan which was to run for a period of four months, we retaining the right to effect reduction, remained intact throughout the entire period. A renewal for a like period was obtained on February 23, 1938 at a reduced rate of interest. You will find below a schedule of the various amounts of stock withdrawn, the reductions in the amount of the loan and the various rates of interest applicable to the unpaid balances:

Date	Shares Withdrawn	Reduction in Loan	Date	Shares Withdrawn	Reduction in Loan
3/7/38	47	None	5/5/38	200	11,000

5/3/38	100	5,500

¹ Renewed.

As a general rule we obtain our day loans from the National City Bank, Guaranty Trust Co. or Chase National Bank as these are the banks we use most frequently for our other banking requirements. Occasionally we have obtained a day loan from the Bank of the Manhattan Co.

If there is any further information you desire, we shall be pleased to submit it.

Yours very truly,

B: W.

New York, New York.*

DEAR MR. FORD: Mr. William Whitehead of the Staff of the Investment Banking Section informs me that you have requested a letter from me setting forth the information which Mr. Whitehead asked for orally. As you are aware, these studies are being undertaken at the direction of the Temporary National Economic Committee, established pursuant to Public Resolution No. 113, 75th Congress. I shall appreciate, therefore, your submitting to us the following information:

1. Whether your firm, during the past five years has obtained a clearing loan to provide payment to the extent of your commitment on any issue in which you were the manager or co-manager.
2. If so, furnish the name of the bank arranging same, the type and amount of the three largest loans negotiated, type of collateral (whether same included securities of the issue involved), the form of contract, the duration thereof, the interest rate and the date and amounts on which same were liquidated, and,

3. The basis for selecting X bank in connection with the loan.

Your cooperation in assisting us with our studies is very much appreciated.

Sincerely yours,

PETER R. NEHEMKIS, Jr.,

Special Counsel, Investment Banking Section, Monopoly Study.

PETER R. NEHEMKIS, Jr., Esq.,

Securities & Exchange Commission,

Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: In the absence of Mr. Ford who is away from the city on a holiday, your letter of September 1st has been referred to me. I enclose a memorandum prepared by our Treasurer's Department which I think will give you the information you desire.

Yours very truly,

H. M. ADDINSELL

THE FIRST BOSTON CORPORATION

NEW YORK OFFICE

Memorandum

To: Mr. H. M. ADDINSELL,

Chairman of Executive Committee.

SEPTEMBER 6, 1939.

In connection with our conversation this morning relative to the letter which Mr. Ford received from the S. E. C., examination of my files has revealed that the three largest issues we managed are as follows:

Government of the Dominion of Canada 2½% due 1945 (participation of $10,000,000)

Southern California Edison 4% Bonds and Debentures (participation of $19,625,000)

Eastern Gas & Fuel 4% due 1956 (participation of $9,000,000)

At the present time it is the customary procedure for an underwriter, when making payment for his participation, to present a check to the manager drawn to the order of the debtor corporation. Immediately after the closing there is released to each of the underwriters, by the manager, the total number of bonds to be taken down by such manager for his own retail distribution. Any bonds given up by an underwriter to the selected dealers, or for institutional sales, are retained by the manager against receipt, and before the close of business, on the initial delivery day, the manager reimburses the underwriters for the bonds retained. Usually each underwriter takes out with a bank what is commonly known as a "day loan" in order to pay for his commitment. We try as nearly as possible to take out the day loan with the trustee of the new issue. This is done as a compliment to the trustee for their cooperation in the preliminary examination and packaging of the securities and their assistance in expediting delivery on the initial delivery day. In the event all of the bonds retained by the manager are not sold by the initial delivery day, the manager arranges a loan, using such unsold bonds as collateral, and each underwriter is reimbursed with the proceeds of loans made for its account. Each underwriter then uses such proceeds of loans, plus the proceeds he receives on the delivery of bonds against his retail sales, to liquidate the day loan, or in the event he has failed to sell all bonds allotted him for retail distribution, if his capital did not permit it, he would have to arrange a collateral loan on such unsold bonds.

In connection with item two in the letter received from the S. E. C., I would say that what they are probably referring to is whether or not money borrowed from banks is actually secured when making payment for an underwriting commitment. Obviously the same type of collateral, when paying for a new issue, could not collateralize a day loan, since it does not become in possession of the underwriter until such time as they have been paid for.

Of the above mentioned issues, according to my records, it was only necessary to borrow on the same issue of securities once, and that was in the case of Eastern Gas & Fuel. This was necessary because of the fact that all of the bonds given up by the underwriters for selling syndicate were not disposed of before the initial delivery date.

As to the method of payment for the three issues above mentioned, it was necessary to pay for the securities a little different than securities are paid for at the present time. For example, in the case of the Dominion of Canada issue, it was decided that the underwriters would only pay The First Boston Corporation an amount equivalent to the price of the number of bonds that they would take down for their own retail distribution. The First Boston Corporation would then finance the total number of bonds contributed to selling syndicate, plus special sales. In this issue we had made arrangements with the Chase National Bank to finance us initially with a day loan up to their limit of $20,000,000. Arrangements were made with the Guaranty Trust Company for the balance of approximately $19,000,000. In the case of the Eastern Gas & Fuel, it was necessary to make payment in Boston in Boston Federal Reserve funds with a check drawn to the order of The First Boston Corporation. We then paid the Eastern Gas & Fuel Associates our check for $70,375,000. In the case of Southern California Edison, both bonds and debentures, payment was made by each underwriter with a check drawn on the Federal Reserve Bank, payable to the Guaranty Trust Company, for the account of the California Trust Company of Los Angeles.

As to the form of contract and the duration thereof, the contract is known as a day loan, which means it must be liquidated the same day, and the rate charged by all New York City banks for a day loan is 1%.

If there is any further information you desire before you reply to this letter, please advise me and I will make every effort to obtain it.

AGREEMENT DATED 19TH DAY OF JUNE, 1925, BETWEEN LADENBURG, THALMANN & CO., H. M. BYLLESBY AND COMPANY, STANDARD GAS AND ELECTRIC COMPANY

THIS AGREEMENT, dated the 19th day of June, 1925, between LADENBURG, THALMANN & CO., a co-partnership, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, (hereinafter called Ladenburg), party of the first part, H. M. BYLLESBY AND COMPANY, a corporation of the State of Delaware, (hereinafter called Byllesby) party of the second part, and STANDARD GAS AND ELECTRIC COMPANY, a corporation of the State of Delaware, (hereinafter called Standard) party of the third part,

WITNESSETH:

All the parties hereto are or are to be interested, as stockholders of two new corporations to be formed pursuant hereto, in the property of Pittsburgh Utilities Corporation, a New York corporation, and have come to the agreements herein contained with respect to the management thereof and with respect to the other matters covered by this agreement.

1. There shall be formed the Standard Power and Light Corporation, under the laws of the State of Delaware under a charter satisfactory to counsel for all parties hereto which shall have only one class of voting stock consisting of thirty thousand (30,000) shares of Class B Common Stock, without par value, of which one-half will be owned by Ladenburg or their nominee and the other half owned by Standard or its nominee, and the charter shall provide that one-half the directors shall at all times be elected by the stock to be initially owned by Ladenburg, or their nominee, and that the other half shall at all times be elected by the stock to be initially owned by Standard, or its nominee.

Standard Power and Light Corporation shall also presently issue one hundred thousand (100,000) shares of Preferred Stock and four hundred and ten thousand (410,000) shares of Class A Common Stock, out of a total authorized issue of five hundred thousand (500,000) shares of Preferred Stock and eight hundred thousand (800,000) shares of Class A Common Stock, all without par value. The one hundred thousand (100,000) shares of Preferred Stock and one hundred and ten thousand (110,000) shares of Class A Common Stock to be presently issued are to be allocated to members of the public, now the holders of one hundred thousand (100,000) shares of Preferred Stock and one hundred thousand (100,000) shares of Common Stock of Standard Power and Light Corporation, a Maryland corporation; and one hundred and fifty thousand (150,000) shares of Class A Common Stock will be owned by Byllesby, or its nominee.

The preferences, rights and privileges of the various classes of stock shall be such as are agreed upon by the counsel for all parties.

Byllesby is to procure the transfer to Standard Power and Light Corporation (Delaware) of eighty thousand one hundred (80,100) shares of Preferred Stock of Pittsburgh Utilities Corporation, a New York corporation, represented in part by voting trust certificates, for the price of $2,344,500.¹

Initialed opposite amount: J. J. O'B. B W S. C H O'R Reissue.)

Ladenburg are to procure the transfer to Standard Power and Light Corporation (Delaware) of at least four hundred and sixty thousand (460,000) shares and not more than five hundred and five thousand (505,000) shares of Preferred Stock of said Pittsburgh Utilities Corporation, represented by voting trust certificates in whole or in part. In the acquisition of such shares there shall be paid and delivered to Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co., fifteen dollars ($15) per share plus $1,555,500 and one hundred and fifty thousand ($150,000) shares of the Class A Common Stock of Standard Power and Light Corporation (Delaware). It is understood that at least ninety-four thousand four hundred (94,400) shares of Preferred Stock of Pittsburgh Utilities Corporation to be transferred by Ladenburg are now owned or controlled by themselves, and that the remainder of the minimum of four hundred and sixty thousand (460,000) shares are owned by the following named corporations, from whom Ladenburg have received written authority to sell the same, to wit:--

Name	No. of shares
First Security Company-----	94,000
Chase Securities Corporation-----	54,000
Haystone Securities Corporation-----	17,600
Union Trust Company of Pittsburgh-----	200,000

The delivery of the said shares of Preferred Stock of said Pittsburgh Utilities Corporation to Standard Power and Light Corporation (Delaware) and the payment of the consideration therefor are to be made concurrently on or before July 27, 1925.

2. There shall also be formed a corporation under the laws of the State of Delaware under a charter to be approved by counsel for all parties, herein referred to as United Railways Investment Holding Corporation, to which shall be transferred by or on behalf of Byllesby or Standard seventy-one thousand eight hundred (71,800) shares of Preferred Stock and one hundred twenty-three thousand three hundred (123,300) shares of Common Stock of United Railways Investment Company, a New Jersey Corporation, which latter corporation, among other things, owns two hundred and forty thousand (240,000) shares of the Common Stock (being all the Common Stock outstanding) of Pittsburgh Utilities Corporation, which shares of Common Stock are represented by voting trust certificates. Such corporation so to be formed shall have an authorized capitalization of Nine million, nine hundred and ninety-nine thousand Dollars ($9,999,000) of Preferred Stock, represented by ninety-nine thousand nine hundred and ninety (99,990) shares of a par value of one hundred dollars ($100.) each, and one thousand dollars ($1,000) par value of Common Stock, consisting of one thousand (1,000) shares of a par value of One dollar ($1) each. Seven million dollars ($7,000,000) in par value of non-voting Preferred Stock shall be issued to Standard or to Byllesby, or their respective nominees, in exchange for the aforesaid shares of Preferred and Common Stock of United Railways Investment Company. Five hundred (500) shares of the Common Stock shall be issued to Byllesby, or its nominee, and five hundred (500) shares of the Common Stock shall be issued to Ladenburg, or their nominee, for a nominal consideration, and the charter shall provide that one-half the directors shall at all times be elected by the stock to be initially owned by Ladenburg, or their nominee, and that the other half shall at all times be elected by the stock to be initially owned by Byllesby, or its nominee. The preferences, privileges and other characteristics of the Preferred Stock and the Common Stock shall be such as are agreed upon by counsel for all parties.

3. It is understood as a simultaneous condition of the purchase from or through Ladenburg of not less than four hundred and sixty thousand (460,000) shares of Preferred Stock of Pittsburgh Utilities Corporation, pursuant to paragraph 1. of this Agreement, that Ladenburg shall procure the resignations of L. F. Loree and M. B. Starring, or, at Ladenburg's option, of B. S. Guinness in lieu of M. B. Starring, as Voting Trustees, and shall appoint J. J. O'Brien (hereby selected by Standard) and another executive of Standard to be selected by Standard in their places as Voting Trustees under the Pittsburgh Utilities Corporation Voting Trust Agreement, dated January 17, 1925. Ladenburg hereby agree that in the event of any vacancy in the office of any Voting Trustee selected by Standard another Voting Trustee shall be appointed by Ladenburg to fill such vacancy who shall be selected by Standard and directly connected as an executive with the organization of Standard. In the event that Ladenburg shall not appoint a Voting Trustee or Voting Trustees selected by Standard under the circumstances set forth in this paragraph, within thirty (30) days after having received a notice from Standard of the person or persons selected by Standard so to be appointed as Voting Trustee or Voting Trustees, then Ladenburg will upon the expiration of such thirty (30) days sell to Byllesby at its request the one hundred and fifty thousand (150,000) shares of Class A Common Stock of Standard Power and Light Corporation (Delaware) to be delivered to Ladenburg or their nominee, pursuant to paragraph 1 of this Agreement, or so many thereof as may not have been sold pursuant to paragraph "6" of this Agreement, for the consideration of one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000), or one dollar ($1.) per share, whichever may be less, and Ladenburg will further sell to Byllesby at its request the five hundred (500) shares of Common Stock of United Railways Investment Holding Corporation, to be issued to Ladenburg or their nominee, pursuant to paragraph 2 of this Agreement, for the consideration of five hundred dollars ($500), and Ladenburg will sell to Standard at its request the fifteen thousand (15,000) shares of Class B Common Stock of Standard Power and Light Corporation (Delaware) to be issued to Ladenburg or their nominee, pursuant to paragraph 1 of this Agreement, for the consideration of fifteen thousand dollars ($15,000).

4. Ladenburg, Byllesby and Standard hereby each agrees with the other (1) not directly or indirectly to promote, further or participate in any of the following named acts of (I) Pittsburgh Utilities Corporation (II) Philadelphia Company (III) Duquesne Light Company (IV) Pittsburgh Railways Company or (V) any other corporation controlled, directly or indirectly, by said Pittsburgh Utilities Corporation, Philadelphia Company, Duquesne Light Company and/or Pittsburgh Railways Company, whether such control be by ownership of stock in any such other corporation by said Pittsburgh Utilities Corporation, Philadelphia Company, Duquesne Light Company and/or Pittsburgh Railways Company and/or by any corporation controlled by any one or more of them, or by any other manner or method whatsoever, to the extent that any of such acts by such other corporation would make a change in the ownership or control of the electric light, power, artificial and natural gas, and/or street railway systems of Philadelphia Company, or Duquesne Light Company or Pittsburgh Railways Company or of any substantial part of any thereof, and (2) to prevent by all the means in its power the doing of any of said acts, and (3) that if any of said acts nevertheless shall be done not to share in any of the profits thereof, directly or indirectly, unless in any such case the said acts shall have been previously agreed upon between Byllesby and Ladenburg:

- (a) the reclassification of any class of stock of the pertinent corporation;
- (b) the alteration of the terms of any class of stock of the pertinent corporation;
- (c) the creation of any new class of stock of the pertinent corporation;
- (d) the increase in the authorized amount of any class of stock of the pertinent corporation;
- (e) the sale, other disposition, mortgage or pledge by the pertinent corporation of the stock (or voting trust certificates therefor) of any other corporation in which it may hold a controlling voting interest, in any manner which may cause it, except in event of default under the terms of the mortgage or pledge, to lose such controlling voting interest;
- (f) the distribution of any shares of stock (or voting trust certificates therefor) of any other corporation in which the pertinent corporation may hold a controlling voting interest, among its stockholders by way of dividend or otherwise;
- (g) the liquidation in whole or in part or other winding up of the pertinent corporation;
- (h) the vote of any stock in any other corporation in which the pertinent corporation may hold a controlling voting interest to permit a recapitalization of such other corporation in such manner that the pertinent corporation shall lose its controlling voting interest therein;
- (i) the sale, mortgage, lease or other disposition of all the property of the pertinent corporation, or of so much thereof as shall work a substantial change in the nature of its business (except for the refunding of the outstanding bonds assumed by Pittsburgh Utilities Corporation, and then only on such terms that the controlling interest of Pittsburgh Utilities Corporation in Philadelphia Company shall not be jeopardized, except in the event of default under the terms of the mortgage or pledge);

(j) the issue by the pertinent corporation through its directors or otherwise of any authorized but as yet unissued shares of its capital stock, or treasury stock, or securities convertible into shares of its capital stock;

(k) the merger or consolidation of the pertinent corporation into or with any other corporation except the act of Duquesne Light Company, Philadelphia Company and/or Pittsburgh Railways Company in causing consolidations or mergers into each, respectively of its respective subsidiary companies.

Without limiting the generality of the words "promote, further or participate" it is hereby expressly agreed that the vote either as a director of the pertinent corporation or of any other corporation, or as a Voting Trustee, or as the holder of any proxy, of any member, officer or director of Ladenburg or of any firm or corporation controlled by them, or of any Voting Trustee (unless selected by Byllesby or by Standard) whose successor is appointable by Ladenburg under any Voting Trust Agreement, (hereinafter called Ladenburg Officials), and the vote either as a director of the pertinent corporation or of any other corporation, or as a Voting Trustee, or as the holder of any proxy, of any member, officer or director of Byllesby or of Standard (respectively) or of any firm or corporation controlled by Byllesby or Standard (respectively) or of any Voting Trustee selected by Byllesby or Standard, respectively, (hereinafter called Byllesby Officials and Standard Officials respectively) in favor of any such proposition, shall be included within the meaning of the said words.

If at any meeting there shall be voting at least one Ladenburg Official and at least one Byllesby Official or Standard Official, and the votes of all the Ladenburg Officials, Byllesby Officials and Standard Officials who shall be voting at that meeting shall be cast to the same effect, then it shall be conclusively presumed that Ladenburg and Byllesby have reached an agreement to that effect.

None of the covenants of this paragraph 4 shall be deemed to have been violated unless and until one of the acts specified in sub-divisions (a) to (k) shall have been consummated by the pertinent corporation.

5. Ladenburg agree with Byllesby that if Ladenburg shall commit any violation of any of their agreements contained in paragraph 4, then Ladenburg will, within thirty days after such violation, sell to Byllesby at its request the one hundred fifty thousand shares (150,000) of Class A Common Stock of Standard Power and Light Corporation (Delaware), to be delivered to Ladenburg or their nominee, pursuant to paragraph 1 of this agreement, or so many thereof as may not have been sold pursuant to paragraph 6 of this Agreement, for the consideration of One hundred thousand dollars ($100,000) or one dollar ($1.) per share, whichever may be less, and Ladenburg will further sell to Byllesby at its request the five hundred shares (500) of Common Stock of United Railways Investment Holding Corporation, to be issued to Ladenburg or their nominee, pursuant to paragraph 2 of this agreement, for the consideration of five hundred dollars ($500.). Ladenburg agree with Standard that if Ladenburg shall commit any violation of any of their agreements contained in paragraph 4, then Ladenburg will, within thirty days after such violation, sell to Standard at its request the fifteen thousand shares (15,000) of Class B Common Stock of Standard Power and Light Corporation (Delaware), to be issued to Ladenburg or their nominee, pursuant to paragraph 1 of this Agreement for the consideration of fifteen thousand dollars ($15,000).

Byllesby and Standard jointly and severally agree with Ladenburg that if either Standard or Byllesby shall commit any violation of any of its respective agreements contained in paragraph 4, then Byllesby will, within thirty days after such violation, sell to Ladenburg at their request the one hundred fifty thousand shares (150,000) of Class A Common Stock of Standard Power and Light Corporation (Delaware), to be issued to Byllesby or its nominee, pursuant to paragraph 1 of this Agreement, or so many thereof as may not have been sold pursuant to paragraph 6 of this Agreement, for the consideration of one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000), or one dollar ($1.) per share, whichever may be less, and Byllesby will further sell to Ladenburg at their request the five hundred shares (500) of Common Stock of United Railways Investment Holding Corporation, to be issued to Byllesby or its nominee, pursuant to paragraph 2 of this Agreement, for the consideration of five hundred dollars ($500.), and Standard will sell to Ladenburg at their request the fifteen thousand shares (15,000) of Class B Common Stock of Standard Power and Light Corporation (Delaware), to be issued to Standard or its nominee, pursuant to paragraph 1 of this Agreement, for the consideration of fifteen thousand dollars ($15,000).

6. Ladenburg and Byllesby agree that none of the one hundred fifty thousand (150,000) shares of Class A Common Stock of Standard Power and Light Corporation, (Delaware), to be issued to Byllesby or its nominee, pursuant to paragraph 1 of this Agreement, and none of the one hundred fifty thousand (150,000) shares of Class A Common Stock of Standard Power and Light Corporation (Delaware) to be delivered to Ladenburg or their nominee, pursuant to paragraph 1 of this Agreement, shall be sold without the consent of both Byllesby and Ladenburg, and that in the event that any of said three hundred thousand (300,000) shares of Class A Common Stock of Standard Power and Light Corporation (Delaware) shall be sold, the sale shall be made equally for the account of Ladenburg and of Byllesby, unless a contrary agreement shall have been made in writing signed both by Ladenburg and by Byllesby prior to any such sale.

7. To assure and secure the performance of the agreements made by the parties hereto contained in paragraphs 5 and 6 of this Agreement, the parties hereto agree that there shall be deposited with The Chemical National Bank of New York:

(1) By Ladenburg: One hundred fifty thousand (150,000) shares of Class A Common Stock of Standard Power and Light Corporation (Delaware), and fifteen thousand (15,000) shares of Class B Common Stock of Standard Power and Light Corporation (Delaware), and five hundred (500) shares of Common Stock of United Railways Investment Holding Corporation.

(2) By Standard and/or by Byllesby: One hundred fifty thousand (150,000) shares of Class A Common Stock of Standard Power and Light Corporation (Delaware), and fifteen thousand (15,000) shares of Class B Common Stock of Standard Power and Light Corporation (Delaware), and five hundred (500) shares of Common Stock of United Railways Investment Holding Corporation.

Such deposit shall be made concurrently by Ladenburg, Standard and Byllesby as and when the aforesaid shares of stock are respectively issued and delivered to them or their nominees respectively.

Such deposit shall be made pursuant to an agreement with The Chemical National Bank of New York, or a letter of instructions to The Chemical National Bank of New York satisfactory to counsel for all parties, which shall contain provisions consistent with the provisions of this Agreement and devised for the purpose of effectuating its provisions, including the authority to The Chemical National Bank of New York to release shares of Class A Common Stock of Standard Power and Light Corporation (Delaware) as and when the same shall be sold with the consent of Ladenburg and Byllesby, and to release shares of Class A Common Stock of Standard Power and Light Corporation (Delaware), Class B Common Stock of Standard Power and Light Corporation, (Delaware) and Common Stock of United Railways Investment Holding Corporation against payment therefor, as hereinabove provided, to The Chemical National Bank of New York for account of the party entitled to such payment in any of the events hereinabove specified in which any party may be entitled to purchase from another party such shares of Class A Common Stock and/or Class B Common Stock of Standard Power and Light Corporation (Delaware) and/or shares of Common Stock of United Railways Investment Holding Corporation.

8. Ladenburg agree that they will always permit at least two of the members of their firm as it now or hereafter may be constituted to act as directors of Pittsburgh Utilities Corporation, if nominated and elected by the stockholders; and that they will use their best endeavors to procure such nomination and election if thereunto requested by Byllesby. Byllesby agrees that it will always permit at least two of its executives to act as directors of Pittsburgh Utilities Corporation if nominated and elected by the stockholders; and Byllesby and Standard jointly and severally agree that they will use their best endeavors to procure such nomination and election if thereunto requested by Ladenburg.

9. This Agreement and the deposit of stock provided for by paragraph 7 shall continue either until the termination of both the Pittsburgh Utilities Corporation Voting Trust dated March 30, 1923, and the Pittsburgh Utilities Corporation Voting Trust dated January 17, 1925, or until the dissolution or complete liquidation of Pittsburgh Utilities Corporation, pursuant to Agreement reached between Ladenburg and Byllesby, whichever event shall first occur; except that the provisions of paragraph 6 hereof with respect to the sale by the parties of Class A Common Stock of Standard Power and Light Corporation (Delaware) shall continue, notwithstanding the termination of the other parts of this Agreement, and notwithstanding the release of said stock from deposit with The Chemical National Bank of New York upon the termination of the other parts of this Agreement, until the expiration of ten years from the date of this Agreement.

10. The term Ladenburg means not only the present firm of Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co., but any person, firm, association or corporation which may hereafter carry on the business now conducted by Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co.

The term Standard means not only the present corporation of Standard Gas and Electric Company, but any person, firm, association or corporation which may hereafter carry on the business now conducted by Standard Gas and Electric Company.

The term Byllesby means not only the present corporation of H. M. Byllesby and Company, but any person, firm, association or corporation which may hereafter carry on the business now conducted by H. M. Byllesby and Company.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF the parties hereto have duly executed these presents under seal as of the date hereof.

EXHIBIT No. 1927

[From Docket 31-420, Securities and Exchange Commission]

MEMORANDUM OF AGREEMENT BETWEEN H. M. BYLLESBY AND COMPANY (HEREIN AFTER CALLED BYLLESBY) AND STANDARD GAS AND ELECTRIC COMPANY (HEREIN AFTER CALLED STANDARD), DATED JUNE 19, 1925.

WHEREAS, Standard and Byllesby in the year 1924 formed Standard Power and Light Corporation under the laws of the State of Maryland, which has an issued capitalization of 100,000 shares of Preferred Stock without par value and 400,000 shares of Common Stock without par value, of which 180,000 shares of Common Stock are owned by Standard and 120,000 shares of Common Stock are owned by Byllesby; and

WHEREAS, Byllesby has acquired a majority of the outstanding stock of United Railways Investment Company and a substantial number of shares of stock of Pittsburgh Utilities Corporation, which corporations together control Philadelphia Company, which in turn controls a large public utility and street railway system in and about Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania; and

WHEREAS, Standard desires to acquire an interest in said public utility and street railway system but neither Standard nor Byllesby is able to acquire any measure of control in respect thereof by reason of the existence of certain voting trusts which are controlled by Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co.; and

WHEREAS, Standard and Byllesby have for some months been in negotiations with Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. and have reached the basis of an agreement with said Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co., by virtue of which Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. shall surrender one-half control and retain one-half control, as well as a one-half interest in the equity; and

WHEREAS, said one-half control is to be exercised by Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. by the ownership of one-half of the voting stock in two new corporations to be formed, to-wit, Standard Power and Light Corporation to be formed under the laws of the State of Delaware to own a controlling interest in Pittsburgh Utilities Corporation and United Railways Investment Holding Corporation to be formed under the laws of the State of Delaware to own a controlling interest in United Railways Investment Company (which corporation has a valuable asset interest in Pittsburgh Utilities Corporation but not a controlling interest enabling it to control the Philadelphia Company system which control is vested in Pittsburgh Utilities Corporation); and

WHEREAS, Standard Power and Light Corporation (of Maryland) will acquire 100,000 shares of the Preferred Stock of the new Standard Power and Light Corporation (of Delaware) and 400,000 shares of its common stock for a consideration of $11,400,000 and distribute 100,000 shares of Preferred Stock and

110,000 shares of Common Stock of said Delaware corporation to the holders of Trust Receipts calling for the delivery of 100,000 shares of its Preferred Stock and 100,000 shares of its Common Stock and will distribute the remaining 300,000 shares of Common Stock of said Delaware corporation to Byllesby and Standard in lieu of the 300,000 shares of its common stock now severally held by them as aforesaid; and

WHEREAS Byllesby and Standard, pursuant to arrangement with Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co., will be obligated to deliver to said Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. 150,000 out of the said 300,000 shares of common stock of said Delaware corporation; and

WHEREAS, said Standard Power and Light Corporation (of Delaware) will issue 30,000 shares of Class B Common Stock, constituting its sole voting stock, of which only 15,000 shares will be issued to Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co., the remaining 15,000 shares being issuable to Standard and Byllesby, and Byllesby claims the right to subscribe to two-fifths thereof by reason of its proportionate interest in the common stock of Standard Power and Light Corporation (of Maryland) and Standard is anxious to subscribe to the whole thereof and exclude Byllesby from subscribing to any part thereof so that, if there should be any future diversity of interest between Standard and Byllesby, Standard would not be in the position of holding a minority interest; and

WHEREAS, Standard is desirous of acquiring the asset value incident to the ownership of a majority of the stock of United Railways Investment Company to be represented by the 70,000 shares, of the par value of $100 each, of Preferred Stock of United Railways Investment Holding Corporation;

NOW, THEREFORE, this memorandum of agreement disposes of all the foregoing matters as follows:

1. Standard shall have the sole right to subscribe to the 15,000 shares of voting stock of the new Standard Power and Light Corporation, and Byllesby surrenders its right to subscribe to the same, in consideration whereof Standard agrees to pay to Byllesby the sum of $800,000 and to contribute 130,000 out of the 150,000 shares of common stock of Standard Power and Light Corporation to be paid to Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co., and Byllesby, in further consideration for the aforesaid agreements of Standard, agrees to contribute the remaining 20,000 shares of said common stock to be paid to Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. and to make to Standard a fair cash allowance, estimated at $125,000, as income on its investment in Standard Power and Light Corporation of Maryland.

2. Byllesby agrees to sell to Standard and Standard agrees to purchase from Byllesby as, if and when issued the aforesaid 70,000 shares of preferred stock of United Railways Investment Holding Corporation for the sum of $7,000,000 and Byllesby in further consideration agrees to pay to Standard from time to time while Standard's investment in such stock shall not be income-producing, sums equivalent to a fair rate of dividends on said shares of preferred stock.

3. Based on the foregoing adjustment, Byllesby and Standard mutually agree with one another to enter into the proposed contract with Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. of which the terms have been substantially settled by the negotiations aforesaid.

Memorandum:

BANKING

In view of the fact that it is anticipated that United States Electric Power Corporation and H. M. Byllesby and Company will each have a very large investment in Standard Power and Light Corporation, and, through it, in Standard Gas and Electric Company, it is deemed advisable to provide, so far as is practicable, at the present time, for strong and continued financial support in connection with these companies and their respective subsidiaries, sub-subsidiaries and affiliated companies which will, from time to time, require the services of bankers in the placing of issues of securities necessary to raise money to defray expenditures needed in the public interest, to refund existing obligations and for other and necessary or advisable corporate purposes. To that end, United States Electric Power Corporation and H. M. Byllesby and Company contemplate that all financing for Standard Power and Light Corporation and Standard Gas and Electric Company, and their respective subsidiaries, sub-subsidiaries, and affiliated companies, shall be undertaken as to interest and liability therein, at original cost, as follows, provided in each instance that the terms and conditions of such financing shall be undertaken on fair prices and on fair terms, considering the market conditions at the time:

United States Electric Power Corporation-----	75%
H. M. Byllesby and Company-----	25%

[2] The foregoing is subject to the provisions hereafter made relating to the interests of others in Philadelphia Company financing.

In view of the fact that Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. have for many years been associated in financing of the Philadelphia Company and its subsidiaries, and in view of the further fact that Philadelphia Company will become one of the important subsidiaries of Standard Gas and Electric Company, it has been deemed advisable that Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. shall be a party to this memorandum.

OTHER BANKING HOUSES

1. The provisions of this section are not applicable to Philadelphia Company financing which is dealt with below.

2. As to all other financing by Standard Power and Light Corporation and Standard Gas and Electric Company and their respective subsidiaries, sub-subsidiaries and affiliated companies, all existing agreements relating to banking and involving the services of other banking houses shall be disregarded by H. M. Byllesby and Company and United States Electric Power Corporation in dealing with the respective companies.

3. In the event that H. M. Byllesby and Company and United States Electric Power Corporation shall mutually agree to permit other banking houses to join with them in [3] any piece of financing involving Northern States Power Company, Louisville Gas and Electric Company, Oklahoma Gas and Electric Company and San Diego Consolidated Gas and Electric Company (this provision applying only to respective properties as they now exist and the extensions thereof), United States Electric Power Corporation agrees that H. M. Byllesby and Company shall have an interest and liability in such financing of not less than 20% irrespective of what interests may be granted in any such financing to other banking houses.

4. In the event that H. M. Byllesby and Company and United States Electric Power Corporation shall mutually agree to permit other banking houses to join with them in any piece of financing involving any other company covered by this memorandum or any new properties acquired by Standard Power and Light Corporation, Standard Gas and Electric Company, and their respective subsidiaries, sub-subsidiaries and affiliated companies, the interest of such other banking houses shall be provided for ratably out of their respective basic interests by United States Electric Power Corporation and H. M. Byllesby and Company, that is, United States Electric Power Corporation shall provide 75% thereof and H. M. Byllesby and Company shall provide 25% thereof.

LEADERSHIP

H. M. Byllesby and Company is to have leadership [4] in all financing of Standard Gas and Electric Company itself and Oklahoma Gas and Electric Company and the subsidiaries of the latter. Bankers selected by United States Electric Power Corporation are to have the leadership in all financing of Standard Power and Light Corporation and its subsidiaries and sub-subsidiaries and affiliated companies (other than Standard Gas and Electric Company itself and Oklahoma Gas and Electric Company and the subsidiaries of the latter) and all subsidiaries, sub-subsidiaries and affiliated companies of Standard Gas and Electric Company.

In all cases in which H. M. Byllesby and Company has leadership, a banking firm affiliated with and selected by United States Electric Power Corporation shall have second position. In all cases in which a banking firm selected by United States Electric Power Corporation has leadership, H. M. Byllesby and Company shall have second position subject only as hereinafter provided in respect to Philadelphia Company and subsidiaries.

SYNDICATE MANAGERS

In connection with any financing, it is understood and agreed that whether H. M. Byllesby and Company or a banking house selected by United States Electric Power Corporation leads the business, the banking house leading the business shall keep the books of account, send out all necessary notices and shall be the operating manager of the [5] syndicate, in accordance with general practice. The association of other members as joint syndicate managers of any group purchasing securities shall be a matter of determination between H. M. Byllesby and Company and United States Electric Power Corporation in all cases, except with reference to the Philadelphia Company, its subsidiaries, sub-subsidiaries and affiliated companies, in which it shall be a matter of determination by H. M. Byllesby and Company, United States Electric Power Corporation and Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co., up to January 17, 1935, and thereafter shall be a matter of determination by H. M. Byllesby and Company and United States Electric Power Corporation.

PHILADELPHIA COMPANY AND SUBSIDIARIES

It is contemplated that until January 17, 1935, the financing of Philadelphia Company and its subsidiaries shall be undertaken as to interest and liability therein as follows:

[6] By a banking group heretofore formed by Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co., including H. M. Byllesby and Company and without any association therein of Harris, Forbes & Co. or Harris Trust and Savings Bank-----	50%
By United States Electric Power Corporation, including Harris, Forbes & Co. and Harris Trust and Savings Bank-----	50%

After January 17, 1935, it is contemplated that all financing of Philadelphia Company and its subsidiaries shall be undertaken as to interest and liability therein as follows:

By United States Electric Power Corporation-----	65%
By H. M. Byllesby and Company-----	25%
By Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co.-----	10%

Until January 17, 1935, (a) in case of financing of the Philadelphia Company, second place is to be taken by H. M. Byllesby and Company, and third place by Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co.; (b) in the case of financing of Duquesne Light Company, second place is to be taken by Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co., and third place by H. M. Byllesby and Company, and (c) in the case of any other subsidiary of Philadelphia Company, H. M. Byllesby and Company and Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. are to alternate in second and third places in accordance with their present arrangement. After January 17, 1935, it is contemplated that the position of Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. in such financing shall follow the position of every other banking house having an interest and liability in said financing of 15% or more; provided that in any case Laden-burg, Thalmann & Co., without surrendering its interest and liability in said financing, may decline publicly to appear therein.

The foregoing provisions as to the Philadelphia Company and its subsidiaries apply only to the properties and to the extensions of Philadelphia Company and its subsidiaries as they now exist. On the other hand, if Philadelphia Company and/or any of its subsidiaries shall be transferred to outside interests and other properties are acquired by Standard Gas and Electric Company or Standard [7] Power and Light Corporation in lieu thereof, the aforesaid banking arrangements as to Philadelphia Company shall apply to such substitute; provided that if the consideration for the acquisition of such substitute shall include a substantial amount of cash or substantial properties or securities other than the Philadelphia Company and/or any of its subsidiaries and if the gross earnings of such substitute shall exceed the gross earnings of the Philadelphia Company and/or any of its subsidiaries (as the case may be) so substituted, then the interest of Ladenburg in the financing of such substitute shall be reduced in the proportion that the gross earnings of such substitute bear to the gross earnings of the Philadelphia Company and/or any of its subsidiaries (as the case may be) so substituted.

The foregoing is without prejudice to any arrangement which may be made in the future by mutual consent to include Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. in some share of the general financing of Standard Gas and Electric Company and its subsidiaries.

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

Nothing in the foregoing is to be deemed to exclude the possibility of financing by Standard Power and Light Corporation of Standard Gas and Electric Company or their respective subsidiary or sub-subsidiary or affiliated corporations without the intervention of bankers as distributors or securities or underwriters by direct offering of [8] securities to their stockholders or to their customers. It is contemplated that all customer ownership companies shall be conducted by H. M. Byllesby and Company as heretofore, but without substantial profit to them.

STANDARD GAS & ELECTRIC COMPANY

A letter on present status for London:

(1) Our cable No. 361 of April 12th outlined the possibility of litigation in which we did not desire to become involved and their reply No. 183 of April 13th agreed with this attitude and suggested that Harrison Williams and Electric Shareholdings press the attack. No communication with London has taken place since, but the following events have occurred:

(2) G. Reginald Schumann as nominee for Hydro-Electric signed a letter addressed to Standard Gas & Electric in conjunction with other stockholders demanding access to the books. This demand was refused.

(3) Emanuel's next step was to collect proxies for the annual meeting of Standard Gas, which was held May 15th. He procured 217,000 shares which were voted against Byllesby's nominations for directors.

(4) Schumann signed a proxy for Hydro-Electric stock in his name and in favor of Emanuel's men upon cable authorization from Fisher.

(5) Emanuel now asks Schumann as nominee to sign two further letters: (a) a letter to Siegbert & Riggs, authorizing them to represent the stock in his name in legal proceedings against Standard Gas (b) A letter to Standard Gas

& Electric Company in complete legal detail demanding access to their books and setting forth the reasons for such demand, presumably to be submitted to the court upon another refusal of the Standard Gas. Fisher has cabled special authorization to Schumann to sign the letter to Siegbert & Riggs under (a) above.

Mr. A. Dulles states that there is no possibility of Schrobanco being drawn into these proceedings officially. It is of course possible that in the course of the trial some lawyer might refer to Schumann as employee of Schrobanco, and it is quite probable that our close relations to Fisher and Hydro Electric and Lowenstein will tend to identify us in the public mind with the litigation. Incidentally, Mr. Dulles says that this case, if it comes to trial, will be followed with the closest interest by all lawyers and will doubtless be one of the outstanding cases of the year, since it will make law on this particular subject.

Emanuel has sent Fisher rather complete details which London might ask Fisher to show them.

Second meeting with Emanuel today shows that O'Brien not yet anxious to play with us but still nervous of our attitude as important shareholders towards his $1,000,000. preferred stock control Stop

Emanuel convinced that Standard Gas better and cheaper investment today than any of Hydro holdings as price kept down by existence of preferred control stock Stop

Emanuel and we all advise immediate sale of all Central States Electric Buffalo Niagara Southeastern Power & Light with a view to investing part or all proceeds in Standard Gas and thus improving our investment and strengthening our position vis-a-vis O'Brien Stop

Emanuel is seeing O'Brien again next week and proposes to alter his tactics telling him we have increased our holdings and have intention of further increasing Stop

Also that we are not anxious to buy his preferred stock as we doubt validity and fear public enquiry Stop

In view of O'Briens fears Emanuel feels we can obtain representation on board and interest in finance as large shareholders and have such a nuisance value as critics of all Byllesby operations as to make preferred stock of little value to them Stop

Plan is to force O'Brien to join Emanuel and ourselves in all financial operations of Standard Gas and between us gradually obtain real control of common stock instead of trick control as now held by Byllesby Stop

If O'Brien inclined to cooperate on these lines corporation would be formed along lines described in my notes mailed to Baron into which Emanuel and Hydro would place all their Standard Gas common and O'Brien would place his preferred stock and some Byllesby stock in exchange for common stock of corporation for amounts to be agreed Stop

This corporation would proceed to acquire real control and finance its operations by means of bank borrowing followed by issues of stock and bonds Stop

Next steps contemplate very important mergers of companies known to Fisher Stop

As regards our holding North American we propose seeing Harrison Williams with a view to forcing them either to bid us a good price for bulk our holdings or give us an intimate position in all his operations which Emanuel believes might be very valuable to us all Stop

This policy of cooperation with O'Brien seems to us far wiser and safer than buying ourselves at a high price into the Byllesby position which even O'Brien seems not too happy about and far less cash will be required from us Stop

Should appreciate your prompt reaction on these ideas and authority if favorable to proceed with negotiations O'Brien Harrison Williams and immediate sale of above mentioned stocks Stop

Regards,

FRANK.

[From the files of Schroder Rockefeller & Co., Inc. Memorandum by Carlton P. Fuller]

GENERAL EVALUATION OF FUTURE PROSPECTS OF STANDARD GAS & ELECTRIC CORPORATION

FAVORABLE POINTS

1. Working capital position is reasonably satisfactory.
2. Depreciation has probably been adequate, although not generous.
3. Of the prior capitalization of the system, a fairly large amount (38%) is in preferred stock, allowing some elasticity by reducing preferred dividends before receivership is threatened; this is already being taken advantage of (bonds form 55% of total capitalization and common stock 7%).
4. If business improves without any serious inflationary period, a moderate increase in the system's gross will remedy most of the dangers.
5. In case of inflation there is a possible hedge in the $35,000,000 lock-up in Deep Rock Oil now in receivership.

From point of view of U. S. Electric Corporation:

- (a) An increase in gross for Standard Gas of only 5% would suffice to cover U. S. Electric's bank interest, if present costs, etc. were maintained.
- (b) There is considerable financing in the system to be counted upon and hitherto U. S. Electric has had a small participation in the profits of such issues.

UNFAVORABLE POINTS

1. $24,000,000 note maturity October 1st, 1935.
2. To take care of this maturity it will probably be necessary to offer some sweetening such as stock of the Duquesne Light Company which is the best asset of the system and would therefore dilute the earnings of the parent company.

3. 16% of the system's gross is from traction properties.

4. The parent company has practically no interest in its subsidiaries other than the common stock which bears the brunt of any reduction in rates, regulations, etc.

5. There is no fundamental diversification because the system depends so largely on the Philadelphia Company with its Duquesne Light properties in Pittsburg, which could be easily affected by a bad rate case, a steel strike, etc. (See table attached.)

6. The Philadelphia Company has one of the highest rates of return on investment of any utility in the country, which might well make it a subject of attack sooner or later.

7. The second largest subsidiary, in point of gross income, contributes only 2% of Standard Gas' income (Northern States Power).

8. A smaller, but steady and dependable subsidiary, Louisville Gas & Electric, may eventually suffer from the Tennessee Valley Development by the Government.

9. Income tax regulations eliminating consolidated returns may cut down Standard Gas' net because of its numerous subsidiaries.

10. An application for rate reduction is now being fought in the Northern States territory and a franchise dispute is under way in Minneapolis.

11. Unforeseeable cash demands may arise from subsidiaries which would impair the moderately satisfactory current position of the holding company.

Hydro your 503 quite understand paragraph

After careful thought we believe we should pass on to you for what they may be worth our views regarding whole problem stop Please consider these views entirely personal and confidential as hydro at present working with USEPCO group and to suggest any change in this policy would be extremely delicate stop Our specific points as follows stop One USEPCOS entire assets consist of Standard Power & Light shares pledged outright for overdue bank loans which are greatly undermargined stop Hence Hydros equity in USEPCO must today be considered nonexistent and acquisition Standard Power & Light shares from banks by Hydro and associates or by anybody else really involves altogether new operation Two we believe questionable whether Hydro justified in putting new money into such operation jointly with members USEPCO group along lines we understand being discussed stop One reason is that Standard Power & Light shares themselves represent highly pyramided equity so far removed from actual operating earnings that impossible foretell what their value may ever be stop Another reason is that we believe USEPCO group consists discordant interests with some extremely weak members and no real force or competence in utility field stop For Hydro to contribute substantially to rehabilitation USEPCO would we think probably be throwing good money after bad stop Three if Williams acquires control Standard Power & Light and Standard Gas he will not count on purchase these shares ever showing profit but will attempt reimburse himself by purchase underlying bonds of operating companies at substantial discounts and then improving position these bonds by far-reaching corporate economies under auspices North American management stop

Feel convinced Williams will not conclude deal unless he has free hand to clean house and put Standard Gas operating companies on basis comparable with those of North American system stop Four in our opinion Hydros only real chance of recouping Standard Gas losses would be to form financial alliance with really strong utility interest such as North American and proceed along above mentioned lines Five We do not say this is necessarily best way to employ Hydros free cash but we do feel sure it would be greatly preferable to trying build something out of USEPCOS dead timber paragraph

We feel impossible convey these views to Granbery or Hydro interests in present circumstances as to do so would probably destroy our usefulness with parties here stop However believe these considerations should carry weight with you and Gray as directors.

EXTRACT FROM MR. MOCARSKI'S LETTER NY 58 OF DECEMBER 17, 1934.

USEPCO

I presume you are fully posted about Granbery and Seagraves' negotiations in London and the fact that the bid made by Hydro (I think of $2,000,000) for the Usepco indebtedness with the New York banks, has been rejected by these banks. It seems further that the banks asked for an improved bid but the Directors of Hydro felt that there is absolutely no point in raising the figure without even an intimation of what the banks have in mind. The Directors felt that it now is up to the banks to name their figure, as a counter proposal to the Hydro's bid.

According to what I heard, Fisher fooled everyone and does not plan to die or retire; although not completely well, he attends to his job and J. H. S. & Co., are no more worried about the Hydro being put on their shoulders.

When I was in Brussels, both Madame Loewenstein and Bobby Loewenstein were away and I did not try to get exact information as to what would happen in case of Fisher's death, lest my inquiry would get around. I gathered definite impression however that in the case of his demise the Belgians, including van der Straaten, have quite definite ideas who should assume the management.

Hydro our 385

We have privately ascertained following from North American one. They feel strongly that attractiveness of Standard Power or Standard Gas Equity to themselves or anyone else depends entirely on comprehensive readjustments among operating companies. Stop. By that they mean not only operations in securities (mentioned our Schrodrive 385 point three) but also improvement whole structure by realignments operating companies increased efficiencies. Etc. Stop.

Two. Byllesby quite prepared work with North American subject only to exploring question whether combination would arouse political hostility. Stop.

Three. North American does not plan ignore Usepco but rather disposed work out something which would include themselves, Byllesby, the creditor banks, and Usepco group. Stop. They not certain whether really going ahead but may decide do so and foregoing represents their tentative views. Stop.

No objection your passing on these ideas in purely personal and informal way to Hydro. Stop. However please don't make this wire matter of record. Stop.

For our private information is there any news regarding Granbery conversations.

USEPCO

Emanuel believe that the Chase Bank, Chemical Bank and Guaranty Trust are prepared to sell for $3,000,000 their claim against USEPCO which is secured by that company's holdings of Standard Power & Light shares. He proposes to offer them $1,000,000 and thinks they might compromise at between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000. He proposes:

(a) A three party joint account for this transaction between himself, Leadenhall Securities and Hydro Electric. Having acquired the claim, he would foreclose and take title to the Standard Power & Light stock. He would then call a meeting of directors and principal stockholders of USEPCO and inform them that the shares of USEPCO were valueless, but he proposed to offer pro rata to each shareholder of USEPCO the right to buy from our syndicate all the Standard Power & Light shares, less a small number of commission shares, for the sum which we had paid for them. These Standard Power & Light shares are about 70% of the company and before making the offer to USEPCO shareholders, he would want the directors to confirm that our syndicate acquired the benefit of the existing contract allotting 75% of Standard Gas financing to the present finance group. Our syndicate would then be left with such shares of Standard Power & Light as USEPCO shareholders would not take up, and the right to 75% of Standard Gas financing.

The next step would be to confirm with the Byllesbys that their management contracts with Standard Gas were secure, and obtain their cooperation in liquidating Standard Power & Light, shareholders of which would receive their due proportion of Standard Gas & Electric shares, thereby turning our syndicate's investment into marketable securities.

Re: U. S. Electric.

Mr. JOHN L. SIMPSON,

17 Boulevard Haussmann, Paris, France.

DEAR JOHN: Jerry and I have just spent four hours with Robin and Victor Emanuel on this situation, and Robin has departed for the boat, escorted by Victor. He is extremely keen on the situation we have been discussing and will be having long talks in London about it as well as with you upon your return there, so that we thought you would like to have our own slant on the whole matter.

PROPOSAL

Emanuel proposes that we pay the banks $1,500,000 for their claim against Usepco. He will put up one-third of the money, Hydro is to be asked for one-third, and Robin hopes to line up other British interests for the rest. Robin originally had in mind Leadenhall for the other third, but now the plan is for Schrobancro and Leadenhall to go joint account in assuming any loss on the part of the British underwriters over 50%; i. e., a maximum of $500,000. It would be expected that the 75% of the Standard Gas system financing now controlled by the Usepco group would go 50% to Emanuel and 50% to Schrobancro, the latter contributing one-half of its net earnings therefrom to Leadenhall.

Upon acquisition of the banks' claims, the group would offer Usepco's holdings of Standard Power & Light to Usepco stockholders pro rata (the guess is that not over 50% would be taken up by Usepco stockholders, of whom the chief is Hydro.)

STRATEGY

Jerry has emphasized with Robin that the latter's chief object upon his return should be to convince Hydro and other prospective underwriters that the Standard Power & Light stock securing the bank loans is an attractive gamble at the present time, leaving the question of the financing well in the background in order that it may not appear that the scheme is designed to use other people's money for acquiring a position in the financing.

In New York, Emanuel has already sounded out the Chase Bank, who have been holding out for a $3,000,000 price for the claims but have come down to $2,000,000 so far. There is said to be possible competition in the offing, but a more immediate reason for some speed is that published figures of Standard Gas system so far have shown no upturn in net, whereas those to come out soon will begin to show a turn, which might influence the banks' ideas regarding the value of their own claims.

There are obviously two lines of major interest in this situation: the value of the security as a gamble, which is of greater interest to the prospective London participants; and the value of the prospective financing, which is of greater interest to the American parties to the deal. Let us look at each of them.

ATTRACTIVENESS OF PRICE AT WHICH STANDARD GAS COMMON IS TO BE ACQUIRED

Enclosed memoranda show the inter-corporate relationships and the assets of the various companies. (Robin Wilson is taking with him even more detailed memoranda just received from Emanuel.)

We can summarize by stating that the group's $1,500,000 would be equivalent to about 70¢ per share of Standard Gas & Electric common if the Standard Power & Light preferred can be eliminated by exchanging the holdings of Standard Gas preferred in its portfolio; if that is not possible and all the miscellaneous portfolio and cash has to be used to retire the Standard Power & Light preferred, then the Standard Gas & Electric common would cost the group $1.85 per share. As a guess, call the net cost $1.25 per share. This compares with the current market price around $6.00, at which price it has an activity of around 14,000 shares a week, so that conceivably the stock could be marketed if the group decided to liquidate.

Since Standard Power & Light's major asset is Standard Gas & Electric common, and since the former would probably be dissolved, the status of the latter is of paramount importance.

(a) Receivership.—A 77b action has been proceeding since the October 1st default, but the conditions of this receivership seem unusually lenient, with the Management left as sole Trustees, 70% of the maturing bonds now in the hands of the Committee representing the Management, and the opposing Protective Committees not too obstreperous. On the information Emanuel produces, it would not seem unlikely that the Company could be brought out of receivership in the near future.

(b) Earnings.—The Standard Gas system has been one of the last to show an upturn in net because a severe rate cut in Pittsburgh last Spring, together with tax increases, has offset improving gross. Recently figures, as yet unpublished, seem to show that the trend has changed, and it has been the experience with such pyramided set-ups that a change in trend brings a very rapid appreciation in all security prices.

In short, the gamble in Standard Gas & Electric stock would seem to be taken at a favorable point in the earnings trend, and at a price well below what the market currently sets as a valuation of future prospects.

FUTURE FINANCING

Since Jerry has written you separately regarding our prospects for doing underwriting, we'll simply assume here that we shall find a way to take advantage of such a situation as we are discussing. Once the group has acquired the claims from the banks, there will undoubtedly be terrifically bitter negotiations with the present Usepco group over the future division of financing. The idea is not to exclude them from it, but to swap with them participation in some of their financing. The plan is to leave the Byllesby management and interest in the situation undisturbed.

Emanuel calculates that the system should do $175,000,000 of financing in 1936. (It is hoped that the S. E. C. will not refuse to register the securities of an operating company, even though the holding company may not have registered under the Utilities Act.) He further figures that the system normally needs a minimum of $100,000,000 new financing per year.

The net which Schrobanco could realize from such a picture is, of course a guess, but, figuring an average spread of $2\frac{1}{2}$ points on the business, of which $1\frac{1}{4}$ would go to distributors and $\frac{1}{4}$ to expenses, there would be left one point, out of which $\frac{1}{4}$ would go to Byllesby, leaving $\frac{3}{4}$ to be split between Emanuel and Schrobanco. That would make Schrobanco's gross $\frac{3}{8}$, or \$652,500 on the prospective financing of \$175,000,000, leaving \$326,250 net after Leadenhall's half interest.

OUR POINT OF VIEW

We are not carried away by all these big figures, nor by Emanuel's eloquence, nor by Robin's enthusiasm. We are, however, definitely impressed by the possibility of getting into the middle of a very large picture with good gambling possibilities, on the basis of a moderate contingent commitment.

Is this prospective commitment really moderate? We certainly would not undertake such a contingent guarantee if it amounted to a million dollars maximum if the situation proves entirely worthless, and we should definitely prefer it to be only $100,000. Nevertheless, a $250,000 maximum commitment, especially when it begins to operate only after a 50% decline in the relatively low cost of acquisition, does not seem to us out of line with the possibilities in the situation. (These possibilities, of course, include deposits and fiscal agencies from the Standard Gas System and perhaps an underwriting commission in the form of Standard Power & Light shares at the time they are offered to Usepco shareholders.)

We have fully in mind, of course, the political pressure on utilities, the fact that Standard Gas may not get out of receivership as soon as Emanuel expects, the possibility that the banks may decide not to sell their claims at a sufficiently low price, the difficulties of making arrangements with the present Usepco group, the stickiness of some Standard Gas securities even if we control the financing, etc., etc. Nevertheless, we think there is a chance to make a good play here without any heavy commitment, and we hope that Robin will be able to produce some sort of bid from Hydro and others to be presented to the banks.

Very truly yours,

CARLTON P. FULLER.

Mr. JOHN L. SIMPSON,

Re: Usepco:

DEAR JOHN: Following your telephone call from Paris, with its news of the elimination of our rôle as guarantor, and therefore possibly of any rôle at all, we have been giving the subject a lot of thought. I should say renewed thought, because we are spending about half the time on the telephone with Victor Emanuel these days. In order to give you time to be mulling over the drift of our ideas, we cabled you to Berlin in accordance with the attached copy.

We decided not to get all hot and bothered about Pam's and Robin's neglect of Schrobanco interests, and not to try a major appeal to London to bring them into line. While it is obviously an occasion when Pam and Robin got carried away by the idea of doing a big business all by themselves and forgot about the general Schroder interests, we think we can get farther in the long run by sticking to our knitting without any major explosion.

Now just what is our knitting. Primarily we want to represent the Schroder-Hydro interest in this market, just as we would have long ago except for Fisher. If we can achieve that position, the rest ought to follow in due course, the rest being a position of responsibility in the councils of the companies involved, a share in the financing, and deposit and fiscal agency business.

It seems to us axiomatic that someone will have to spend a great deal of time on this situation on behalf of London interests, since it is one of the most complicated and Americanized situations in financial history. It is conceivable that Pam will want to exercise the rôle of Fisher, and that he will use Robin to come over frequently and transact Usepco business direct with other American parties. It is also conceivable that either one or both of them might use Emanuel as their American confidante.

We think, however, that we can become indispensable to them in the long run even though they may start off on the foregoing tack to begin with. During this initial tack, let us make every effort to prevent commitments' being made by Robin or anyone else.

(A) As for the financing, we should think we might eventually work out an arrangement to take over a certain portion of the London 47½% at some kind of step-up, say one-quarter. We know, for instance, that Byllesby frequently finds 25% too large a commitment for their purposes, so that they cede some to the other members of the group at an advance of one-quarter. Or, if we can establish our position sufficiently with the London group, it is conceivable that they might request us (B) to handle the entire arrangement of financing for their group, allocating them a certain percentage of the profits derived therefrom. It is obviously going to be very difficult for them to swap quid pro quo with other underwriting houses in this market unless they have someone on the spot to do it for them. We are sure they haven't any idea of the difficulties involved in that connection, but they will have a very concrete idea once the dog fights are on.

Emanuel, for example, told Robin that he doubted whether we could get more than 50% reciprocity from the members of the present group, because they have an established position in this picture, we will need them for distribution, etc. Emanuel is counting heavily on Schrobanco to back him up in these squabbles because, as he says, he and we have to live with these people in New York, while it is easy for the London people to sit back and take an arbitrary attitude. He is most anxious that the London interests give him and us leeway in making these reciprocal arrangements, not just sit back and demand a hundred percent monetary quid pro quo.

While we can easily see putting up $100,000 in the syndicate to achieve a position, we would be just as happy to have one of the foregoing A & B arrangements eventuate, because we don't think that the mere fact that London acquired their underwriting position by putting up the money means that the underwriting profits are going to flow to them as naturally as interest comes in from a bond. It is going to take a great deal of laborious working out, and during that process we ought to be able to work out our own position. Moreover, if we put up, say as much as $250,000, that would tend to freeze our participation in the emoluments at that ratio to the whole sum, which may or may not prove desirable. Perhaps we are rationalizing, but we are not too disturbed about being left out of the monetary contributions.

As for the bank accounts and fiscal agencies, you know how lucrative and important they can be. Moreover, they should be noncompetitive as far as London and Emanuel go.

In short, we are inclined to follow a policy of boring from within and not crashing the gate. We think it is most opportune that you should be there during the discussion. We would like definitely to get our representatives on the Boards of Holding and Hydro and Northeastern as soon as possible in order to help establish our position, even though we recognize that the whole background indicates slow haste in this respect. We were frankly disappointed in Pam's apathetic attitude on this subject in his letter to Beal, because we think it is important to establish our foothold as early as possible. Recognizing the difficulties, we think it would be worth making a real drive before you leave.

After the above discussion of philosophy, you may be interested to learn that Victor Emanuel is all in a sweat about how to proceed next in this situation after receiving approval of the $2,000,000 bid limit. The promptness of the action on the $2,000,000 really staggered him a bit and made him wonder if Robin had fully disclosed all the obstacles in the situation, such as the possibility of a long lock-up before Standard Power & Light stock can be reduced to possession on account of delays in registration of the stock; or the other possibility that Usepeco stockholders may take up Standard Power & Light stock and leave our group with only Hydro's 25% participation in hand, whereas real control of the financing depends on a 51% voting control of the Standard Power Board, which could then be obtained only through proxy solicitation, etc., etc. Emanuel (still believing that the London group will do all its underwriting in this situation through us as soon as we have set up a new vehicle) is trying definitely to tie Schrobancro into all these problems so that London will not place the entire blame on his shoulders if a fiasco results.

It is really a frightfully complicated situation, and both he and we are trying to avoid a denouement in which we would have lost the business and at the same time have antagonized all the present financial group. Equally, we wish to proceed so that our bid can't be used to raise that of some competitor. There is also the problem of possibly getting together with Harrison Williams.

All of which may lead you to conclude with us that the deal is far from done; but there is some money in hand now, and before the time this reaches you, another stage will probably have developed.

Since writing the above, more gyrations have occurred, and Emanuel has decided not to talk to the Chase today but sit down with us tomorrow to plan the campaign once more. Allen Dulles has called up to tell us a little more openly than previously that Harrison Williams is interested in the picture, so the kettle is boiling merrily, and probably Victor will approach the Chase on Monday.

Meantime Victor has showed us the cable which he received from London and which we relayed to you in Berlin, stating in effect that the London group had not made up its mind as to how to handle its share of the financing, but that it was inclined to utilize Schrobancro if we could arrange the proper set-up. We were delighted to see this unsolicited indication to an outside party, and thought that it rather confirmed our policy as outlined in this letter, but you will have further evidence on that point before many days go by after your return to London.

Very truly yours,

CARLTON P. FULLER.

DEAR CARL: I have now had a chance to read your draft of the cable to London in reply to their cable to you of the 14th, received by you on the 15th. I believe the cable is all right, except for the following suggestions:

1.-That a satisfactory arrangement be worked out as to how you handle the agreed percentage of any profits to be paid the London group, but I presume you have talked to Alan Dulles¹ about this.

(Handwritten:) Call up.

2.-Generally, in Standard Gas financing, the expenses are paid by the companies, except such small items as mailing. They do pay for all attorney and auditing fees, printing, and things of that sort, although this might not be important enough for you to change your cablegram.

3.-Where you comment at the bottom of the first page on trading selling group positions for underwritings in other situations, you might change this to read

"it might also trade selling group positions for underwriting or selling group positions in other situations".

(Handwritten:) No.

4.—In place of the second paragraph on page 2 of your cable, I would have the following to say: Some members of the so-called First Boston Syndicate now in the business would come along in the new deal at varying amounts, but as to First Boston itself, it would not have any legal or any other kind of position that would entitle them to stay in the business unless the group desired it, and as to the basis if the group did desire it, this would be subject to negotiation. They understand this situation, and normally, as you know, if anyone outside bought these loans, the entire present group would be out of the business, and they would have no legal or other means to hold to their position. In other words, there is no basis on which the First Boston Corporation, or anyone of the present group except Byllesby, could insist on the right to any future financing without compensation.

5.—The last statement in your cable is very conservative, as to Standard Gas financing, as all in all the underwriting group profit averages more than 1 point, which is the amount you have stated.

I do not know whether you want to say that the present USEPCO position of 75%, as a base for financing, is not covered by a legal agreement but by a memorandum, but that Byllesbys have verbally agreed with me, and will, I am certain, before we consummate a deal, agree to continue the memorandum to the new group, and that with this assurance, plus the position our stock would give us, there is no question in my¹ mind that our group could inherit the position the present group now has. This, of course, does not change what you have said as to valorizing this for the London group who might not want to participate direct in the financing. (Handwritten:) By our (feeling) I mean, of course, the present Usepcoc group as would not expect you to pass upon this.

On receipt of this would appreciate your telephoning me, as there are a few other things I would like to discuss with you.

With kind regards, I am

Yours very truly,

We ourselves believe London group should rely mostly on attraction of high leverage stock in recovery period with proceeds from financing as additional speculative attraction stop

Nevertheless latter source profits has definite potentialities even though considerable bargaining involved in realizing them stop

Assuming London group would not care underwrite and possibly take up large amount of each Stangas issue our idea would be they appoint central agent in New York such as J. Henry Schroder Inc. to handle their position stop

You understand selling group commissions are on account of actual distributing services and what we must attempt analyze for you is underwriting group commission which might be one point out of total two and one-half point spread if selling group were one and one-half stop

In large issues any central agent would presumably wish take only reasonable participation say 10% or 15% and would try to trade excess for participations in other financing stop

It might also trade selling group positions for underwriting in other situations stop

This whole bargaining process most difficult and London interests should not expect 100% quid pro quo in all cases as some underwriting must attach to selling group participations of large distributors stop

As basis estimating possible profits Emanuel guesses $175,000,000 Stangas system financing this year and normally $100,000,000 per annum stop. Taking latter figure and assuming 1% underwriting spread there would be $1,000,000 annual gross underwriting profits or $750,000 for Usepco Group stop

If London group has half interest in deal they and Central Agent would be entitled to $375,000 out of above stop

20% or thereabouts of all these underwriting profits might have to be used in connection with distribution but central agent would endeavor obtain corresponding positions in other financing groups in order offset give-ups to large distributors stop

Therefore Emanuel's estimate total financing would seem indicate annual profits available for division between London group and central agent of about $300,000 to $375,000 stop

Foregoing does not deal with legal situation reference retaining 75% of Stangas financing for which see our and Emanuel's cables to Pam Paris January 7th stop

Regarding present first Boston Syndicate we and Emanuel feel situation can be handled and they already appreciate necessity for changes

DEAR VICTOR, Thank you very much for your long and interesting letter of March 18th concerning Bobbie Loewenstein. He is back in England, although I have not seen him yet, but presume I shall shortly. Thank you for the nice things you said about me, although it sounds as if I shall have to work hard to live up to them!

As far as I know I shall be coming over to New York at the end of April or the beginning of May, and am very much looking forward to seeing you again.

The USEPCO deal seems to have gone completely to sleep for the moment, but I gather from Carl Fuller that you are being kept pretty well informed of the intentions of our competitors. If by any chance the deal does come off I feel that it will be a good thing for me to be in New York to represent our group in the negotiations over our share of underwriting.

As regards NORTH EASTERN WATER, I have not gone into the situation at all fully myself, but Simpson has gone on the Board to represent us, and I expect I will have a full report for me when I come over. So far as I can see the investment looks like turning out a very satisfactory one, as the Company is showing quite a nice increase in income.

Regarding FINANCE TRUST & AGENCY, you were asked to fill in a proxy because under the Articles of Association only shareholders can vote at meetings. I went to see Van der Straten about it, and have arranged to give him your proxy under my Power of Attorney, and he will vote at the meeting on 1st April (at which I shall be present) in accordance with my instructions.

There is no question of either your position or mine being prejudiced on account of the attitude we have taken up, and they quite understood that, as I was representing a shareholder on the other side of the Atlantic, it was quite right that I should attend the meeting on your behalf.

The whole group has done very little business since Fisher's death, and once Finance Trust is wound up the Group's security business will be concentrated with us.

Incidentally, I have already made some changes in Hydro's portfolio, and have passed orders for the bulk of them to you, including the purchase of some PACIFIC GAS and LOUISVILLE GAS.

Naturally we are only too glad to receive suggestions from you at any time for:

(a) Utility investments for HYDRO,
(b) High-yielding bonds or Preference shares for all the companies, but particularly for HYDRO, which has to keep an eye on its Preference dividend requirements, and

(c) Any American shares in which you think we can make some money.

Yours ever,

(Sgd) ROBIN.

Presumably difficulty/ies/ you mention are disclosure/s/ in prospectus of sub underwriters which you want to avoid Stop

Are there any others Stop

Before discussing details must remind you Hydro always have been promised participation in financing profits in same proportion as their commitments less of course special advantage/s/ given to leaders of group and others brought in for individual issues Stop

Further that such special advantages would be subject to bargaining so that groups would be recompensed for what they gave away by receiving participation in non Standard Gas & Electric Co. issues Stop

Would remind you also of Hydro's distrust & suspicion Stop To enable us form some judgment please cable.

Firstly. What is usual underwriting commission & specifically in Wisconsin underwriting.

Secondly. How much are American group members taking in Wisconsin issue.

Thirdly. Was 2,500,000 all you could get for English group Stop

We understand English group will be sub underwriter/s/ of this amount unless some other satisfactory arrangements concluded for instance as suggested at the end of this cable.

Fourthly. Have you arranged any quid pro quo with First Boston in return for all owing them to lead this issue.

Paragraph. We could certainly arrange with Hydro and others to accept less than theoretical percentage if all risk avoided although we understood underwriting and even selling syndicate now practically without any risk owing to new issue conditions but drop from point 375 to point one seems impossible to explain and we fear great difficulties Stop

As Usepco financing is real basis for constituting Schroder, Inc., would it not be better to offer English group 75% of Schroder, Inc's. profits derived from any source whatever Stop

This would avoid all possible arguments about subsidiary profits derived from compensation non Standard Gas & Electric Co. issues and be proposal we could press with every likelihood success.

Hydro being utility holding company precluded direct underwriting and I always warned them not expect to derive same profits from underwriting as American participants but told them they might hope to get five or six percent return on their investment stop This estimate was based on 37½ percent on ¾ percent net underwriting profit on $100,000,000 financing equals $280,000 stop

If half this retained by our group $140,000 equalled seven percent on $2,000,000 contemplated investment stop

One per mille would equal $6\frac{1}{2}$ percent on \$1,550,000 European participation and while obviously open discussion and later revision if it appears unfair to either side am definitely convinced

Alpha. That greatest proportion our claims to financing profits can be realized via Schroder Inc

Beta. More satisfactory relate our commission to volume Standard Gas financing than to Schroder Inc net profits as think latter might arouse much discussion and bad feeling stop

Am very doubtful whether any American underwriting house could realize point three seven five even though they work hard and assume risks stop Considerations to remember are

One. Part financing always reserved local and other houses recommended by issuing company

Two. Part our underwriting must be ceded to distributors especially in difficult issues stop

Very difficult for foreign underwriter like Leadenhall enforce reciprocity and Schroder Inc would have hard work to protect our interests

Three. There still is risk on underwriting because underwriting group must take commitment few hours before registration statement effective and selling group cannot be legally bound until registration effective

145 LEADENHALL STREET,
LONDON, E. C. 3, 24th August, 1936.

Messrs. SCHRODER ROCKEFELLER & Co. INC.,
48 Wall Street, New York.

DEAR SIRS, Following our various conversations in London, this is to confirm our understanding as follows:—

We understand that you are taking over from J. Henry Schroder Banking Corporation their interest in the amount of $200,000 in the purchase of notes of United States Electric Power Corporation secured largely by Common Stock of Standard Power & Light Corporation. We and certain British and Canadian interests for whom we are acting in this matter, have acquired an interest of $1,550,000 in the above purchase. For convenience we shall hereafter refer to the above-mentioned British and Canadian interests as the "London Interests."

As a result of this acquisition the London interests might hereafter be in a position to have a part in the financing of the so-called Standard Gas System through participation in the purchase, sale and syndication of securities issued by companies in this System. However, the undersigned, as Agent for the London interests duly authorised thereto, hereby agree that the London interests will not engage in such financial operations in the United States, and will use their best efforts to the end that Schroder Rockefeller & Co. Incorporated, shall enjoy all their interests in such financing, the present agreement being for the period and subject to the terms and conditions herein set forth:—

(1) You shall pay to us at our office in London as the Agent for the London interests, in consideration for this agreement $26,350 and hereafter and as long as this agreement shall be in force and effect, .125% of the total principal amount of securities covered by financing of the so-called Standard Gas System

(less your proportionate interest therein; namely, $\frac{200,000}{$1,750,000}$ of said .125%, resulting in a payment of .1107%). Such payments shall be made only with respect to financing of the Standard Gas System in which, in view of the London interests' and your relation to this situation as above indicated, you might have participated if you had desired to do so, and such payments shall be made even though you shall elect not to participate in such financing. Such payments shall be subject to proportional reduction in the case of any such financing where the underwriters' commission is less than one percent.

(2) We shall take no part, directly or indirectly, in the underwriting or disposition of the securities which you may underwrite, or any other activities in the United States in connection therewith, nor assume any responsibility, liability or commitment in connection therewith, it being understood that you shall be solely liable with respect to the total amount of your underwriting commitments without any recourse against us or any of the "London interests."

(3) This agreement and any rights, interests or obligations thereunder, shall be subject to termination at any time upon one month's prior written notice by you or by us.

Yours faithfully,

- 191,600 warrants Associated Gas & Electric Co.
- 12,100 warrants General Investment Corp.

for a cash consideration of $3,500,000, of which J. Henry Schroder Banking Corporation's interest is 50%, Bancamerica-Blair Corporation's interest is 25% and the other three firms mentioned have a total of 25%.

Bancamerica-Blair Corporation agreed to make available their interest in the Notes or collateral securing the Notes (for a period of 90 days after the consummation of the purchase and the acquisition of the Notes, at cost plus expenses) for an offering to the shareholders of the United States Electric Power Corporation. Inasmuch as the acquisition will be completed on June 1, 1936, the 90-day period expires on August 31, 1936.

United States Electric Power Corporation had an agreement with H. M. Byllesby & Co. which gave them a first call on 75% of the financing of the Standard Gas & Electric System. H. M. Byllesby & Co. agreed to continue this financing arrangement with the new group which purchased the Notes of the United States Electric Power Corporation, secured by Standard Power & Light Common Stock, from the three New York banks. The purchasers of the Notes agreed that their interest in this finance contract should be on the same percentage basis as their interest in the purchase of United States Electric Power Notes.¹ It was also agreed that inasmuch as Bancamerica-Blair Corporation had the largest American interest in the contract, they should have leadership in any future financing, but that Bancamerica-Blair's attitude would have to be flexible to the extent of recognizing public service commissions, the wishes of the operating company's management or anything for the good of the company on this question of leadership; also, if Schroder went into the investment business in this country, the purchase group should then give them consideration ahead of ¹(Handwritten in margin:) Recognizing that Schroder's interest obviously makes from the general point of view leaders of the group.

Bancamerica-Blair Corporation on the question of leadership. It was agreed by J. Henry Schroder Banking Corporation that if they gave up any of their position in the underwriting the other members of the purchase group should have first call on such position,¹ and that any offering of their position to outsiders would have to be made² [through] the house heading the business.³

It was also understood that Bancamerica-Blair Corporation would have the opportunity of being represented on the Board of Directors of the Standard Power & Light Corporation, the Standard Gas & Electric Co. and subsidiary companies on which any bankers in the purchase group are represented.

Sullivan & Cromwell have following comments your particular inquiries Quote As you realize this whole situation extremely complicated and precise answers would require very detailed study and in some cases view uncertainty situation could not be given in any event but following may be helpful Stop

One. Purchaser could foreclose loans and reduce Standard Power stock to possession but purchaser other than USEPCO might thereby lose certain non-transferable collateral veto powers which USEPCO as owner stock possesses Stop

Possibly this situation could be covered through prior arrangement Byllesby but complete answer would require extended research

Two. No legal objection to offer foreclosed stock by Hydro and Emanuel to shareholders USEPCO but this would presumably require registration Securities Act and consideration under Utilities Act parenthesis Emanuel considers registration easy since form already filed for Standard Gas debentures parentheses

Three. [Hearing on Standard Gas 77b Reorganization Plan adjourned yesterday for month Stop]

Impossible predict whether 77b plan can be put through prior determination status Utilities Act

Four. We are of opinion that Title I Utilities Act which applies to holding companies is unconstitutional and believe Supreme Court on basis cases already decided will so hold Stop

Five, six, and seven. We believe debenture holders still have some claim against Standard Power even though debentures assumed by Standard Gas stop Therefore dissolution Standard Power would be extremely difficult but situation might be met by merger of Standard Power and Standard Gas or by Standard Gas offering exchange its own securities both for assumed debentures and for Standard Power preferred unquote

Eight. They consider contractual control of financing unfeasible and undesirable but agree with Emanuel that real source of control would be Hydro's holdings and the majority on the directorate plus an agreement and good relations with Byllesby paragraph

Due to strong utilities market Standard Power & Light Portfolio has increased in value over $3,000,000 since figures given Wilson and common stock now quoted $4¼ instead of $2 which emphasizes Emanuel's cabled suggestion of $2,000,000 limit in dealing with banks

Re: Mr. Crispell's Comments on Byllesby-UsepcO Agreement.

Mr. Crispell was very cautious and reserved because he has commitments to so many interests in this situation and he would not discuss the terms of the agreements at all without clearing with all his principals, who include others besides Victor Emanuel. I told him if it became necessary to get an official opinion from Sullivan & Cromwell, we might later approach him to get a clearance, but for the time being our telephone conversation would suffice.

He says that the two gentlemen's agreements are not legally binding, as we already understand, but that they have worked perfectly and will continue to do so as long as they are between people who have confidence in each other and who wish to play ball. In general such agreements have been difficult to enforce, although he can conceive of such an agreement's being made and being enforced if based upon a definite long-term program of specific financing. However, since the latter would involve the question of price which obviously can not be set long in advance, as a practical matter it is difficult to see how such a contract could actually be drawn up in practice.

The charter and by-law provisions of Standard Power and Standard Gas are presumably legal documents, which would stand regardless of the position of U. S. Electric, but some outside lawyers have questioned even that situation.

CPF/JS

EXHIBIT No. 1969

[From the Files of Schroder Rockefeller & Co., Inc. Memorandum by C. P. Fuller]

BYLLESBY-USEPCO AGREEMENTS

Upon the formation of U. S. Electric Power Corporation, three agreements were entered into between H. M. Byllesby & Co. and Usepco, copies of which were in Mr. Fisher's possession. Only one of these is considered a legally enforceable, signed contract, under which Byllesby gives Usepco an option on its holdings of Standard Power & Light stock in case Byllesby wishes to sell. It includes a provision that if Usepco declines at the price offered, and Byllesby sells elsewhere, then Byllesby will execute an irrevocable proxy for the shares to Usepco.

The other two documents are merely gentlemen's agreements with no binding force in law, which was understood at the time of their negotiation. The one called the "Dividend Agreement" is signed by the parties and obligates them to confer on dividend policy, awards 50% of the system's bank deposits and all fiscal agency functions to Usepco's nominees, covers publicity, public relations, etc.

The other, called the "Financial Agreement", is merely initialed. It is this agreement which divides the financing 75% to Usepco and 25% to Byllesby, with certain other provisions.

While arrangements as to Standard Gas financing are thus not on a legally enforceable basis, they have worked without difficulty since 1929 and are similar to many other such arrangements, all of which operate as long as the parties thereto are reliable.

While Sullivan & Cromwell have not rendered an official opinion on the validity of these agreements (such an opinion would probably follow the above lines), they agree that they have worked effectively during their existence.

There is some dispute as to whether the agreements would become the property of any successor to Usepco in the event of the latter's dissolution, but there seems some weight of authority indicating that they would not, and therefore an agreement with Byllesby is an important consideration in any negotiations regarding the future of Standard Gas financing. Mr. Emanuel claims to have a thorough understanding with Byllesby.

Obviously no deal should be completed until undertakings covering the financing are completed in form satisfactory to all parties. Such undertakings can probably not be set up in legally binding form, but can be made on a workable basis as in the past.

EXHIBIT No. 1970

[From the Files of Schroder Rockefeller & Co., Inc. Letter from J. L. Simpson to Frank Common]

Confidential

MARCH 13, 1936.

FRANK COMMON, Esq.,

Messrs. Brown, Montgomery & McMichael, Royal Bank Building, Montreal, Canada.

DEAR FRANK: During the conversation Jerry and I had with you the evening you were here, you raised three points particularly regarding the Usepco deal:

1) The legality of the contractual arrangements with Byllesby.

We have gone into this question carefully, both with Sullivan & Cromwell and Victor Emanuel, and Carl Fuller has prepared a memorandum as of today's date which sets forth the position. It confirms your view that the financial agreement is not legally binding. On the other hand Victor Emanuel feels strongly that the agreement has moral force, has in the past been adhered to, and is playing a role in the present negotiations. By this last I mean that he states that all parties concerned, including Byllesby, Harrison Williams and the banks, recognize the force of the Byllesby-Usepco financial agreement. He contends that everybody feels Usepco's position in this respect is strong enough so that account must be taken of it, and that Byllesby have taken this attitude with all parties concerned.

You will note that copies of the three agreements are reported to be in Hydro's possession (or among Fisher's effects). Through Emanuel we have obtained access to these agreements on a strictly confidential basis. As this has only happened today, we have not had time to make a thorough scrutiny of the provisions, but shall do so promptly and if we discover anything to amend or amplify the present information we shall of course advise you.

In any event, Carl's memorandum summarizes a number of detailed conversations with Crispell of Sullivan & Cromwell and Victor Emanuel, and I believe it answers your question.

2) The possibility of an outside utility opinion regarding the business merits of the proposed deal.

Jerry and Carl and I have discussed this matter at very considerable length. We recognize thoroughly the merit of your view as to the desirability of obtaining all the backing possible to any recommendation which may be made to the Hydro Board. However, it is really difficult to see just how the point can be met satisfactorily. If one went to a financial house, such as the name you mentioned, their interest in dealing with the matter could surely be obtained only by giving them a major position. That would presumably be irreconcilable with the retention of a sufficient interest by the present Usepco group, including Hydro.

We have considered utility operators such as Stone & Webster, for instance. Two objections present themselves. Anybody of substance has financial connections and bringing any such party into the picture would almost certainly lead to further complications. Furthermore the elements of uncertainty in the deal are to such a large extent political, legal and financial that there is a great question as to the value of outside utility advice. As a matter of fact, Langley is really quite a prominent figure in the American utility business, and while Victor Emanuel does not represent any powerful interest, he is undoubtedly an able and experienced man.

Of course if we should end by forming some combination with Harrison Williams, there is no doubt that his views regarding the property values would be of great interest.

If you have any further thoughts on this phase of the matter, I hope you will communicate them freely. It is certainly a very important question and your fundamental point of view is one with which we here completely sympathize. We too would like to have something to back up any views which we may ultimately formulate and express; but the problem seems to be as outlined above.

(3) The relations between Hydro and the other members of the Usepco group.

Your point was that the contemplated transaction should represent an entirely new deal, and that any rights and benefits should be distributed among the members of the group in proportion to the new financial commitments undertaken, regardless of any precedents created in the past.

There is no question in our minds that you are 100% right in this position. We have had it in mind all along, and I think Victor Emanuel quite accepts that point of view. However, I am glad you re-emphasized it, and you need have no doubt that that is the position which we shall maintain if and when the negotiations come to a head.

The present situation is that both Harrison Williams and Heinemann are negotiating with the banks and Byllesby. Victor Emanuel apparently is informed of everything which goes on in both quarters. He tells us that both Williams and Heinemann recognize that if they do succeed in working out anything, they will have to deal with the Usepco group. In the meantime Standard Power & Light common was quoted today at 2½-3¼, and Standard Gas & Electric common closed at 7¼-7¾. It may be that Victor will still have an opportunity to engineer his own deal with the banks. If that should happen, we shall all have to decide what to do about putting it up to Hydro.

I think that gives you a summary of the situation to date and shall not fail to let you know of any developments of importance.

With very best regards,
Sincerely,

P. S. Regarding Grace and Northeastern, we wired London asking them whether Hydro has any general interest in increasing its holdings of Northeastern common or preferred. Grace was in today, and Carl Fuller and I had a chat with him. We told him that if there is any interest in the situation we shall certainly consider the possibility of dealing with him. He is of course quite a small dealer, but quite knowledgeable and may be of use.

Total amount income to new holding company-----	$21,935,000

In explanation of certain of the above items of income, I would make the following comment:

Management and engineering earnings would not necessarily be so termed. These earnings would have to come from the respective holding companies we purchase, and not from their operating properties—except possibly in the case of the American Water Works and Electric Company, Inc.

The one per cent income on the total par value of securities issued per annum would be paid into a new holding company, probably by the bankers themselves.

The $3,500,000 that would inure to the new company due to savings in operating is a most conservative figure. It would take a long time and a most careful study to estimate the total amount of savings that could be made under one combined operation of these three large holding companies, but to give only a rough idea of the possibilities the following can be considered:

The American Water Works & Electric Company, Inc. and the National Electric Power Company maintain large central operating and management offices in New York City, while the Middle West Utilities Company and the Standard Gas & Electric Company have similar organizations in Chicago. These four very large organizations would be combined into one new organization with a tremendous saving, not only in salaries, but in rent and all other items that go into the cost of large central offices.

From my knowledge of the situations, I would say that the minimum amount we could save would be $5,000,000 per annum. As another example, the properties of these companies are contiguous in many localities. Dozens of operating offices could be merged, probably into five large groups, which would lend itself to efficient and economical management. These groups would be in charge of the best men available and would mean the elimination of any number of separate operating organizations in the field. Also, they could take more power than they now enjoy, and management could be de-centralized to a large extent from home offices and put on the properties themselves, due to the fact that on the large situations that would result, each of the groups could maintain a sufficient staff headed by high calibre men. This should save at least $5,000,000, which is a conservative figure.

There are literally so many savings to be made, that it would be very difficult to recount them all, but the savings in taxes, insurance, and all overhead charges would be enormous.

The combined purchasing power of this situation would insure cheaper purchases than ever, and more important than all, these properties lend themselves in great measure to inter-connection which would eliminate an untold amount of future construction requirements for power generation and reserve supplies. The Pennsylvania, Virginia, West Virginia, and Maryland situation alone would represent huge savings in interest charges, depreciation and maintenance per year, to say nothing of a far lower cost in the production of electricity.

There is not time for me now to go into the details of such savings, but anyone having even a remote knowledge of public utility operation can, with one look at a map showing the combined lay-out of these properties, understand what a tremendous amount these savings will mean. It is my belief that instead of a $10,000,000 saving, this figure can easily be doubled.

The question may be asked here why more than $3,500,000 of this $10,000,000 saving does not inure to the new corporation. The reason is that the new company would own only one-sixth of the common stock of the Standard Gas & Electric Company, and fifty-one per cent of the stock of the Middle West Utilities Company and the American Water Works & Electric Company, Inc. The balance of $6,500,000 would inure to the other stockholders in these three companies, and could only be earned in greater proportion by us if we increased our stock holdings in these three situations beyond the necessary control.

Financial situation

If the stocks of the three companies discussed in this memorandum could be purchased at the price estimated, our total cost would be about $137,000,000. The income on this investment, as set forth above, would be about $22,000,000 per annum. This would represent an over-all return of sixteen per cent on the investment. It is very important here to bring out the fact that it is after depreciation and all prior charges. This should be particularly noted.

A few days ago we discussed a rough plan of financing which provided that thirty five per cent of the amount needed should be raised in debentures of the new holding company, and twenty five per cent in preferred stock. From the figures I am giving you below, it is obviously not the right set-up.

If we wanted to raise thirty five per cent of the necessary amount in debentures, this would mean that it would be necessary for us to raise $47,950,000. Assuming that five per cent debentures could be sold to the public at 96, for which the bankers would pay the company 94, this would require $51,000,000 of debentures. The annual interest charges on these debentures would be $2,550,000 and the interest charges would be earned 8.36 times after all prior charges. It is quite obvious that any such small amount of debentures would be foolish.

It might be stated here that a part of our earnings will be due to certain management and engineering charges and also to certain savings to be made. However, giving effect to having these controls and combining them in one new holding company, it would not be difficult to obtain an audit from certified public accountants giving earnings set-up as outlined above; this was done in the case of the National Electric Power Company and it has been done in many of the largest and most important companies in this country. The management and engineering fees are on the basis of contract and the savings could be shown as soon as the operating and management affairs were combined, so I know such a certificate could be obtained by giving effect to these two matters taking place.

We had planned to issue twenty-five per cent of the amount necessary in preferred stock. This would require the raising of $34,250,000. Assuming that six per cent preferred stock would sell to the public at 97 and to the bankers at, say, 93, this would require $36,825,000 of preferred stock on which the annual dividend requirements would be $2,201,500. For this we would have available earnings of $19,450,000 (which is the balance or earnings available after paying interest charges on the debentures). This amount, for the dividend charges, would be earned 8.85 times. Here again it is quite apparent that the amount of preferred stock we have assumed is far too low. In fact, the combined interest and preferred stock dividend would be earned over 5 times, and in this market it would not even be necessary for the combined charges to be earned twice.

It is quite apparent now that the entire purchase price could be financed in debenture bonds and preferred stock, if we were so minded. This is, of course, always providing that these combined controls could be purchased for $137,000,000.

Two other plans present themselves to me, based upon a purchase price of $137,000,000, which I am giving briefly below:

Sell $75,000,000 debentures at 94, net to the company, (Interest on these bonds would be earned 5.9 times)-----	$70, 500, 000
Sell $50,000,000 6% preferred stock at 93, net to the company (dividends on this stock would be earned 6 times)-----	46, 500, 000
TOTAL AMOUNT RAISED -----	$117, 000, 000
Amount still to be raised-----	$20, 000, 000
For this $20,000,000 still to be raised, we would have available earnings after interest and dividend charges on the above securities of-----	$15, 250, 000 which would represent a return of 76¼% per annum on the money to be raised.

It is quite obvious that anyone of a dozen plans could be used to raise this money. If, for instance, we issue 5,000,000 shares of common stock, the earnings available per share would be $3.45 per annum. Common stocks of this character can readily be sold in the present market on a ten per cent accrued earnings basis, but even if we doubled this amount and sold this stock on the basis of twenty per cent accrued earnings available for dividends, we could then put a valuation on this stock of $17.25 per share, and out of the 5,000,000 shares available we would have to sell only 1,160,000 shares at $17.25 per share to raise the $20,000,000 necessary—and this stock would show an accrued earning basis of twenty per cent per annum. This would leave us with the remaining 3,840,000 shares at no cost whatsoever and on which available earnings would be $13,248,000 per annum.

As aforesaid, the entire amount necessary could be raised in bonds and preferred stock and we will have a good showing, but the facts in the matter are that we could afford, if necessary, to pay a great deal more than $137,000,000 for these controls, or, if necessary, we could forego making some of the charges above estimated.

It is far too early now, anyway, to make any financial plans, and I have only given these to show what could be done on the basis we have in mind.

There are two matters in this situation which are of the utmost importance. One is the legality of the issuance of the 1,000,000 shares of $1 per share par value six per cent non-cumulative preferred stock of the Standard Gas and Electric Company. The second is, whether, if we desire, we can impose the management and engineering charges (or a combination of charges) on the Standard Gas and Electric Company and the Middle West Utilities Company situations, inasmuch as these holding companies are already making such charges to their operating subsidiaries. These charges, of course, would not be superimposed on the subsidiary companies, but on the holding companies and I cannot see how anyone could possibly complain unless perhaps it would be the minority stockholders of these companies. I do not feel that they would have any legal right to object, but this point would have to be studied carefully. In any event, with the savings that could be made through the operation of these situations combined as one, the earnings per share that would accrue to these stockholders would be far greater than the charges we impose, so that an actual improvement in their position should result. This problem does not present itself in the case of the American Water Works and Electric Company, Inc.

Notwithstanding the fact that the entire transaction might be financed out for $137,000,000, provided we could purchase the controls above outlined, I agree with Captain Loewenstein that it would be good policy for us to have some amount of actual cash in the equity.

Nowhere in this memorandum have I discussed the many advantages that would inure to the bankers in this situation. I have thought this was too apparent to make any comment; it is sufficient to say, however, that they would be assured of an immense amount of prime public utility securities each year that would be purchased from friendly hands, and that their position in the situation would be even more attractive than that of the operators.

F. Godber, Esq.

St. Helens Court, Leadenhall Street, London, E. C. 3, England.

Dear Mr. Godber:—

SHELL UNION FUNDS

Referring to my letter of May 29th, our banking friends (Hayden, Stone and Lee, Higginson) advise me that they think they could raise up to $60,000,000 at the terms mentioned in my letter of the 29th.

As regards the warrants, they think these should contain an option to purchase 30 Shell Union Shares at $15 per share for three years and at $17.50 per share for another three years.

(Handwritten on margin:) A. C. Allyn & Co., 20 Exchange Place.

It may also interest you that I have been approached by a banking syndicate consisting of Lehman Bros., Speyer & Co. and the firm of Solomon Bros. & Hutsler,¹ who are very anxious to make us a bid. At the proper time I think they would be prepared to make an offer, which of course should be confidential and not to be disclosed to any competitive bankers, at a fixed price with their right to cancel at a penalty of say $100,000, if not prepared to go forward with the deal. As you know, all bankers at the present time are very hesitant to make definite commitments as to price at the time the deal is negotiated, and only wish to be definitely bound some three or four days before the issue is possible after having received the approval of the Securities Exchange Commission. If, in that case, the market has gone down and the bankers would not think it possible to proceed with the deal, the syndicate I spoke of are prepared to pay a forfeiture.

Yours very truly,

MY DEAR MR. VAN ECK: I had a talk with Mr. van der Woude this morning and he tells me there is nothing new in regard to the refinancing. I understand Mr. van der Woude has continued the discussions in New York with Dillon Read but they are not yet in a position to make any offer.

You have, no doubt, noticed in the morning paper that Mr. Ames, of the Texas Company, passed away yesterday—apparently of heart failure.

I wish you and Mrs. van Eck and family a very pleasant trip, and I am looking forward to seeing you in New York on Friday.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16th, 1935.

SHELL UNION OIL CORPORATION,

50 West 50th Street, New York City.

DEAR SIRS: You have informed us that you are preparing a registration statement and a prospectus for an issue of $50,000,000 3½% Fifteen-Year Debentures of your Company to refund your outstanding Twenty-Year Sinking Fund Debentures due May 1, 1947 and to provide additional working capital.

The new Debentures are to be entitled to the benefit of a cash sinking fund of $1,000,000 for the first year, the amount of such sinking fund to increase by $100,000 for each year thereafter until it reaches the amount of $1,500,000 per annum. The sinking fund money is to be used to purchase Debentures if obtainable at or below the principal amount and accrued interest, unexpended balances to revert to your Company.

The call price of the new Debentures is to be 102½% of the principal amount plus accrued interest for the first five years of their life, decreasing by ½ of 1% during each two-year period thereafter until the call price reaches the principal amount of the Debentures.

We understand that you are prepared to sell the issue at a price of 97% of the principal amount, plus accrued interest. This price does not take into consideration the expenses to be borne by your Company in connection with the financing including the fees and disbursements of counsel and other experts and travelling, telephone, telegraph and other similar out-of-pocket expenses (except selling expenses) of the underwriters.

We have informed you that we are ready to proceed with our investigation in the belief that we will be able, together with the other members of an underwriting group to be formed, of which we would be the Managers, to purchase this issue at the price mentioned above subject to the following conditions:

1. That upon completion of our investigation of your Company and its business we are satisfied to proceed with the financing.

2. That a contract between the several members of the underwriting group and your Company be entered into a few days prior to the effective date of the registration statement, containing terms and provisions satisfactory to your Company and to us including, among others, provisions for the approval of legal matters by our counsel, the registration of the new Debentures under the Securities Act of 1933, as amended, and the existence of market conditions satisfactory to us at the time of purchase.

3. That the indenture under which the new Debentures are to be issued shall be in form and substance satisfactory to us.

It is understood that this letter is not to be construed as a commitment, either legal or moral, on our part or on the part of your Company.

Your confidential 12 essential to have bankers concur in form of registration statement which must include copies of indenture and prospectus stop The act requires minimum 20 day waiting period between date application filed and date of issue therefore bankers insist on out clause from time of making offer described in prospectus until near end of waiting period stop Usual practice is to file amendment containing terms about two days before effective date of issue stop Definite commitment by bankers generally not more than 24 or in some cases 48 hours before date of issue full stop

Dillon Read has suggested following bankers out clause quote if any change shall have taken place in the condition of oil companies generally such as a decrease in the price of crude oil or a price war in important marketing territories or if any adverse change shall have taken place in the condition of Shell Union Oil Corp or if the demand for securities of oil companies in general or of Shell Union Oil Corp. in particular shall have declined or if the demand for high-grade bonds in general shall have declined and if any or all of such changes in the judgment of Dillon Read and Co. have been so substantial as to render the completion of the contemplated public sale of the debentures at blank percent and accrued interest impracticable or inadvisable Dillon Read & Co may cancel their obligations and those of the other underwriters under this agreement by notifying the company unquote full stop

O. L. ALTMAN, Esq.,
Securities and Exchange Commission,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. ALTMAN: In accordance with our telephone conversation of yesterday morning, I am enclosing herewith three photostatic copies of the accounts in connection with $60,000,000 Shell Union Oil Corporation Fifteen-Year 3½% Debentures, due March 1, 1951, which you requested, as follows:

1. Dillon, Read & Co. Purchase Account
2. Dillon, Read & Co. Sales Account
3. Purchase Account No. 2, being the account which reflects transactions effected by Dillon, Read & Co. and Hayden, Stone & Co. pursuant to authorization from the underwriters.

The last-named account is designated on our books as "Purchase Account No. 2" merely to distinguish it from the accounts which reflect the several purchases by Dillon, Read & Co. and the other underwriters of the issue from the Company.

We call your attention to the fact that the dates appearing in the left-hand columns are the dates on which deliveries of the respective securities were made.

Also, in accordance with your request, I am enclosing one printed copy of the agreement dated March 7, 1936, between Dillon, Read & Co. and Hayden Stone and each of the underwriters and of the agreement dated March 10, 1936 pursuant to which Dillon, Read & Co. and Hayden, Stone & Co. were authorized to make purchases and sales for the accounts of the several underwriters. The transactions effective pursuant to the agreement of March 10, 1936 are the ones reflected in #3 above.

Yours very truly,

WILBUR C. DuBOIS.

$60,000,000 SHELL UNION OIL CORPORATION FIFTEEN-YEAR 3½% DEBENTURES

DUE MARCH 1, 1951

NEW YORK, March 7, 1936.

DEAR SIRS: 1. Shell Union Oil Corporation (hereinafter called the "Company") proposes to issue $60,000,000 principal amount of its Fifteen-Year 3½% Debentures, due March 1, 1951 (hereinafter called the "Debentures"). The Debentures are more particularly described in the Registration Statement relating thereto, in which, with your consent, you have been named as one of the principal underwriters. The Registration Statement was filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission on February 18, 1936 and certain amendments have been and are to be filed. Copies of the Registration Statement and the Prospectus, as initially filed and as amended, have previously been sent to you. The Registration Statement in the form in which it shall finally become effective and the Prospectus in its final form are herein respectively referred to as the "Registration Statement" and the "Prospectus". The Registration Statement cannot become effective before March 9, 1936 at the earliest. After we are advised that the Registration Statement has become effective, we shall so notify you.

2. Reference is made to the agreement (hereinafter called the "Underwriting Agreement") between the Company and the several principal underwriters (hereinafter called the "Underwriters") named therein, which is being executed substantially simultaneously with the execution of this agreement. The names of the several Underwriters and the extent of their several commitments are set forth in the Underwriting Agreement. Dillon, Read & Co. and Hayden, Stone & Co. (hereinafter for convenience collectively referred to as "Representatives") will act on behalf of the Underwriters under this agreement with the powers herein provided for.

3. It is expected that the first offering of the Debentures will take place on such date, not later than March 11, 1936, as shall be determined by the Representatives. In connection with such offering, it is proposed that a Selling Group be formed after the Registration Statement shall become effective, the respective members of which are to purchase from the several Underwriters such aggregate amount of Debentures as shall not be retained by the several Underwriters as hereinafter provided. There is attached hereto a form of preliminary covering letter which has been sent to the proposed members of the Selling Group, together with a preliminary copy of the Selling Group letter. The investment bankers and possibly others to be invited to become members of the Selling Group, the respective amounts of Debentures to be offered to such Selling Group members and the other terms and provisions of the Selling Group are to be determined by the Representatives. Dillon, Read & Co. and Hayden, Stone & Co. are to be the Managers of the Selling Group.

4. Each of the Underwriters may retain such portion of the amount of Debentures which such Underwriter purchases from the Company as the Representatives shall determine, and each of the Underwriters authorizes the Representatives to include all Debentures not so retained in the amount of Debentures with respect to which the Selling Group is proposed to be formed. Debentures so retained by any Underwriter may be sold, after the Registration Statement becomes effective, by such Underwriter during the life of the Selling Group, only on the terms of the Selling Group letter, and with respect to such retained Debentures such Underwriter shall be bound by such terms, including the terms relating to concessions, reallowances, and withholding of concessions in the event of any purchase of such retained Debentures by the Representatives in accordance with paragraph 9 of the Selling Group letter, as fully as if he had signed the Selling Group letter for the amount of such retained Debentures. In case the members of the Selling Group shall not take up and pay for the entire portion of the issue of Debentures with respect to which the Selling Group is proposed to be formed, each of the Underwriters shall be severally liable for Debentures not so taken up and paid for by Selling Group members, in the proportion which the amount of Debentures purchased by such underwriter from the Company (after deducting the amount of Debentures retained by him as aforesaid) shall bear to the total amount of the issue of Debentures (after deducting the total amount of Debentures so retained by all Underwriters).

After receipt of telegraphic or written announcement from the Selling Group Managers that the Selling Group books have been closed, members of the Selling Group and Underwriters will have the privilege of purchasing and selling Debentures among themselves at the public offering price, less all or any part of the Selling Group concession of $1\frac{1}{4}\%$, as more fully set forth in the Selling Group letter.

5. The price to be paid to the Company for the Debentures by the several Underwriters is set forth in the Underwriting Agreement. On the terms and conditions set forth in the Underwriting Agreement, you are obligated on the "date of purchase", as defined in the Underwriting Agreement, to take up and pay for the Debentures to be purchased by you thereunder, and you accordingly agree by acceptance hereof to have a certified check in New York funds or a New York Clearing House bank cashier's check, drawn to the order of Shell Union Oil Corporation, for the purchase price of the Debentures to be purchased by you, delivered to Dillon, Read & Co., against its receipt, at or before 9:15 a. m., Eastern Standard Time, on said date. By acceptance hereof you authorize Dillon, Read & Co. for your account to accept delivery of the Debentures from the Company, against delivery of the above-mentioned check to the order of the Company, and to give a receipt for such Debentures. Dillon, Read & Co., on behalf of the Representatives, will make all deliveries to Selling Group members, and, on the date of purchase, will deliver to you or your agent, against receipt, the amount of Debentures retained by you in accordance with paragraph 4 above. At the close of business on the date of purchase, Dillon, Read & Co., on behalf of the Representatives, will pay to you an amount equal to 97% and accrued interest with respect to the principal amount of Debentures not retained by you but offered on your behalf to members of the Selling Group; provided, however, that in the event all of such Debentures have not been sold to, and paid for by, Selling Group members, Dillon, Read & Co., on behalf of the Representatives, reserve the right to deliver to you for carrying purposes Debentures (on the basis of 97¼% and accrued interest, representing the offering price less the Selling Group concession) in lieu of all or part of such payment. Debentures so delivered shall, during the life of this agreement, be held by you for carrying purposes only, subject to the direction of the Representatives, and none thereof shall be sold without the written consent of the Representatives.

By acceptance hereof, you hereby authorize Dillon, Read & Co. (without in any way obligating the latter so to do), in the event your check, mentioned above, to the order of Shell Union Oil Corporation does not reach Dillon, Read & Co. by the time stated, to arrange a loan for your account for the amount for which your check should have been received, and to pledge therefor the Debentures purchased by you, all upon such terms and conditions as Dillon, Read & Co., as your representative, may determine, and further authorize Dillon, Read & Co., for your account, to pay the proceeds of such loan to Shell Union Oil Corporation in payment for such Debentures. You agree in such event to pay the amount so borrowed to Dillon, Read & Co. in liquidation of the loan prior to the close of business on the same day, and any deliveries or payment due you hereunder are conditioned on prior repayment of such loan. Notice received by Dillon, Read & Co. from you cancelling your agreement, in accordance with the provisions of subparagraph (e) or subparagraph (f) of Section 13, or of Section 14, of the Underwriting Agreement, will serve to withdraw the above authorization to borrow on your behalf.

6. You agree that, in the purchase and sale of the Debentures, you will comply with all the requirements of the Federal Securities Act of 1933, as amended, and any applicable requirements of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.

7. You will pay your own direct selling expenses, including transfer taxes, and will pay the fees and expenses of any counsel who may have been separately retained by you in connection with the issue. All other expenses not paid by the Company in connection with the organization of the Selling Group and the purchase and distribution of the Debentures shall be charged to the Underwriters in proportion to their Underwriting Agreement commitment, except that expenses of not to exceed ¼ of 1% may be charged against the members of the Selling Group as provided in the attached Selling Group letter and against the Underwriters who shall have retained Debentures under the provisions of paragraph 4 above or shall have taken up Debentures for carrying purposes under the provisions of paragraph 5 above, such expenses to be distributed in proportion to the Debentures purchased by such members of the Selling Group or retained and/or so taken up by such Underwriters, as the case may be.

8. The terms and provisions of this Agreement shall terminate at the close of business on May 8, 1936, unless sooner terminated by the Representatives or unless extended with the consent of Underwriters who have purchased from the Company 75% of the issue of Debentures. The Representatives may terminate this agreement, whether or not extended, at any time without notice. As promptly as possible after termination of this agreement, the net credit or debit balance in the account of each Underwriter shall be paid to or collected from each of the Underwriters. Notwithstanding any such payments or collections, you shall still be liable for your proportionate share of any expenses chargeable to Underwriters (in accordance with paragraph 7 above) and which may not have been taken into account in determining the amount of such payments or collections, and you shall also be liable for your proportionate share of any tax in the event any tax may from time to time be assessed against you and the other Underwriters as a group.

9. Upon receipt by Dillon, Read & Co. of any notice given pursuant to subparagraph (e) or subparagraph (f) of Section 13 of the Underwriting Agreement from any Underwriter cancelling its agreement under the Underwriting Agreement, as permitted by said subparagraphs, or in the event that Dillon Read &

Co. shall cancel its agreement under the Underwriting Agreement as permitted by said subparagraphs, Dillon, Read & Co. shall forthwith notify the other Underwriters by telegram of such cancellation.

10. Default by any one or more of the Underwriters with respect to their several obligations hereunder shall not release you or any of the other Underwriters from your or their several obligations hereunder.

11. Determination, apportionment and distribution by the Representatives of profits, losses and expenses shall be conclusive upon the Underwriters. The Representatives shall not be accountable for any interest on funds of any Underwriter at any time in the hands of Dillon, Read & Co.

12. As Representatives of the Underwriters, Dillon, Read & Co. and Hayden, Stone & Co. shall have full authority to take such action as they may deem advisable in respect of all matters pertaining to this agreement, but they shall act in such capacity only as agent for the several Underwriters. The Representatives may, in their discretion, for the purpose of carrying any unsold or undelivered Debentures, borrow money for account of the several Underwriters and pledge Debentures or obligations of the several Underwriters as collateral therefor, and each of the Underwriters hereby confirms his liability (in the proportion as stated in paragraph 4 above) with respect to any bank loans or other borrowings so arranged. The Representatives shall be under no liability with respect to the issue, form, genuineness, validity, enforceability or value of, or title to, the Debentures, or the validity or the provisions of any instrument under or pursuant to which the Debentures may be issued, or any representations made herein or in the Registration Statement or Prospectus or the Underwriting Agreement or for the delivery of the Debentures or for the performance by the Company or by others of any agreement on its or their part; nor shall the Representatives have any obligation with respect to qualification of the Debentures for sale under the laws of any jurisdiction; nor shall the Representatives be liable under any of the provisions of this agreement or in or for any matter connected therewith, except for want of good faith, or be under any obligation, either express or implied, which is not herein expressly assumed. Nothing herein contained shall constitute the several Underwriters partners with the Representatives or with each other or render the Representatives or any of the Underwriters liable for the obligation of any other Underwriter; and the obligations and liabilities of each of the Underwriters are several and not joint.

13. Any notice from the Representatives to you hereunder shall be deemed to have been duly given if mailed or telegraphed to you at your address set forth above.

14. This identical letter is being submitted to the other Underwriters. If the terms as set forth herein meet with your approval, please sign and return at once to the undersigned, care of Dillon, Read & Co. the duplicate copy of this letter enclosed herewith. Upon receipt by Dillon, Read & Co. at its office, 28 Nassau Street, New York, N. Y., of such signed copy on behalf of the undersigned, this letter and such signed copy will constitute an agreement between us.

Very truly yours,

March ----, 1936.

Mr. PETER R. NEHEMKIS, Jr.,
Special Counsel, Investment Banking Section,
Monopoly Study, Securities and Exchange Commission,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. NEHEMKIS: As you requested, we have looked over the memorandum prepared by your office, which was enclosed with your letter of November 27, 1939, and which is headed "Re: Distribution of Shell Union 3½% Debentures in 1936." In general the data appear to be correct.

For your information, the amount of Debentures offered to the Selling Group was $27,480,000. This figure was left blank in your memorandum.

You have asked why no management fee was charged although it was originally contemplated that each of the Managers was to receive ⅓ of 1%. In view of the general market uncertainty which existed just prior to the offering date and of the unwillingness of the Company to meet our recommendation in pricing the issue, it was decided to waive the fee in this instance thus permitting the full discount to be divided among all underwriters and selling group members.

Very truly yours,

H. H. EGLY.

HHED.

EXHIBIT No. 1991-2

[Prepared by the staff of the Investment Banking Section, Monopoly Study, Securities and Exchange Commission]

NOVEMBER 17, 1939.

MEMORANDUM FOR HENRY H. EGLY, ESQ., RE: DISTRIBUTION OF SHELL UNION
3½% DEBENTURES IN 1936

In arranging for the distribution of the $60,000,000 debentures the first step taken by the managers was to determine the amounts to be reserved for retail distribution for each of the eighteen underwriters whose commitments were $750,000 or less.

And the amounts initially so reserved and the amounts of the original commitments of each of these eighteen underwriters were:

	Amount reserved initially	Amount purchased from company
Kidder, Peabody & Co.	750,000	750,000
Shields & Company	600,000	600,000
Dean Witter & Co.	600,000	600,000
Riter & Co.	400,000	600,000
Goldman, Sachs & Co.	250,000	500,000
Halsey, Stuart & Co., Inc.	400,000	500,000
J. & W. Seligman & Co.	500,000	500,000
Clark, Dodge & Co.	200,000	400,000
Cassatt & Co., Inc.	400,000	400,000
Hemphill Noyes & Co.	400,000	400,000
Bancamerica Blair Corp.	350,000	350,000
Lawrence Stern & Co., Inc.	250,000	250,000
Halgarten & Co.	250,000	250,000
Estabrook & Co.	250,000	250,000
Whiting, Weeks & Knowles, Inc.	250,000	250,000
Blair, Bonner & Co.	100,000	200,000
Alex. Brown & Sons.	200,000	200,000
Conrad Bruco & Co.	200,000	200,000
Total	6,350,000	7,200,000

These amounts were determined by the managers (Dillon Read & Co. and Hayden Stone & Co.) in accordance with the indicated desires of each of these firms.

This procedure is customarily followed by Dillon Read & Co. and other managers of underwriting groups in determining the amounts to be reserved for underwriters.

According to the terms of the agreement among the underwriters (Exhibit-letter March 7, 1936) the determination of these amounts lies entirely in the discretion of the manager of the underwriting group. And this provision is customary and usual in such agreements.

Under the terms of this agreement, the managers also had the right to reserve debentures for each of the eleven other underwriters whose purchases were in excess of $750,000, namely:

	Amount of purchases from company
Dillon, Read & Co.....	$9,000,000
Hayden, Stone & Co.....	9,000,000
Lee Higginson Corp.....	5,000,000
Lehman Brothers.....	5,000,000
E. B. Smith & Co.....	3,825,000
Brown, Harriman & Co.....	3,825,000
Blyth & Co.....	3,600,000
First Boston Corporation.....	3,600,000
Lazard Freres & Co., Inc.....	3,150,000
Dominick & Dominick.....	1,800,800
Morgan Stauley & Co., Inc.....	5,000,000
	$52,800,000

A manager generally has this right under the agreements entered into between underwriters, and the manager generally exercises this right.

But in the Shell Union case, it was determined by the managers, after consultation with the other nine underwriters, not to make such reservations, but to allot any balance of debentures not reserved for the smaller underwriters or purchased by the selling group, among nine underwriters and the two managers in proportion to their respective purchases from the company.

And it was further agreed that if the percentage of their purchases from the company which these eleven larger underwriters were required to take was larger than the percentage of his purchase reserved for any of the eighteen smaller underwriters, then any of the smaller underwriters for whom there had been reserved a percentage of his original purchase smaller than this, would be required to take up an additional amount of debentures sufficient to make the total percentage of his original purchase taken up by him as large as the percentage of purchase the eleven larger underwriters were required to take up.

The selling group was offered $27,480,000 debentures (the figure to be supplied by Dillon Read & Co.). This offering was based on the assumption of oversales of $550,000 debentures in order to have a short position which would be used to make purchases in the market for the purpose of market support or stabilization during the period of distribution.

The selling group purchased only $19,175,000 debentures. As $6,350,000 had been reserved for retail distribution of the eighteen smaller underwriters, there remained unsold $35,025,000 of debentures. These unsold debentures were reallocated among the underwriters as follows:

To the eleven larger underwriters 66% of their combined total purchases of 52,800,000—a total of $34,849,000 debentures.

To three smaller underwriters in order to bring the total percentage of original purchase taken down by each up to 66%—$176,000 debentures. These three smaller underwriters were:

	Original purchase	Initially reserved	Additional reservation
Goldman Sachs & Co.....	500,000	250,000	$6,350
Clark Dodge & Co.....	400,000	200,000	$4,280
Blair, Bonner & Co.....	200,000	100,000	$2,290
	1,100,000	550,000	176,000

Only $226,000 debentures were purchased in the market, reducing the short position to $324,000. It was then determined to make no further purchases for support purposes, but to cover the balance of the short position out of the unsold debentures which the underwriters were required to take up. The amounts to be taken up by the eleven larger underwriters and the three above mentioned smaller underwriters whose allotments had been increased to 66%, were thereupon proportionately reduced in the amount of $324,000. This resulted in each being obliged to take up 65.4% of his original purchase instead of the 66% previously computed.

It thus ensued that the eleven larger underwriters and three of the smaller underwriters took up 65.4% of their original purchase, one smaller underwriter took up 66%, and one 80% and thirteen took up 100%.

	$60,000,000	$41,051,000

Recapitulation:

Amount underwritten	$60,000,000
by 11 larger underwriters	52,800,000
by 18 smaller underwriters	7,200,000
Taken up by selling group	¹ 18,949,000	(31.6%)
Taken up by all underwriters	41,051,000	(68.4%)
by 11 larger underwriters	34,531,000	² (65.4%)
by 18 smaller underwriters	6,520,000	² (90.5%)
Per cent of Original Purchase taken by each 11 principal underwriters		65.4%
Smallest per cent of Original Purchase taken by any underwriter		65.4%
Largest per cent of Original Purchase taken by any underwriter		100.0%

¹ Exclusive of $226,000 representing oversales. Total taken up by selling group including oversales $19,175,000.

² Of their collective commitments.

No underwriter who initially had reserved for retail distribution 100% of his original purchase from the company had any further liability as to any debentures offered to and not taken by the selling group.

Any underwriter whose initial reservation was in excess of 65.4% of his original purchase was required to take no further liability as to any debentures offered to and not taken by the selling group.¹

On or about April 3, 1936 (approximately three weeks after the offering) the managers reported to the company the amount of debentures remaining unsold as being approximately $11,800,000 distributed as follows:

Hayden Stone	$4,000,000
Lehman Brothers	3,100,000
Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc.	3,200,000
Lazard Freres & Co., Inc.	1,000,000
Dominick & Dominick	500,000
	$11,800,000

On this date Dillon, Read & Co. had disposed of all but $148,000 of the $5,886,000 they had been required to take up. (Their original purchase had been $9,000,000 at 97. Of these $3,114,000 had been sold to the selling group at 97%, leaving $5,886,000 for them to take up.)

Approximately \$940,000 of these had been sold within a few days of the offering date at 99 or 99 less $\frac{1}{4}$ to seven banks, three insurance companies and one dealer (Schedule). The balance was sold at prices between 94 $\frac{3}{4}$ and 97.

The profit in the purchase account (\$3,114,000 debentures purchased at 97 and sold to the selling group at 97 $\frac{3}{4}$) was after deducting expenses \$22,109.40.

The sale of the $5,886,000 taken up by Dillon Read & Co. resulted in a loss of $55,201.04.

On the entire transaction Dillon Read & Co. thus realized a net loss of $33,091.64.

It is the usual practice for the managers to charge a fee for managing an underwriting. In this case a fee of $\frac{1}{4}$ % each to Dillon Read & Co. and Hayden Stone & Co. had originally been contemplated (and a statement to this effect was incorporated in an exhibit to the registration statement. In a subsequent amendment this provision was deleted). For certain reasons, it was subsequently determined that no management fee should be charged. The reasons should be furnished by Dillon Read & Co.

A fee of $\frac{1}{4}$ % would have resulted in the payment to Dillon Read and Company of \$52,500 by other underwriters. So that had the usual practice been followed and a management fee charged in this amount, the amount of this fee would have eliminated the \$33,091.64 loss and left a net profit of about \$19,400.

This is the only underwriting of which Dillon Read & Co. has been manager or co-manager out of over twenty issues from January 1, 1936 to June 30, 1939 on which Dillon Read & Co. has not received a management fee from the other underwriters.

And it is the only underwriting in which Dillon Read & Co. has participated during this period on which a loss has been shown.

St. Helena Court, Crosby Square, London, E. C. 3, England.

MY DEAR LEGH-JONES: Mr. Clarence Dillon is sailing tomorrow for Europe. His first stop will be in England and he will no doubt pay his respects to Sir Henri. He will undoubtedly also report in regard to the Shell Union issue. He is not dissatisfied about the present position of the bonds. Only a few of the underwriters have large blocks on hand, probably amounting to some 12 million dollars in all. Most of the other underwriters and dealers have either been able to dispose of their bonds or only have a very nominal amount on hand.

A survey shows that Hayden, Stone & Co. have still on hand $4,000,000; Lehman Brothers $3,100,000; Stanley Morgan & Co. $3,200,000; Lazard Freres $1,000,000; and Dominick & Dominick $500,000. It is not likely that these houses will sell at depressed prices. Mr. Dillon feels that the market is not likely to go down any further, in fact reported that today's quotation was around 95½ and that he expects it will remain steady at this price and probably improve.

Yours sincerely,

4TH FEBRUARY, 1937.

J. C. VAN ECK, Esq.,

London.

MY DEAR VAN ECK: When I was in London I had a few words with Godber about our preference shares and about the possibility of doing some refinancing. We didn't go into any details, but it was suggested that if any conversion were possible we might take the opportunity of getting some additional money by, for instance, getting out a new issue of preference shares of say about $50,000,000. As you will have seen from the cable which I sent to London about the Tide-Water Associated refinancing, I started on my return to make some enquiries, and although I haven't got very much definite to report yet, I would like to give you some idea of the indications which we have received so far.

For easy reference I might start by summarizing today's position as to our capital and debt, even though you are of course familiar with this position:

3½% debentures, due March 1, 1951-----	$59,382,000
In treasury-----	618,000
Outstanding-----	$58,764,000
2½% notes, due November 1, 1937-----	$3,000,000
5½% Preferred Stock-----	$37,979,800
In treasury-----	3,629,800
Outstanding-----	$34,350,000
Common Stock—13,070,625 shares-----	$233,672,821
Warrants, expiring 1st October, 1939-----	25,990
In treasury-----	2,158
Outstanding-----	23,832
x 25 shares x $35=$20,853,000 if converted.

I further enclose a statement showing the estimated cash receipts and disbursements for the year 1937. The statement speaks for itself, although I might say a word about the capital expenditure item. So far we have only authorized the so-called "A" Budget, which is for an amount of about $29,000,000. The "B" Budget which we have left in abeyance amounts to about $21,000,000. There is no doubt that the position as we see it now would not justify this additional outlay, and for the purpose of estimating our cash at the end of the year I have assumed that during this year we are likely to spend on capital about as much as we did during 1936. I think this is a fair supposition, as even if we do not authorize the "B" Budget at all, experience has shown that in the course of the year additional expenditures are required, and I hardly think that we could expect to spend less than last year, unless absolutely forced otherwise. (In 1935 we spent about an equal amount.)

The statement does not provide for dividends on our common shares. Assuming this to be $1 a share (keeping in mind the undistributed profits tax), our cash position at the end of the year would be a tight one, considering that on an average about $10,000,000 of our money is frozen.

It would appear, therefore, that if we should be able advantageously to convert our preference shares to a cheaper issue, we would do well to endeavor at the same time to provide for some additional funds.

So far we have limited ourselves to asking some of our friends to let us have a general idea of what, in their opinion, could be done, more particularly with regard to converting our present issue into another cheaper one, which would also provide for some additional money. I have not been enquiring about the prospects of another debenture issue, as I rather feel that to replace stock with debt is not advisable. I suppose, however, that if we should wish to consider this aspect we ought to be able to get about the same terms as the Tide Water Associated, whose $40,000,000 15-year 5½% Sinking Fund Debentures have been placed on the market at 101, with a net to the company of 99, though the fact that we have already $60,000,000 outstanding might make this assumption a little on the optimistic side.

A point to be remembered in connection with this is that our declared value for capital stock tax purposes is $35,000,000, and should we redeem our present preferred stock and not replace it with stock, the entire income of Shell Union would be subject to excess profits tax.

The general feeling seems to be that it would not be advisable to try and sell a new preferred stock without warrants or conversion privileges, and that in any case this would probably have to be a 5% stock. Preference shares with warrants to buy common do not seem to be as satisfactory as convertible preferred stock, and the market generally seems to be more attracted at the moment by cumulative convertible preferred stock. Our present issue, as you of course remember, was also convertible, but the conversion rights expired in 1935.

The tentative indications given by some of our friends without their consulting each other are as follows for $50,000,000 convertible preferred stock:

	500,000 shares, par $100
	Hayden Stone	Lee Higginson	Lazard Freres
Dividend rate.....	4%.....	4¼%.....	4¼%.....	4¾%.....
Conversion.....	into 2.86 com- mon shs. @ 35.	into 2.86 shs. @ 35; after 1939 into 2½ shs. @ 40.	into 3⅓ common shs. @ 30.	1st 250,000 shs. into 3⅓ common @ 30; 2nd 250,000 into 2½ common @ 40.
Price to Public.....	100.....	100.....	100.....	102.....
Net to Company.....	97.....	97.....	97.....	99.....
Common held by B. P. M. after conversion.....	58%.....	58% or 58.7%.....	57.0%.....	57.90% FREE
If bond warrants also exercised B. P. M. % would be.....	55.7%.....	55.7% or 56.4%.....	54.86%.....	55.62%.....

The Tide Water-Associated offer provided for their new 4½% cumulative convertible preferred stock to be exchanged for one share of their present 6% preferred stock share for share, plus two dollars in cash. The company have offered to their common shareholders the right to subscribe at $103 per share for such shares of the new preferred stock as would not be issued under the exchange offer. Their conversion privileges are as follows:

Convertible at the option of the holder on or before January 1, 1947 (or, in case of earlier redemption, on or before the tenth day prior to the redemption date) into Common Stock of the Company at the following conversion prices per share (taking the $4.50 Preferred Stock at $100 per share); on or before July 1, 1939, $27.50 (or 3⅓ shares of Common for 1 share of Preferred); thereafter and on or before January 1, 1942, $30.00 (or 3⅓ shares of Common for 1 share of Preferred); thereafter and on or before July 1, 1944, $35.00 (or 2¾ shares of Common for 1 share of Preferred); and thereafter and on or before January 1, 1947, $40.00 (or 2½ shares of Common for 1 share of Preferred), all of which conversion prices are subject to adjustment to meet dilution, etc.

I don't like what Lazard Freres indicated, and with regard to the other two, it seems to me that both the price to the public and the net to the company are not sufficiently satisfactory. Supposing, however, that a proposition could be worked out on the basis of, say, 100 to be net to the company, the following calculation gives an idea of our saving and what the net cost would be of our new money, assuming a dividend basis of 4½% (we may be able to get 4¼% but this depends very much on the conversion rights:

Total to be issued.....	$50,000,000
Present outstanding.....	$34,350,000
Premium on redemption.....	1,717,500
	36,067,500
	$13,932,500
Fees & Expenses.....	200,000
	$13,732,500
Present Annual Preferred dividend.....	$1,889,250
Dividend @ 4½% on $34,350,000 (present outstanding Preferred Stock).....	1,545,750
	$343,500
Annual Saving.....	617,963
Dividend @ 4½% on $13,732,500 (new money).....	$274,463
Dividend @ 4½% on $1,717,500 (Premium on redemption of present Preferred Stock).....	77,288
	$351,751
Dividend @ 4½% on $200,000 (Fees & Expenses).....	9,000
	$360,751

Cost of new money 2.62%.

Of course we would have to remember, in considering the above, that we would have to pay out $1,717,500 as a call privilege on the present preferred stock. It is true that through sinking fund retirement we would probably have to pay this anyhow, but of course it would be spread over a large number of years, and it is always possible that they could be obtained at less than 100. I might say while on the subject of sinking fund that there would be no need in any new issue to provide for sinking fund payments. Apparently the market at present is not particularly interested in such a feature. We could also possibly avoid any voting rights for the new preference shares.

In connection with the first part of above paragraph, my thought is that we might very well offer an exchange to our Preferred stockholders, for instance along the lines followed by Tide Water-Associated, which would give the holders of our present Preference shares an opportunity to take the new stock instead of taking the cash at 105. An exchange of new for old stock does not involve a capital gains tax here and many might prefer to make an exchange so far as their own tax position was concerned and at the same time it would be advantageous to the Corporation (on the basis of Tide Water refinancing, if holders exchange, it would cost $2 plus underwriters' commission of $1.25).

Last week I saw Dillon and Forrester. So far we haven't heard from them, but I expect to get an indication of their views shortly.

I have been turning over in my mind the idea of combining the conversion of our existing preferred stock into \$35,000,000 new preferred stock with an issue of short-term notes, say \$15,000,000, over a period of five years. I have not made any enquiry regarding the rate of interest which might be obtainable but I do not think that it should exceed an average of, say, $2\frac{1}{2}\%$ or 3% . The combination of, say, $4\frac{1}{2}\%$ preferred and short-term notes would reduce the over-all interest charges compared with a new issue of \$50,000,000 $4\frac{1}{2}\%$ preferred. This combination of preferred stock and notes has the advantage of avoiding a further reduction in the Group's percentage, and at the end of the five-year period, allowing for the operation of the sinking fund on our funded debt, our total indebtedness would be, say \$86,000,000 ahead of the common stock or, say, \$15,000,000 less than would be the case by issuing a new preferred in the amount of \$50,000,000.

The capital expenditure as proposed for this year by the operating companies, including the "B" Budgets, is of course very high, but amongst other items it contemplates providing for the normal increase in trade in the northern refinery area of Shell Petroleum over a period of years. This type of expenditure will no doubt have to be made eventually, and we shouldn't overlook that with rising wages and rapidly increasing cost of materials any postponement of inevitable expenditure will lead to greater expense.

You will appreciate that this letter is only intended to give you some idea of what the result has been of our enquiries so far, and I hope later on to be able to give you something more definite and also give you my further views; but if in the meantime you can give it some thought and if possible give me some indication what the views on your side are, this would be very helpful.

Yours sincerely,

18. Yours 21 generally speaking I am in agreement though we may have to modify our views somewhat with regard to terms (fullstop)

Regarding last paragraph quite agree and furthermore in my opinion best not to disturb grouping of bankers as was formed under last year's bond issue in fact

I understand Dillon Read Hayden Stone and Lee Higginson have already come to such understanding amongst each other (fullstop) My reasons are:

Firstly—We should avoid running into same complications as last year.

Secondly—Neither Hayden Stone nor Lee Higginson would in my opinion be suitable leaders.

Thirdly—We could not very well switch over to entirely new leaders without first giving last year's group their opportunity (fullstop).

My idea is therefore to give last year's leaders in Dillon group an opportunity of jointly making us an offer along the lines as per your cable (fullstop) If their offer is unsatisfactory to us I would favour inviting Lehman Bros. to make us an offer (fullstop) They are anxious to take leading position and I personally feel as you know that a closer connection with them would be advantageous (fullstop) Presumably they would handle matter in conjunction with Kuhn Loeb (fullstop).

Would appreciate quick reply as situation becoming somewhat awkward to handle unless we definitely know what line we are going to take (fullstop) You will appreciate that one of first questions bankers will ask is as to whether group intends to take up new preferred at the rate of 1 for 40 of their holdings of common shares and in fact we understand that if group do not intend to make this investment it will have to be stated in the prospectus.

SHELL UNION FINANCING

Memorandum for the file

MARCH 16, 1937.

On March 16th bankers called at the Shell Union office for the purpose of stating the proposition which they and their group were prepared to make in connection with refinancing the present Shell Union preferred stock and raising additional money, if necessary. Dillon, Read & Co. were represented by Mr. Dean Mathey and Lee, Higginson & Co. by Mr. E. N. Jesup.

In opening their discussion they stated that they had agreed among themselves that the group would be approximately the same as the 1936 group and that the group management would be shared in the following proportions:

Dillon, Read & Co.	40%
Lee, Higginson Corp.	20%
Hayden, Stone & Co.	20%
Lehman Bros.	20%

The bankers stated they were authorized to say that although we were in the midst of changing conditions, they would be willing to undertake today to underwrite an issue of \$67,000,000 of preferred stock carrying a dividend rate of $4\frac{1}{2}\%$ and convertible to common stock for the first $2\frac{1}{2}$ years at \$35 and for the next $2\frac{1}{2}$ years at \$40. This could be sold at par less a commission of $2\frac{3}{4}\%$. They suggested that the terms would be approximately the same if we sold merely enough new preferred to retire the present preferred. In the case of new preferred, which is taken up by present shareholders in exchange for the old preferred, the bankers stated that they had not discussed the question of commission in detail, but agreed that the rate of commission would be less on such exchanges.

Mr. van der Woude advised that this offer was disappointing and unsatisfactory and that unless a better arrangement could be worked out we were not prepared to undertake this business with their group.

The bankers then made some suggestions regarding the raising of new money. These proposals were informal and were made without previous understanding with their group. They thought they might undertake to sell \$10,000,000 of 10-year $3\frac{1}{2}\%$ debentures plus \$22,500,000 of serial notes maturing at the rate of \$2,500,000 per annum for 9 years. The 10-year debentures would be convertible for the first year at \$35 per share of common and for the next 4 years at \$40. Another, and possibly better, plan which would reach two classes of investor would be to issue \$12,500,000 of 10-year debentures and \$17,500,000 of serial notes maturing in 1 to 5 years at \$3,500,000 per annum. A similar arrangement would be to put out \$20,000,000 of 10-year convertible debentures and \$10,000,000 of 5-year notes, maturing \$2,000,000 per annum.

The bankers suggested that the soundest form of financing at the present time is to sell common stock and that the most profitable way to accomplish this is to adopt a suggestion similar to the above where the 10-year debentures are convertible for the first year at practically today's market price of common.

These plans were taken as being merely tentative suggestions and subject to further discussion.

DEAR VAN DER WOUDE: With reference to the discussions we had on the telephone regarding a possible new banking connection. Whenever you find the time opportune and favourable and you have made a contact I think it might be well, before discussing any other terms, to find out what Morgan's ideas are about restrictions. I am afraid you may run up against the same difficulties as you had in your negotiations with the insurance companies. I presume that Morgan will be as strict as any other, although of course they participated in Dillon Read's and Hayden's Shell Union's issue of 60,000,000 dollars which was free from irksome restrictions. Of course, I can quite realise that no banking house or insurance company likes the idea of loaning money when such money would be used for the payment of dividends. On the other hand where Shell Union has at present a fairly substantial surplus and still substantial cash it would be unreasonable to tie up this surplus and cash with the same restrictions as would apply to new money. I fear that Shell Union during the first six months of 1938 may not earn sufficient to continue to pay a half yearly dividend of 50¢ and we would certainly not look with favour upon a reduction of the dividend if a substantial amount was earned during the first six months and the prospects for the second six months were favourable.

With kind regards,
Yours sincerely,

MY DEAR VAN ECK: With further reference to your letter of the 21st ult., since writing you on the 1st instant I have been discussing the matters raised by you with Fraser during my recent visit to the Mid-West, and you will shortly hear fully from Fraser the result of our discussions.

The March results of Shell Petroleum, I am afraid, will not be very comforting. At the end of this month both Belither and Fraser will be coming here, when we will review our forward position with regard to budgets, estimated profits, and cash, and I will in due course be writing you further.

With regard to financing, since talking to you on the phone two days ago I have been contacting a few banks here and I expect to have some definite information fairly shortly. I shouldn't think that it will prove difficult to borrow from fifteen to twenty million dollars for five years on a serial basis, more or less on the same terms as were offered to us last year when it was finally decided to do our temporary financing through Friends. I doubt whether it would be possible to do anything for a longer period than five years. We might possibly make a small debenture issue for ten years, but I think you share my feeling that this would not be very desirable. Such an issue would of course have to be registered.

On the question of finance we have had some preliminary discussions with Morgan, Stanley with a view to enabling them to familiarize themselves somewhat with our activities, and judging from the discussions I have had with them I do not anticipate any difficulties such as you referred to in your letter of the 18th January. Morgan Stanley seem to be very pleased to get an opportunity of establishing a connection with us.

I have today discussed financing with Mr. Meredith C. Laffey of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the U. S. A. I told him that we are now approaching the end of our third 12-month period in which Shell Union earnings qualified for life insurance investment under the terms of Section 100 of the N. Y. State Insurance Law (See attached statement).

Mr. Laffey stated they had had one case in which they had not adhered to the calendar year or fiscal year basis in determining the qualifications of the borrower and that he felt we might very well proceed with tentative discussions regarding a loan to Shell Union.

Mr. Laffey stated that without consulting his Committee or investigating any of the details of our company, he thought it probable that they could arrange a loan to Shell Union of say, 20 to 25 million dollars for 10 years at $3\frac{1}{2}\%$, for which they would pay us 99. He thought that in view of the terms of our present 15-year Debentures they would require that the principal of the new loan be repaid serially at the rate of 10% per annum. (Incidentally, this is approximately the same proposition as suggested tentatively by Morgan, Stanley & Co., except that they would charge 2% for underwriting.)

Equitable would be rather particular about having full certification by Price, Waterhouse & Co. similar to that required for S. E. C. registration and they would also ask that Paul Paine bring up to date his 1936 statement regarding properties. Mr. Laffey thought that in our case they would not require any special restrictions regarding additional borrowing, the payment of dividends or other requirements which are more restrictive than those contained in our recent Debenture Indenture. We would also not be put to the expense of engraving a series of notes although, as is usual with life insurance companies, they would require that we supply the necessary certificates at some future date in case circumstances should make it advisable for them to re-offer this paper to a group.

This type of borrowing, of course, has the advantage of still leaving local bank credit free for future use and also it is obviously an advantage over a public registered offering.

During our group discussions in New York next week we shall be discussing revised budgets and cash estimates and will then be in a position to take this up further with the insurance company.

NOTE: I have today made a further check with Mr. Laffey of Equitable, who assures me that although they have not had formal clearance from their Legal Department, we may feel quite safe in assuming that Shell Union is eligible for loans by N. Y. insurance companies and that his company is prepared to lend us $25,000,000. In his opinion we may proceed at any time to work out the terms of the loan with them in detail.

#46 Further our #42 we have developed following proposals for Shell Union financing Stop

Morgan Stanley & Co. suggest 10 year $3\frac{1}{2}\%$ sinking fund

Debentures could now be sold at 99 which after 2% commission

Would make this money cost us 3.86% Stop

Amount discussed was $25,000,000 but do not expect much difficulty in increasing this Stop

Also discussed convertible feature so as eventually to put this on common stock basis and they have indicated that with our common selling on the market at 13¼ per share they might issue at par a new debenture convertible into common at 16½ per share or 60 shares per $1000 debenture Stop

If issue were offered to present stockholders at rate of $2 principal amount of debentures for each share of stock held the new issue would yield $26,141,000 Stop

In that case if Bataafsche elected to take approximately $17,000,000 debentures there would of course be no underwriting commission on that portion although bankers feel they might undertake to dispose of these later if Bataafsche so decided Stop

Other alternative would be for Bataafsche to waive subscription rights whereupon bankers would make immediate public offering of that amount during period while other stockholders were being given opportunity to subscribe for $9,000,000 debentures Stop

They suggest right to call debentures with initial redemption price of $105 and a sinking fund which would retire the whole issue over 10 year period but this can probably be improved upon Stop

If convertible type of financing should be decided upon it would be interesting to know Brockman's attitude regarding subscription rights. Fullstop

In regard to loans from commercial banks we would have no difficulty raising $25,000,000 at rates ranging from 2.68% for 3 years or 3½% for 5 years but have confirmed cannot at present obtain longer term here although possibility of somewhat longer arrangement some banks outside New York for moderate amount Fullstop

We have also approached Equitable Life Assurance Society with suggestion that although Shell Union last 3 fiscal years have not shown earnings which meet requirement of N. Y. statute relative investment of insurance company funds we shall by the end of April have completed three 12 months periods during which we have met these requirements Stop

Equitable have studied this matter and while still subject to final approval their legal department they assure us they are prepared to enter negotiations for 10 year loan of $25,000,000 Stop

They tentatively suggest interest rate 3-½% for which they would pay us 90 Stop

This would of course save us underwriters commission and expense of registration for public offering and although they would require examination by lawyers, auditors and property expert requiring about 60 days time they feel that special restrictive covenants such as recently suggested by Prudential should not be necessary Fullstop

We have completed revised estimate of 1935 cash and profits and on basis of reduced capital budget expenditure of about $44,000,000 estimated cash at December 31st is about $18,000,000 before making any allowance for common stock dividend Stop

This does not provide for unusual property deals Stop Profits estimate indicates about $13,500,000 for the year of which about 37c per share would be earned during first half year after preferred dividends Fullstop

Estimates based on basis of present prices with exception of Shell Oil territory where have assumed average reduction of 2c in gasoline price over period May/December Fullstop

Full details mailed today by SS "Paris" Fullstop

Summarizing above will show that the prospects of doing public financing are improving Stop

It is impossible to foretell whether further improvement will take place and how quickly and therefore there is no way of telling when it might be possible to make an issue of preference shares whether convertible or otherwise which we would prefer in favor of a bond issue as we do not particularly like increasing our funded debt Fullstop

While we would favor continuing present arrangement with friends if we could be fairly certain of issuing preferred shares later in year provided they willing extend option nevertheless in view foregoing considerations as well as cash position and uncertainties of future we are of opinion that serious consideration should be given to take advantage of present opportunities and acquire about $25,000,000 Fullstop

If we are in agreement on this we suggest that financing through insurance companies would be most preferable and next best bond issue preferably convertible

Mr. A. FRASER,
 Shell Petroleum Corporation,
 St. Louis, Missouri.

MY DEAR FRASER: I enclose copy of telegram just received from Belither in connection with the report which Equitable require from Paul Paine before we can close our financing. I also enclose copy of my reply, from which you will see that we are urging Paine to make as comprehensive a preliminary report as possible so that the Equitable will be justified in closing the deal prior to receiving his final report based on personal inspection of the properties. You will, therefore, be receiving direct from Paine requests for answers to questions necessary to bring up to date all the important points in his 1936 report. There is no reason why, based on our answers to his interrogations, his final report should not be merely a confirmation of the facts contained in his preliminary report.

I shall appreciate it very much if you will have your people do all possible to expedite this work and at the same time please do everything you can to keep the deal with Equitable strictly under cover. Their commitment to us is entirely contingent on clearance being given by their counsel on all legal phases and therefore it would be very regrettable if word got about which would offend Morgans in any way, seeing that we are still relying on them in case there is a hitch with Equitable, as well as in case of future public financing.

Yours sincerely,

(Original signed by R. G. A. van der Woude.)

Mr. R. VAN DER WOUDE,
 St. Louis, Mo.

DEAR MR. VAN DER WOUDE: I have today talked to Equitable Life in reference to cutting down the interest on our debentures. They understand, of course, that the trend which we discussed last February has progressed still further and that we shall have to do something about it. So far as their \$25,000,000 loan is concerned, it now has an average life of 11.3 years (taking into account the annual reduction through sinking fund) and the cost to the company to redeem at 104 puts it on a 3.20% basis. Thus if Equitable cut the coupon rate even as much as $\frac{1}{8}\%$ it would be equivalent to their making a new loan to us at 3.075%. This is the same thing as saying that a 3% loan plus the premium which we have to pay for redeeming the old loan would be equivalent to their reducing the present coupon from 3.625% to 3.50%. I am satisfied that at this moment we could obtain this $\frac{1}{8}\%$ reduction and that we could do it by simply amending the present Trust Agreement. This is still not good enough, but it is at least a basis for further negotiating.

In their opinion we could sell 15-year 3% debentures to the public at a price to yield 2.95%, that is 100.60. Taking off 2 points for the Bankers would leave us 98.60, which is a 3.12% basis to the company, not counting the expense of registration and the risks involved on account of the waiting period. We do not yet know the details of the Socony public issue of $50,000,000, but it will quite likely be for about 20 years at 2¾%. I had a short talk with Ewing today and he thinks Socony may even sell 25-year debentures. I shall have a further talk with him tomorrow as to what Shell's present rating is for a public offering.

There is just as much need for discussing re-financing of our 3½% Debentures as there is of the Equitable loan, as considering the redemption price and the average life they are both on a 3.20% basis. Equitable felt that we might make a joint deal with them and Metropolitan and Prudential to cut the rate of our whole $82,427,000 debt. Equitable would not be willing to take more than the present $25,000,000 but I think it is quite possible we can deal advantageously with the three companies jointly. I have therefore talked to Metropolitan and have got Gilbert Stanley doing some figuring once more. It seems they are having a convention this week and he would not be able to take it up seriously for two or three days, but I am sure you agree that this can do no harm. I think in the meantime I shall not complicate it by talking to Caleb Stone of Prudential.

Laffey, of Equitable, pointed out that on the basis of our first quarter earnings we really had put ourselves in an ineligible position during the past twelve months, according to New York Life Insurance standards. This is a point against us, but I feel that they are hungry enough for the business to find some way around that difficulty. Laffey stated that if they did reduce the interest rate they would want an agreement that we could not exercise any call privilege for at least twelve months. I do not see any real objection to this provided we can get a rate reduction down to today's market.

I shall let you know of further developments and shall be glad to hear from you by telephone in case you have any comments on the above.

Yours sincerely,

(Original signed by S. W. Duhig)

Socony's call price on present issue is 102½. Ours is same on public issue, but 104 on Equitable.

Mr. R. VAN DER WOUDE,

St. Louis, Mo.

DEAR MR. VAN DER WOUDE: I have just had a talk with Ewing and Perry Hall. They will be sending me some figures in the morning, but this is a summary of what they think we could do at today's market, viz:

Maturity	15 years	20 years
Coupon	2½%	2¾%
Price	98½ (yield 2.6%)	98½ (yield 2.87%)
Commission	1¾	2
Cost to us	96¾ (2.766%)	96½ (2.984%)

They think that if this is for long term use in our business we should take this opportunity to get 20-year money.

They think Socony did not make a very good deal with the insurance companies because they are tied to a sinking fund which they will some day regret. On a public issue Socony would be able to supply the sinking fund agent at lower prices some day. Ewing feels we should be able to get Equitable down to today's market on our present $25,000,000 and he does not expect to beat them out on a public issue; but for our $60,000,000 of 3½'s (in which he feels our best interests would be served by putting ourselves in Morgan's hands) they could save about $278,000 per annum on new 15-year bonds (not including registration expense) and about $150,000 per annum on the 20-year.

More later.

Sincerely yours,

(Original signed by S. W. Duhig.)

SWD-S.

If we want to sell the debentures at par it would take a coupon of about $\frac{1}{4}$ more.

26 Re Shell Union finance bankers now indicate can replace present $3\frac{1}{2}\%$ debentures with 15 year $2\frac{1}{4}\%$ to sell at $98\frac{1}{2}$ to public and $96\frac{3}{4}$ to company or alternatively 20 year $2\frac{3}{4}\%$ debentures to sell at $98\frac{1}{2}$ to public and $96\frac{1}{2}$ to company stop

Saving on new 15 year issue is approximately $190,000 per annum over remaining life of present issue after redemption premium and other costs stop

Saving on new 20 year issue is only nominal during remaining life of present issue but we consider lengthening of maturity at present rates highly desirable stop

Re \$25,000,000 life insurance loan Equitable have indicated willingness reduce interest by $\frac{1}{4}\%$ in exchange for bonus of \$125,000 which would effect net saving over period of loan of about \$600,000 fullstop

In line with present market money rates we should be able to do better and if they do not improve upon terms we intend refinance this loan by including in above mentioned public issue stop

Our idea proceed with 20 year issue through Morgan Stanley group with possibility further improvement in terms both as to selling price and bankers commission stop

In view risk of market changes and also Security & Exchange Commission requirement use of December 31st 1938 audited accounts limited to 6 months we are proceeding immediately preparation registration documents stop

We have discussed with Godber and Van Eck who agree stop

We have also discussed redemption of preference shares and if anything develops we will advise you later

33 Your 14 Equitable advised us that their board has decided against making changes in existing agreements therefore only way open to us was to redeem loan and make new agreement fullstop

Accordingly we offered them basis for new agreement about equal to what we can obtain by public issue fullstop

They turned this down and as it was clear that we could not come to even a satisfactory compromise with them we have decided to call their loan upon issuance $85,000,000 public money fullstop

Terms agreed upon with Morgan Stanley are as follows: $85,000,000 fifteen years 2½ percent interest issue price 98½ commission 1½ percent with possibility of some reduction in latter fullstop

Sinking fund about 40 percent to commence in 1943 fullstop

Call price 102½ sliding downwards periodically after July 1944 fullstop.

You understand of course that under S. E. C. regulations not possible make firm agreement until issue ready for marketing therefore issue price is subject to change either way according to market conditions at that time fullstop

We expect file registration statement on Thursday and expect closing date to be 25th July with possibility 19th July fullstop

With regard to preferred issue matter is still under study by Morgan Stanley who fully understand and appreciate our strong desire to convert our present preferred stock into lower dividend stock and we assure you matter is having every possible attention and hope advise you shortly more definitely fullstop

Reference your 14 management your understanding is entirely correct full stop

37 Our 33 underwriting agreement due be executed seventeenth July after which issue will become effective fullstop

Morgan Stanley discussed with us today final terms based on present market conditions and general reaction they received from underwriters and prospective large buyers fullstop

Response from latter has been disappointing and contrary to expectations entertained by Morgan Stanley fullstop

Apparently due mainly to weaker Government bond market and resistance against 2½% rate this being first issue at this new low rate and to some extent due to remembrance limited success our last issue fullstop

Under circumstances Morgan Stanley of opinion successful issue cannot be made at better than 97½ with commission 1½% other terms unchanged full stop

Judging from discussions doubt whether can hold out much hope obtaining better terms though of course after receiving your views we would try to do so fullstop

Total saving on above terms would be reduced to about $3,000,000 over the 15-year period fullstop

If we decide not to accept above terms we could keep registration statement alive by amendments twenty days at the time though dont know for how long SEC would allow this fullstop

Of course there is no way predicting whether market conditions in future would enable us do better fullstop

In this connection should bear in mind unfavorable outlook oil industry near future and our own reduced earnings which might make it difficult make issue later even if bond market should be more favorable full stop

Total cost incurred in connection with registration statements legal advice etc. about $100,000 fullstop.

Our own inclination would ordinarily be to hold out for 98 but we doubt whether it is really case of bargaining and believe Morgan Stanley sincere in their opinion issue could not at present be successful at higher than 97½ and therefore would not undertake issue at higher rate fullstop

We must take decision by tomorrow noon and would appreciate your telephoning me tomorrow morning in good time fullstop

Have discussed over telephone with Van Eck who is of opinion we should not postpone especially view uncertain outlook and he suggests I should ask you leave me discretion accept above terms if I find it impossible improve upon same

Dated July 1, 1939

Due July 1, 1954

CONTRACT—July 17, 1939

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INCORPORATED

2 Wall Street, New York, N. Y.

JULY 17, 1939.

DEAR SIRs: Shell Union Oil Corporation (hereinafter called the Company) proposes to issue \$85,000,000 principal amount of its Fifteen Year 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ % Debentures (hereinafter called the Debentures) to be dated July 1, 1939, to mature July 1, 1954, and to be issued pursuant to the provisions of a Trust Agreement dated July 1, 1939 between the Company and Irving Trust Company, Trustee.

I

The Company represents and warrants to each Underwriter hereinafter mentioned that:

(a) It has prepared and properly filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington, D. C., a Registration Statement and amendments thereto, a Prospectus and an amended Prospectus and has prepared and is about to file certain further amendments to the Registration Statement and a further amended Prospectus and has prepared a Newspaper Prospectus for use by the Underwriters in advertising the Debentures in connection with their original offering. The Registration Statement as amended and to be amended, including financial statements and exhibits, is hereinafter referred to as the Registration Statement and the further amended Prospectus, above referred to, is hereinafter referred to as the Prospectus. No further amendments to the Registration Statement or Prospectus shall be made unless copies thereof have theretofore been furnished to you and you shall not have objected thereto.

(b) When the Registration Statement becomes effective, the Registration Statement, the Prospectus and the Newspaper Prospectus will fully comply with the provisions of the Securities Act of 1933, as amended, and the Rules and Regulations of the Securities and Exchange Commission, and the Registration Statement and the Prospectus will not contain any untrue statement of a material fact or omit to state any material fact required to be stated therein or necessary to make the statements therein not misleading and the Newspaper Prospectus will not contain any untrue statement of a material fact or omit to state any material fact necessary to make the statements therein not misleading in the light of the circumstances under which they are made when said Newspaper Prospectus is used in connection with advertising the Debentures, except that this representation and warranty does not apply to statements or omissions in the Registration Statement or the Prospectus or the Newspaper Prospectus made in reliance upon and in conformity with information furnished to the Company in writing by any Underwriter expressly for use therein.

II

The Company hereby agrees to sell to the several Underwriters named below (on whose behalf you are acting), severally and not jointly, and the several Underwriters named below, upon the basis of the representations and warranties herein contained, but subject to the conditions hereinafter stated, agree to purchase from the Company, severally and not jointly, the principal amount of Debentures set forth opposite their respective names below, aggregating $85,000,000 principal amount of Debentures, at 96¼% of their principal amount plus interest accrued thereon to the date of payment and delivery.

The Company is advised by you that the Underwriters propose to make a public offering of their respective portions of the Debentures part thereof directly to the public at 97½% of the principal amount of the Debentures—the public offering price—and accrued interest to the date of payment and delivery, and the balance to dealers at the public offering price, and accrued interest to the date of payment and delivery, less a concession of ½% of the principal amount of the Debentures so sold. The form of the proposed agreements with such dealers is attached hereto as Exhibit 1.

The Company authorizes the Underwriters and dealers to whom the Debentures may be sold by you on behalf of the Underwriters and all other dealers acquiring Debentures to use the Prospectus (as supplemented or amended if the Company shall have furnished any supplements or amendments thereto) in connection with the sale of the Debentures for a period of one year after the first date of the public offering of the Debentures.

The Company authorizes the Underwriters to advertise the Debentures in the manner permitted by the Rules and Regulations of the Securities and Exchange Commission by means of the Newspaper Prospectus.

Payment for the Debentures which the Underwriters severally agree to purchase shall be made by or for the accounts of the several Underwriters to the Company or its order by certified check in New York Clearing House funds at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., 23 Wall Street, New York, N. Y., as such time, on or after July 24, 1939, but not later than July 28, 1939, as may be designated by you. Such payment shall be made upon delivery to you for account of the several Underwriters of the Debentures in temporary form, in the denomination of $1,000 each, exchangeable in New York City for definitive Debentures without charge to the holders. The date and time of such payment and delivery are herein referred to as the closing date.

IV

The Company agrees that it will apply the net proceeds (exclusive of accrued interest) from the sale of the Debentures toward the redemption on or before September 1, 1939 of (a) $57,427,000 principal amount of Shell Union Oil

Corporation Fifteen-Year 3½% Debentures, due March 1, 1951, at 102½% of the principal amount thereof ($58,862,675) and (b) $25,000,000 principal amount of Shell Union Oil Corporation Fifteen year 3½% Sinking Fund Debentures, due June 1, 1953, at 104% of the principal amount thereof ($26,000,000). On the closing date, the Company, for the purposes of such redemption, will deposit in trust with the respective trustees or paying agents an amount in cash equivalent to the full redemption prices, including interest to the redemption dates, of said Fifteen-Year 3½% Debentures, and of said Fifteen Year 3½% Sinking Fund Debentures.

V

The several obligations of the Underwriters hereunder are subject to the following conditions:

(a) The Registration Statement shall have become effective not later than July 18, 1939, and no stop order suspending the effectiveness thereof shall have been issued on or prior to the closing date, and no proceedings for that purpose shall have been commenced or, to the Company's knowledge, be about to be commenced by the Securities and Exchange Commission on or prior to the closing date other than proceedings which may have been disposed of by that date in a manner satisfactory to you; and you shall have received, prior to payment by the Underwriters for the Debentures:

(i) a certificate, dated the closing date, signed by the President or a Vice-President of the Company, to the effect that no such stop order has been issued and that no proceedings for such purpose have been so taken or, to the Company's knowledge, are about to be commenced, other than proceedings which may have been disposed of in a manner satisfactory to you;

(ii) an opinion or opinions of Messrs. Davis Polk Wardwell Gardiner & Reed, counsel for the Underwriters, to the effect that (1) proper corporate proceedings have been taken so that the Trust Agreement is a valid and binding instrument in accordance with its terms, the Debentures have been validly authorized, and when duly executed by proper officers of the Company, duly authenticated by the Trustee, and delivered and paid for, will be validly issued and outstanding, and (2) the Registration Statement, the Prospectus and any supplements or amendments thereto and the Newspaper Prospectus comply with the Securities Act of 1933, as amended, and the Rules and Regulations of the Securities and Exchange Commission thereunder;

(iii) an opinion or opinions, satisfactory to counsel for the Underwriters, of Messrs. Wickes, Neilson & Riddell, counsel for the Company, to the same effect as the opinion or opinions of Messrs. Davis Polk Wardwell Gardiner & Reed referred to in (ii) above, and further to the effect that (1) the Company has been duly incorporated and is on the closing date validly existing under the laws of the State of Delaware, and (2) neither the Company nor any subsidiary is a "public utility", a "gas utility", or a "holding company" within the meaning of the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935; and that the consent or order of no state commission or other governmental body is required for the valid creation or issuance of the Debentures or the valid execution and delivery of the Trust Agreement or that all such consents or orders required have been obtained;

(iv) a certificate, dated the closing date, signed by the President or a Vice-President of the Company, to the effect that there has been no material change in the condition of the Company, or of its subsidiaries, from the condition set forth in the Registration Statement and the Prospectus, other than changes arising from transactions in the ordinary course of business.

(b) The representations and warranties of the Company herein shall be true and correct and the Company shall not have failed on or prior to the closing date to have performed all agreements herein contained which should have been performed on its part at or prior to such date.

VI

In further consideration of the agreements of the Underwriters herein contained, the Company covenants as follows:

(a) As soon as the Company is advised thereof, to advise you, and confirm the advice in writing, (1) when the Registration Statement has become effective and (2) of the issuance by the Securities and Exchange Commission of any stop order suspending the effectiveness of the Registration Statement or of the initiation of any proceedings for that purpose.

(b) To deliver to each of the Underwriters without charge on or before the effective date of the Registration Statement, and from time to time thereafter during the period of one year from the first date of the public offering of the Debentures so many copies of the Prospectus (as supplemented or amended if the Company shall have made any supplements or amendments thereto) as you may reasonably request.

(c) To deliver to you without charge 175 copies of the Registration Statement (including financial statements and exhibits) and of any amendments thereto.

(d) Before filing any amendments to the Registration Statement after it has become effective or before making any amendments or supplements to the Prospectus, to furnish you with a copy of such proposed amendments or supplements.

(e) For a period of one year after the first date of the public offering of the Debentures, if any event shall occur as a result of which it is necessary to amend or supplement the Prospectus in order to make the statements therein, in the light of the circumstances when the Prospectus is delivered to a purchaser, not misleading, forthwith to prepare and furnish, at its own expense, to the Underwriters and to the dealers (whose names and addresses you will furnish to the Company) to whom Debentures may have been sold by you on behalf of the Underwriters and, upon request, to any other dealers making such request, either amendments to the Prospectus or supplemental information so that the statements in the Prospectus as so amended and supplemented will not, in the light of the circumstances when the Prospectus is delivered to a purchaser, be misleading.

(f) To make generally available to the Company's security holders as soon as practicable an earning statement covering a period of twelve months beginning on the first day of the calendar month after the effective date of the Registration Statement, which earning statement shall satisfy the provisions of Section 11 (a) of the Securities Act of 1933, as amended.

(g) So long as any of the Debentures shall remain outstanding, to publish annually consolidated income statements, balance sheets and statements of summary of changes in surplus of the Company and its subsidiaries consolidated, all such statements to be audited by independent public accountants.

(h) To make application for the listing of the Debentures on the New York Stock Exchange and for their registration under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.

(i) To endeavor to qualify the Debentures for offer and sale under the securities or Blue Sky laws of such States as you shall request in writing.

(j) To indemnify and hold harmless each of the Underwriters and each person, if any, who controls any Underwriter within the meaning of Section 15 of the Securities Act of 1933, as amended, and each and all and any of them against any and all losses, claims, damages or liabilities, joint or several, to which they or any of them may become subject under the Securities Act of 1933, as amended, or at common law, and except as hereinafter provided, to reimburse each of the Underwriters and each such controlling person for any legal or other expenses incurred by it or them in connection with defending any actions, in so far as such losses, claims, damages, liabilities or actions arise out of or are based upon any untrue statement or alleged untrue statement of a material fact contained in the Registration Statement or in the Prospectus (if used within one year after the first date of the public offering of the Debentures and as supplemented or amended if the Company shall furnish to the Underwriters any supplements or amendments thereto) or in the Newspaper Prospectus, or arise out of or are based upon the omission or alleged omission to state therein a material fact required to be stated therein or necessary to make the statements therein not misleading, except in so far as such losses, claims, damages, liabilities or actions arise out of or are based upon any such untrue statement or omission or alleged untrue statement or omission, which was made in such Registration Statement, or Prospectus or Newspaper Prospectus in reliance upon information furnished in writing to the Company by any Underwriter expressly for use therein. Each Underwriter agrees that, promptly upon receipt of notice of the commencement of any action against such Underwriter or against any person so controlling such Underwriter in respect of which indemnity or reimbursement may be sought from the Company on account of its agreement contained in this paragraph, notice will be given to the Company in writing of the commencement thereof, but the omission so to notify the Company of any such action shall not release the Company from any liability which it may have to such Underwriter or to any such controlling person otherwise than on account of the indemnity agreement contained in this paragraph. In case any such action shall be brought against any Underwriter or against any such controlling person and notice shall be given to the Company of the commencement thereof, the Company shall be entitled to participate in, and, to the extent that it shall wish, including the selection of counsel, to direct, the defense thereof at its own expense. Any Underwriter or any such controlling person shall have the right to employ its or their own counsel although the Company has so selected counsel in any such case, but the fees and expenses of such counsel shall be at the expense of such Underwriter or such controlling person unless the employment of such counsel has been authorized by the Company in connection with defending such action.

Each Underwriter agrees to indemnify and hold harmless the Company against any and all losses, claims, damages or liabilities, joint or several, to which it may become subject under the Securities Act of 1933, as amended, or at common law, and to reimburse the Company for any legal or other expenses incurred by it in connection with defending any actions, in so far as such losses, claims, damages, liabilities or actions arise out of or are based upon any untrue statement or alleged untrue statement of a material fact contained in the Registration Statement or in the Prospectus (if used within one year after the first date of the public offering of the Debentures and as supplemented or amended if the Company shall furnish to the Underwriters any supplements or amendments thereto) or in the Newspaper Prospectus, or arise out of or are based upon the omission or alleged omission to state therein a material fact required to be stated therein or necessary to make the statements therein not misleading, which untrue statement or omission or alleged untrue statement or omission was made in such Registration Statement, or Prospectus or Newspaper Prospectus in reliance upon information furnished in writing to the Company by such Underwriter expressly for use therein. The Company agrees promptly upon receipt of notice of the commencement of any action against the Company in respect of which indemnity or reimbursement may be sought from an Underwriter on account of its agreement contained in this paragraph, to notify such Underwriter in writing of the commencement thereof, but the omission of the Company so to notify such Underwriter of any such action shall not release such Underwriter from any liability which it may have to the Company otherwise than on account of the indemnity agreement contained in this paragraph. In case any such action shall be brought against the Company and the Company shall notify an Underwriter from whom indemnity or reimbursement may be sought on account of its agreement contained in this paragraph of the commencement thereof, such Underwriter shall be entitled to participate in and, to the extent that it shall wish, including the selection of counsel, to direct, the defense thereof at its own expense. The Company shall have the right to employ its own counsel although the Underwriter has so selected counsel in any such case, but the fees and expenses of such counsel shall be at the expense of the Company unless the employment of such counsel has been authorized by the Underwriter in connection with defending such action.

The indemnity agreements contained in this Article VI (j) and the representations and warranties of the Company in this Agreement set forth shall remain operative and in full force and effect regardless of (a) any termination of this Agreement, (b) any investigation made by or on behalf of any Underwriter or controlling person or by or on behalf of the Company and (c) acceptance and payment hereunder for the Debentures.

VII

This Agreement shall become effective when the Registration Statement becomes effective and until such time this Agreement may be terminated by the Company, by notifying you at your office, 2 Wall Street, New York, N. Y., or by such number of Underwriters who have in the aggregate agreed to purchase more than $42,500,000 principal amount of the Debentures, by notifying the Company at its office, 50 West 50th Street, New York, N. Y. Any such notice may be in writing or by telegraph or by telephone and, if by telegraph or by telephone, shall be subsequently confirmed in writing.

If any of the Underwriters shall fail or refuse (whether for some reason sufficient to justify its cancellation or termination of its obligation to purchase hereunder or otherwise) to purchase the principal amount of the Debentures which it has hereunder agreed to purchase, the Company shall immediately notify the remaining Underwriters, at the respective addresses set forth in the Registration Statement, who may within twenty-four hours of receipt of such notice purchase or agree to purchase or procure some other responsible party or parties satisfactory to the Company to purchase or agree to purchase such Debentures on the terms herein set forth; and if the remaining Underwriters fail to purchase or agree to purchase or to procure a satisfactory party or satisfactory parties to purchase or agree to purchase such Debentures on such terms within twenty-four hours of the receipt of such notice, then the Company shall be entitled to an additional period of twenty-four hours within which to procure another party or parties to purchase or agree to purchase such Debentures on the terms herein set forth. In any such case either you or the Company shall have the right to postpone the closing date from the date determined as provided in Article III hereof, but in no event to a date later than August 1, 1939, in order that necessary changes and arrangements may be effected by you and by the Company. If the remaining Underwriters fail to purchase or agree to purchase or to procure a satisfactory party or parties to purchase or agree to purchase such Debentures, and if the Company also does not procure another party or parties to purchase or agree to purchase such Debentures, within the aforesaid periods, then this Agreement may be terminated, either by the Company or by Underwriters who have in the aggregate agreed to purchase more than 50% of the principal amount of the Debentures other than the Debentures which one or more Underwriters shall have failed or refused to purchase. In the event of any such termination the Company shall not be under any liability to any Underwriter, nor shall any Underwriter (other than an Underwriter who shall have failed or refused to purchase Debentures without some reason sufficient to justify its cancellation or termination of its obligation hereunder) be under liability to the Company.

If this Agreement shall be terminated by the Underwriters, or any of them, because of any failure or refusal on the part of the Company to comply with the terms or to fulfill any of the conditions of this Agreement, or if for any reason the Company shall be unable to perform its obligations under this Agreement, or if the Company shall terminate this Agreement under the option contained in the first paragraph of this Article VII, the Company will reimburse the Underwriters or such Underwriters as have so terminated this Agreement with respect to themselves, severally, for all of their out-of-pocket expenses (including the fees and disbursements of their counsel) reasonably incurred by them.

VIII

The Agreement herein set forth has been and is made solely for the benefit of the Underwriters and the Company, their successors and assigns, and, to the extent expressed, for the benefit of persons controlling Underwriters and of dealers purchasing Debentures, their successors and assigns, and no other person shall acquire or have any right under or by virtue of this Agreement. The term "successors and assigns" shall not include any purchaser of the Debentures merely because of such purchase.

Please confirm that the foregoing correctly sets forth the agreement between us.

Very truly yours,

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED
Two Wall Street, New York

$85,000,000 SHELL UNION OIL CORPORATION FIFTEEN YEAR 2½% DEBENTURES

Dated July 1, 1939

Due July 1, 1954

NEW YORK, July 19, 1939.

Dear Sirs:

We and the other Underwriters named in the Offering Prospectus have severally agreed to purchase, subject to the terms and conditions of our Purchase Agreement, at 96¼% of the principal amount thereof, and accrued interest to the date of payment therefor, an aggregate of $85,000,000 principal amount of Shell Union Oil Corporation (hereinafter called the Company) Fifteen Year 2½% Debentures (hereinafter called the Debentures), to be dated July 1, 1939, and to mature July 1, 1954, and more fully described in the enclosed copy of the Offering Prospectus.

A part of the $85,000,000 principal amount of the Debentures is being offered for sale, when, as and if issued and accepted by the several Underwriters and subject to the approval of their counsel and to the other terms and conditions hereof, to dealers at 97¼% of the principal amount thereof—the public offering price—and accrued interest, less a concession of ½%, payable as hereinafter provided. No deduction from this concession will be made for expenses. Out of the above-stated concession of ½%, dealers may allow a concession not in excess of ¼% to brokers or dealers only, provided that such concession is not reallocated to a customer in any case.

We are advising you by telegram of the principal amount of Debentures reserved for purchase by you, subject to the terms and conditions hereof. Such Debentures will be reserved for purchase by you until 4 o'clock P. M. (standard time in your city), Wednesday, July 19, 1939. Please advise us at our office, 2 Wall Street, New York City, by the time specified, whether or not you agree to purchase, on the terms and conditions hereof, all or any part of such reserved Debentures. Applications for Debentures in excess of the amount so reserved and applications received after 4 o'clock P. M. (standard time in the applicant's city), Wednesday, July 19, 1939, will be received only subject to allotment by us in our uncontrolled discretion.

We have been advised by the Company that a Registration Statement in respect of these Debentures under the Securities Act of 1933, as amended, has become effective. Neither you nor any other person is authorized by the Company or by the Underwriters to give any information or make any representations, other than those contained in the Offering Prospectus, in connection with the issue and sale of the Debentures. No dealer is authorized to act as agent for the several Underwriters when offering the Debentures to the public or otherwise. The Company has agreed with the Underwriters that for a period of one year after the first date of the public offering of the Debentures, if any event shall occur as a result of which it is necessary to amend or supplement the Prospectus in order to make the statements therein, in the light of the circumstances when the Prospectus is delivered to a purchaser, not misleading, forthwith to prepare and furnish, at its own expense, to the Underwriters and to the dealers to whom Debentures may have been sold by us on behalf of the Underwriters and, upon request, to any other dealers making such request, either amendments to the Prospectus or supplemental information so that the statements in the Prospectus as so amended and supplemented will not, in the light of the circumstances when the Prospectus is delivered to a purchaser, be misleading.

You may offer the Debentures Wednesday morning, July 19, 1939, subject to the foregoing and to the above referred to conditions of the Purchase Agreement of the Underwriters. No dealer shall enter, either directly or indirectly, into any agreement or arrangement with any purchaser of the Debentures whereby such dealer accepts Shell Union Oil Corporation Fifteen-Year 3½% Debentures dated March 1, 1936 and due March 1, 1951 or Shell Union Oil Corporation Fifteen Year 3½% Sinking Fund Debentures, due June 1, 1933, (both of which issues the Company intends to redeem on or before September 1, 1939) in payment of all or any part of the purchase price of the Debentures at any price in excess of 102½% for the 3½% Debentures or 104% for the 3½% Debentures and accrued interest in either case to the redemption date.

Public advertisement of the Debentures will be made July 19, 1939. After that date, you may advertise on your own responsibility over your own name and at your own expense. Additional copies of the Offering Prospectus will be supplied in reasonable quantities upon request.

The Debentures purchased by the Underwriters which are not being offered to dealers in accordance with the terms of this Agreement are being offered for sale by certain of the Underwriters, all of whom have agreed with respect to the sale of Debentures to comply with the terms and conditions of this Agreement. All of such Underwriters have agreed that they will not sell or offer to sell or solicit offers to buy Debentures prior to the public offering.

Payment for Debentures purchased by you is to be made by certified check at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., 23 Wall Street, New York City, at the public offering price, and accrued interest to the date of payment therefor, on July 24.

1939, or such later date as we may advise, in New York Clearing House funds to the order of Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated, against delivery of temporary Debentures. The concession to which you shall be entitled will be paid to you upon the termination of this Agreement. Notwithstanding the distribution of any such amount to you, you agree to pay your proportionate share of any claim, demand or liability asserted against you and the other dealers to whom Debentures are sold in accordance with the terms of this Agreement or any of them, or against us as Manager of the offering, based on the claim that such dealers constitute an association, unincorporated business or other separate entity.

In the event that prior to the termination of this Agreement (or prior to such earlier date as we may determine), we purchase for the account of any of the several Underwriters, in the open market or otherwise, at or below the public offering price, any Debentures delivered to you, we reserve the right to withhold the above-mentioned concession on such Debentures.

This Agreement will terminate on September 23, 1939, unless sooner terminated by us.

As Manager of the offering, we shall have full authority to take such action as we may deem advisable in respect of all matters pertaining to the offering. As Manager, we shall be under no liability to you for or in respect of the validity of, or the form of, or the representations contained in, the Debentures or the Registration Statement or the Offering Prospectus or the Newspaper Prospectus or the Agreement with the Company for the purchase of the Debentures or other instruments executed by the Company or by others; or for the delivery of the Debentures or the performance by the Company or by others of any agreement on its or their part; or for the qualification of the Debentures for sale under the laws of any jurisdiction; or for any matter connected with this Agreement, except for lack of good faith and for obligations expressly assumed by us in this Agreement. This offer of Debentures to dealers is made in each state only by such of the Underwriters as may lawfully sell the Debentures to dealers in such state.

Each of the several Underwriters has authorized us for its account, during the term of agreements between us and the several Underwriters (which agreements will terminate thirty days after the termination of this Agreement, or on such earlier date as we may determine), (1) to buy and to sell Debentures, in addition to the Debentures sold to dealers pursuant to the terms of this Agreement, in the open market or otherwise, for either long or short account, on such terms and at such prices as we may deem desirable, and (2) in arranging for sales to dealers pursuant to the terms of this Agreement to over-allot, it being understood that such purchases and sales and over-allotments shall be made for the account of each of the several Underwriters as nearly as practicable in proportion to the respective principal amounts of Debentures which the Underwriters severally have agreed to purchase from the Company; provided, however, that at no time shall the net commitment of any Underwriter under such provisions of said agreements, for either long or short account, exceed 10% of the principal amount of Debentures which any such Underwriter has agreed to purchase from the Company.

Each of the several Underwriters reserves the right to make purchases and sales of the Debentures in the ordinary course of business, and not for the purpose of stabilizing the price of any security, for its own account, in the open market or otherwise, for either long or short account.

Please advise us whether or not you agree to purchase all or any part of the Debentures reserved for you, and if you so agree please confirm your purchase by signing, in the manner indicated on the reverse hereof, and returning to us the duplicate copy of this letter enclosed herewith.

Very truly yours,

(Hand written:) $85,000,000 2½%—Due '54 Guide—"Memoranda."

SHELL UNION OIL COMPANY

I lunched today with Mr. Mathey of Dillon Read who advised me that the Shell Union Oil Company proposes to issue $80,000,000 convertible preferred stock, the existing preferred stockholders having the first call to the extent of the amount outstanding: namely $38,000,000.

The company is having preliminary conversations with Dillon Read & Co. on behalf of the old syndicate, which will be substantially the same although for certain reasons Lee Higginson will be managers of the account along with Dillon Read and Hayden Stone. The company has advised Mr. Mathey they would like to see a 4% preferred stock with a conversion beginning at 40, and Mr. Mathey asked my opinion as to whether this could be done, to which I definitely replied in the negative. He agreed to this and said he thought that if the company would make a 4½% preferred and make it convertible for the first two years right close to the market (33) at, say, 35 he thought it would be doable at a price depending on conditions at the time the issue came out at somewhere between par and 105. I indicated that I thought a 4½% preferred with a conversion right close to the market should be doable at an appropriate price, depending on market conditions at the time. If the negotiations go forward the issue would probably not come for at least six weeks.

Having in mind the tremendous trading proclivities of the management and the experience with the debenture issue, Mr. Mathey is determined to avoid being crowded up by the company with regard to the terms of the set-up and the price. He feels, especially in view of the fact that the Shell is not as favorably regarded as some of the other oil companies in spite of what he says is its better statistical position as compared, for example, with Texas and Tide Water, and in view of his experience with the note issue, that it is absolutely essential to a successful offering that it be put out on an obviously attractive basis.

He is sure that the company will be shocked at the proposal he has in mind making, and that their first impulse will be to try to go somewhere else. You will recall that the syndicate in the last issue was a pretty comprehensive one and he thinks that the only possible place they might go to is Kuhn Loeb, and there are probably reasons why they would not go even to them. He is anxious.

however, to have his group present a solid front to the company and, in effect, to agree that if the Shell Union does not trade with the Dillon Read-Hayden Stone-Lee Higginson group, the members of this group will not join any other bankers who may attempt to form a group to figure on the business. In view of the well-known trading proclivities of the Shell people, I have agreed in principle to Mr. Mathey's suggestion on the theory that if our large and strong group cannot get the business on terms that we feel attractive, we will be better off to be out of the business.

H. M. ADDINSELL.

UNDERWRITING AGREEMENTS, JULY 17, 1939

MORGAN STANLEY & CO., INCORPORATED

2 Wall Street, New York, N. Y.

JULY 17, 1939.

DEAR SIRs: We wish to confirm as follows our agreement with you with respect to the purchase by you and the other Underwriters hereinafter referred to, including ourselves, severally, and the offering of an aggregate of $85,000,000 principal amount of Fifteen Year 2½% Debentures (hereinafter called the Debentures), to be dated July 1, 1939, and to mature July 1, 1954, of Shell Union Oil Corporation (hereinafter called the Company):

I

We authorize you to execute on our behalf the agreement annexed hereto as Exhibit A (hereinafter referred to as the agreement with the Company).

II

We authorize you, with respect to the Debentures which we agree to purchase from the Company, to reserve for sale and to sell on our behalf any or all of such Debentures to dealers, in such amounts as you shall in your discretion determine, in accordance with the terms and conditions of agreements with such dealers in the form attached hereto as Exhibit 1. It is understood that on the date of the public offering you will advise us of the amount of Debentures purchased from the Company by us which you have not reserved for sale to dealers.

We authorize you to act as the Manager of the offering and to take such action as may seem advisable to you in respect of all matters pertaining to the offering to dealers or the public offering of the Debentures. We agree that the public offering of the Debentures is to be made on July 19, 1939, or as soon thereafter as in your judgment is advisable, at the public offering price set forth in the agreement with the Company, and accrued interest. We agree that, with respect to the sale of Debentures by us, we will comply with all the terms and conditions set forth in Exhibit 1 attached hereto, and will not sell, offer to sell, or solicit offers to buy Debentures prior to the public offering.

III

At 9:15 o'clock A. M., New York City Time, on the closing date, as defined in the agreement with the Company, we will deliver to you at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., 23 Wall Street, New York, N. Y., a certified check payable to the order of the Company in New York Clearing House funds, for the full purchase price of the Debentures which we have agreed to purchase from the Company, which full purchase price shall be paid to the Company against delivery to you for our account of such Debentures in temporary form. You agree promptly to deliver to us such of the Debentures purchased by us as you have not reserved for sale to dealers for our account as provided in Article II hereof. Upon receipt by you of payment for Debentures purchased by us and sold to dealers for our account, you will remit to us out of the payments so received an amount equivalent to the purchase price paid by us for such Debentures, plus accrued interest, received upon such payment. You may deliver to us from time to time on or after the closing date, for carrying purposes only, any Debentures purchased by us which are reserved for sale for our account to dealers but not purchased by them or which are so reserved and purchased but with respect to the purchase of which default is made. Any Debentures delivered to us for carrying purposes will be redelivered to you at such time or times as you may demand, either for delivery to dealers, or for disposition under Articles VI or VIII hereof.

IV

As compensation for your services in connection with the purchase of the Debentures and the managing of the public offering and the offering to dealers, we agree to pay you on the closing date an amount equal to $\frac{1}{4}\%$ of the principal amount of the Debentures which we have agreed to purchase from the Company.

V

We agree to pay and authorize you to charge to our account our proportionate share of all expenses, other than transfer taxes, incurred by you under the terms of this Agreement or in connection with the purchase, carrying and sale of the Debentures. Such expenses shall be charged to and paid by the several Underwriters in proportion to the principal amount of Debentures which each has agreed to purchase from the Company. We agree to pay and authorize you to charge to our account all transfer taxes paid on our behalf on sales or transfers made for our account pursuant to any provisions of this Agreement.

You shall not be under any duty to account for any interest on funds of any of the Underwriters, including ourselves, at any time in your hands.

VI

We authorize you for our account during the term of this Agreement (1) to buy and to sell Debentures, in addition to the Debentures sold to dealers pursuant to Article II hereof, in the open market or otherwise, for either long or short account, on such terms and at such prices as you shall deem desirable, and (2) in arranging for sales of Debentures to dealers pursuant to the provision of this Agreement to over-allot, it being understood that such purchases and sales and over-allotments shall be made for the account of each of the several Underwriters as nearly as practicable in proportion to the respective principal amounts of Debentures which the Underwriters severally agree to purchase from the Company, and we agree to take up at cost on demand any Debentures so purchased for our account and to deliver on demand any Debentures so sold or so over-allotted for our account; provided, however, that at no time shall our net commitment pursuant to such purchases and sales and over-allotments, for either long or short account, exceed 10% of the principal amount of Debentures which we have agreed to purchase from the Company. Without limiting the generality of the foregoing, it is understood that you may buy or take over for the accounts of the several Underwriters under this Agreement, all in the proportion and within the limits above set forth, at the public offering price and accrued interest less an amount equal to $\frac{1}{2}\%$ of the principal amount of the Debentures, any Debentures of any Underwriter reserved for sale to dealers but not purchased by them or so reserved and purchased but with respect to the purchase of which default is made.

You agree to notify us if you engage in any transaction pursuant to the authorization contained in the preceding paragraph of this Article.

We authorize you on our behalf to file with the Securities and Exchange Commission any and all reports required by Rule X-17A-2 to be filed with that Commission in connection with any purchases or sales made by you for our account pursuant to the authorization contained in this Article.

Each of the several Underwriters reserves the right to make purchases and sales of the Debentures in the ordinary course of business, and not for the purpose of stabilizing the price of any security, for its own account in the open market or otherwise, for either long or short account.

VII

In respect of any Debentures purchased by you for the account of any of the Underwriters pursuant to the provisions of Article VI hereof prior to the termination of the agreements with dealers or prior to such earlier date as you may determine, at or below the public offering price, which Debentures were sold by us otherwise than through you, we authorize you to charge to our account an amount equal to $\frac{1}{2}\%$ of the principal amount of said Debentures, which amount shall be credited on the accounts of the respective Underwriters for whose accounts said Debentures were purchased by you, against the cost of said Debentures.

VIII

The agreements with dealers (Exhibit 1) shall terminate at the close of business on September 23, 1939, unless sooner terminated by you. This Agreement shall terminate 30 days after the termination of the agreements with dealers or at such earlier date as you may determine, provided, however, that no such termination of this Agreement shall terminate or otherwise alter or affect our rights and obligations under Article X hereof. Upon termination of this Agreement the accounts arising pursuant hereto shall be settled and paid. The determination by you of the amounts to be paid to or by us shall be final and conclusive.

Any Debentures reserved for sale to dealers pursuant to Article II hereof but not purchased by them and any Debentures so reserved and purchased but with respect to the purchase of which default is made, shall, upon the termination of this Agreement, and may, in your discretion, from time to time prior thereto, be delivered to the Underwriters, as nearly as practicable in proportion to the principal amount of Debentures which each severally has agreed to purchase from the Company, against payment to you for the respective accounts of the owners of such Debentures by each Underwriter of the public offering price and accrued interest less an amount equal to $\frac{1}{2}\%$ of the principal amount of such Debentures, and we agree to take up and pay for all Debentures so delivered to us and you agree to pay us any amount so paid to you for our account in respect of any Debentures owned by us.

Notwithstanding any settlement on the termination of this Agreement, we agree to pay our proportion (such proportion to be that which the principal amount of Debentures which we have agreed to purchase from the Company bears to $85,000,000) of the amount of any claim, demand or liability which may be asserted against and discharged by the Underwriters, or any of them, based on the claim that the Underwriters constitute an association, unincorporated business or other separate entity, and also to pay any transfer taxes which may be assessed and paid after such settlement on account of any sale or transfer of Debentures for our account.

IX

Article V (a) of the agreement with the Company provides among other things that the several obligations of the Underwriters under said agreement are subject to the condition that the Registration Statement of the Company shall have become effective not later than July 18, 1939. You are hereby authorized in your discretion to extend such date to not later than July 19, 1939, and to execute on our behalf any supplementary agreement with the Company that may be necessary for such purpose.

We hereby confirm that we have examined the Registration Statement and amendments thereto and the Prospectus and amended Prospectus filed in respect of the Debentures and are familiar with the proposed further amendments to said Registration Statement, the proposed final amended Prospectus and the proposed Newspaper Prospectus (all referred to in the agreement with the Company), and that the information with respect to Underwriters contained in the Registration Statement as amended and as to be further amended, in the final amended Prospectus and in the proposed Newspaper Prospectus is correct and is not misleading in so far as it relates to us.

You shall be under no liability to us for or in respect of the form of, or the representations contained in, the Debentures or the Registration Statement, Prospectus or Newspaper Prospectus (all referred to in the agreement with the Company) or the agreement with the Company or other instruments executed by the Company or by others; or for the delivery of the Debentures or the performance by the Company or by others of any agreement on its or their part; or for the qualification of the Debentures for sale under the laws of any jurisdiction; or for any matter connected with this Agreement, except for lack of good faith and for obligations expressly assumed by you in this Agreement.

You are authorized in your discretion to approve on our behalf with approval of counsel for the Underwriters, any further amendments to the Registration Statement, Prospectus or Newspaper Prospectus which may be made prior to the effective date of the Registration Statement.

X

We agree to indemnify and hold harmless each other Underwriter, including yourself, and each of the persons, if any, who controls any such Underwriter within the meaning of Section 15 of the Securities Act of 1933, as amended, and each and all of them against any and all losses, claims, damages or liabilities, joint or several, to which any such other Underwriter, or any such controlling person, may become subject under the Securities Act of 1933, as amended, or at common law, and to reimburse each such other Underwriter and each controlling person for any legal or other expenses incurred by it or them in connection with defending any actions, in so far as such losses, claims, damages, liabilities or actions arise out of or are based upon any untrue statement or alleged untrue statement of a material fact contained in the Registration Statement or the Prospectus (if used within one year after the first date of the public offering of the Debentures and as supplemented or amended if the Company shall furnish to the Underwriters any supplements or amendments thereto) or the Newspaper Prospectus (all referred to in the agreement with the Company) or arise out of or are based upon the omission or alleged omission to state therein a material fact required to be stated therein or necessary to make the statements therein not misleading, which untrue statement or omission or alleged untrue statement or omission was made in reliance upon information furnished in writing by us expressly for use therein. We authorize you to confirm to each other Underwriter that we agree to indemnify and hold harmless such other Underwriter and any person so controlling such Underwriter as set forth above. By confirming this Agreement you confirm that each other Underwriter, including yourself, severally agrees to indemnify and hold harmless ourselves and any person so controlling us in the same manner and to the same extent in respect of any such untrue statement or omission or alleged untrue statement or omission made in reliance upon information furnished in writing by such other Underwriter, including yourself, expressly for use in the Registration Statement or Prospectus or Newspaper Prospectus.

XI

If we shall terminate our agreement with the Company as permitted by the terms thereof, our obligations hereunder shall immediately cease and determine except the obligation to pay our proportionate share of all expenses, the obligation to pay transfer taxes on sales or transfers made for our account, any obligations incurred for our account under Article VI hereof and our obligations under Article X hereof. In the event of our failing or refusing to perform our agreement with the Company, whether for sufficient legal cause or otherwise, we shall immediately notify you. In case any other Underwriter shall notify you of its failure or refusal to perform its agreement with the Company, you shall immediately notify the remaining Underwriters, including ourselves, and such remaining Underwriters and yourselves shall have the right to purchase the Debentures which the Underwriter so failing or refusing to perform its agreement with the Company had agreed to purchase from the Company, in proportion to the principal amount of Debentures which each such remaining Underwriter agreed to purchase from the Company. If we elect to purchase any part of the Debentures of such other Underwriter under the provisions of this Article, we shall notify you within three hours of our receipt of your notice, and in the event that the other remaining Underwriters have not at the expiration of said three hours notified you that they will purchase all of the remaining Debentures which said other Underwriter had failed or refused to purchase, then you or the Company may obtain any other party or parties satisfactory to the Company to purchase such remaining Debentures. All Debentures purchased by us under the provisions of this Article shall be added, for all the purposes of this Agreement, to the principal amount which we have agreed to purchase from the Company.

Default by any one or more of the other Underwriters in respect of their several obligations under the agreement with the Company shall not release us from any of our obligations.

Nothing herein contained shall constitute us partners with you or with the other Underwriters and the obligations of ourselves and of each of the other Underwriters are several and not joint.

Any notice from you to us shall be deemed to have been duly given if mailed or telegraphed to us at the address stated below.

This Agreement is being executed by us and delivered to you in triplicate. Upon your receipt of identical agreements from each of the other Underwriters, please confirm this Agreement and return one copy to us. Your confirmation hereof shall constitute confirmation that you have entered into identical agreements with each of the other Underwriters.

Very truly yours,

Address _____

EXHIBIT A

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED

2 Wall Street, New York, N. Y.

JULY 17, 1939.

DEAR SIR: Shell Union Oil Corporation (hereinafter called the Company) proposes to issue $85,000,000 principal amount of its Fifteen Year 2½% Debentures (hereinafter called the Debentures) to be dated July 1, 1939, to mature July 1, 1954, and to be issued pursuant to the provisions of a Trust Agreement dated July 1, 1939 between the Company and Irving Trust Company, Trustee.

I

The Company represents and warrants to each Underwriter hereinafter mentioned that:

(a) It has prepared and properly filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington, D. C., a Registration Statement and amendments thereto, a Prospectus and an amended Prospectus and has prepared and is about to file certain further amendments to the Registration Statement and a further amended Prospectus and has prepared a Newspaper Prospectus for use by the Underwriters in advertising the Debentures in connection with their original offering. The Registration Statement as amended and to be amended, including financial statements and exhibits, is hereinafter referred to as the Registration Statement and the further amended Prospectus, above referred to, is hereinafter referred to as the Prospectus. No further amendments to the Registration Statement or Prospectus shall be made unless copies thereof have theretofore been furnished to you and you shall not have objected thereto.

(b) When the Registration Statement becomes effective, the Registration Statement, the Prospectus and the Newspaper Prospectus will fully comply with the provisions of the Securities Act of 1933, as amended, and the Rules and Regulations of the Securities and Exchange Commission, and the Registration Statement and the Prospectus will not contain any untrue statement of a material fact or omit to state any material fact required to be stated therein or necessary to make the statements therein not misleading and the Newspaper Prospectus will not contain any untrue statement of a material fact or omit to state any material fact necessary to make the statements therein not misleading in the light of the circumstances under which they are made when said Newspaper Prospectus is used in connection with advertising the Debentures, except that this representation and warranty does not apply to statements or omissions in the Registration Statement or the Prospectus or the Newspaper Prospectus made in reliance upon and in conformity with information furnished to the Company in writing by any Underwriter expressly for use therein.

II

The Company hereby agrees to sell to the several Underwriters named below (on whose behalf you are acting), severally and not jointly, and the several Underwriters named below, upon the basis of the representations and warranties herein contained, but subject to the conditions hereinafter stated, agree to purchase from the Company, severally and not jointly, the principal amounts of Debentures set forth opposite their respective names below, aggregating $85,000,000 principal amount of Debentures, at 96¼% of their principal amount plus interest accrued thereon to the date of payment and delivery.

The Company is advised by you that the Underwriters propose to make a public offering of their respective portions of the Debentures part thereof directly to the public at 97½% of the principal amount of the Debentures—the public offering price—and accrued interest to the date of payment and delivery, and the balance to dealers at the public offering price, and accrued interest to the date of payment and delivery, less a concession of ¼% of the principal amount of the Debentures so sold. The form of the proposed agreements with such dealers is attached hereto as Exhibit 1.

The Company authorizes the Underwriters and dealers to whom the Debentures may be sold by you on behalf of the Underwriters and all other dealers acquiring Debentures to use the Prospectus (as supplemented or amended if the Company shall have furnished any supplements or amendments thereto) in connection with the sale of the Debentures for a period of one year after the first date of the public offering of the Debentures.

The Company authorizes the Underwriters to advertise the Debentures in the manner permitted by the Rules and Regulations of the Securities and Exchange Commission by means of the Newspaper Prospectus.

Payment for the Debentures which the Underwriters severally agree to purchase shall be made by or for the accounts of the several underwriters to the Company or its order by certified check in New York Clearing House funds at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., 23 Wall Street, New York, N. Y., at such time, on or after July 24, 1939, but not later than July 28, 1939, as may be designated by you. Such payment shall be made upon delivery to you for account of the several Underwriters of the Debentures in temporary form, in the denomination of $1,000 each, exchangeable in New York City for definitive Debentures without charge to the holders. The date and time of such payment and delivery are herein referred to as the closing date.

IV

The Company agrees that it will apply the net proceeds (exclusive of accrued interest) from the sale of the Debentures toward the redemption on or before September 1, 1939 of (a) $57,427,000 principal amount of Shell Union Oil Corporation Fifteen-Year 3½% Debentures, due March 1, 1951, at 102½% of the principal amount thereof ($58,862,875) and (b) $25,000,000 principal amount of Shell Union Oil Corporation Fifteen Year 3% Sinking Fund Debentures, due June 1, 1953, at 104% of the principal amount thereof ($26,000,000). On the closing date, the Company, for the purposes of such redemption, will deposit in trust with the respective trustees or paying agents an amount in cash equivalent to the full redemption prices, including interest to the redemption dates of said Fifteen-Year 3½% Debentures, and of said Fifteen Year 3% Sinking Fund Debentures.

The several obligations of the Underwriters hereunder are subject to the following conditions:

(a) The Registration Statement shall have become effective not later than July 18, 1939, and no stop order suspending the effectiveness thereof shall have been issued on or prior to the closing date, and no proceedings for that purpose shall have been commenced or, to the Company's knowledge, be about to be commenced by the Securities and Exchange Commission on or prior to the closing date other than proceedings which may have been disposed of by that date in a manner satisfactory to you; and you shall have received, prior to payment by the Underwriters for the Debentures:

(i) a certificate, dated the closing date, signed by the President or a Vice-President of the Company, to the effect that no such stop order has been issued and that no proceedings for such purpose have been so taken or, to the Company's knowledge, are about to be commenced, other than proceedings which may have been disposed of in a manner satisfactory to you;

(ii) an opinion or opinions of Messrs. Davis Polk Wardwell Gardiner & Reed, counsel for the Underwriters, to the effect that (1) proper corporate proceedings have been taken so that the Trust Agreement is a valid and binding instrument in accordance with its terms, the Debentures have been validly authorized, and when duly executed by proper officers of the Company, duly authenticated by the Trustee, and delivered and paid for, will be validly issued and outstanding, and (2) the Registration Statement, the Prospectus and any supplements or amendments thereto, and the Newspaper Prospectus comply with the Securities Act of 1933, as amended, and the Rules and Regulations of the Securities and Exchange Commission thereunder;

(iii) an opinion or opinions, satisfactory to counsel for the Underwriters, of Messrs. Wickes, Neilson & Riddell, counsel for the Company, to the same effect as the opinion or opinions of Messrs. Davis Polk Wardwell Gardiner & Reed referred to in (ii) above, and further to the effect that (1) the Company has been duly incorporated and is on the closing date validly existing under the laws of the State of Delaware, and (2) neither the Company nor any subsidiary is a "public utility", a "gas utility", or a "holding company" within the meaning of the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935; and that the consent or order of no state commission or other governmental body is required for the valid creation or issuance of the Debentures or the valid execution and delivery of the Trust Agreement or that all such consents or orders required have been obtained;

(iv) a certificate, dated the closing date, signed by the President or a Vice-President of the Company, to the effect that there has been no material change in the condition of the Company, or of its subsidiaries, from the condition set forth in the Registration Statement and the Prospectus, other than changes arising from transactions in the ordinary course of business.

(b) The representations and warranties of the Company herein shall be true and correct and the Company shall not have failed on or prior to the closing date to have performed all agreements herein contained which should have been performed on its part at or prior to such date.

VI

In further consideration of the agreements of the Underwriters herein contained, the Company covenants as follows:

(a) As soon as the Company is advised thereof, to advise you, and confirm the advice in writing, (1) when the Registration Statement has become effective and (2) of the issuance by the Securities and Exchange Commission of any stop order suspending the effectiveness of the Registration Statement or of the initiation of any proceedings for that purpose.

(b) To deliver to each of the Underwriters without charge on or before the effective date of the Registration Statement, and from time to time thereafter during the period of one year from the first date of the public offering of the Debentures so many copies of the Prospectus (as supplemented or amended if the Company shall have made any supplements or amendments thereto) as you may reasonably request.

(c) To deliver to you without charge 175 copies of the Registration Statement (including financial statements and exhibits) and of any amendments thereto.

(d) Before filing any amendments to the Registration Statement after it has become effective or before making any amendments or supplements to the Prospectus, to furnish you with a copy of such proposed amendments or supplements.

(e) For a period of one year after the first date of the public offering of the Debentures, if any event shall occur as a result of which it is necessary to amend or supplement the Prospectus in order to make the statements therein, in the light of the circumstances when the Prospectus is delivered to a purchaser, not misleading, forthwith to prepare and furnish, at its own expense, to the Underwriters and to the dealers (whose names and addresses you will furnish to the Company) to whom Debentures may have been sold by you on behalf of the Underwriters and, upon request, to any other dealers making such request, either amendments to the Prospectus or supplemental information so that the statements in the Prospectus as so amended and supplemented will not, in the light of the circumstances when the Prospectus is delivered to a purchaser, be misleading.

(f) To make generally available to the Company's security holders as soon as practicable an earning statement covering a period of twelve months beginning on the first day of the calendar month after the effective date of the Registration Statement, which earning statement shall satisfy the provisions of Section 11 (a) of the Securities Act of 1933, as amended.

(g) So long as any of the Debentures shall remain outstanding, to publish annually consolidated income statements, balance sheets and statements of summary of changes in surplus of the Company and its subsidiaries consolidated, all such statements to be audited by independent public accountants.

(h) To make application for the listing of the Debentures on the New York Stock Exchange and for their registration under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.

(i) To endeavor to qualify the Debentures for offer and sale under the securities or Blue Sky laws of such States as you shall request in writing.

(j) To indemnify and hold harmless each of the Underwriters and each person, if any, who controls any Underwriter within the meaning of Section 15 of the Securities Act of 1933, as amended, and each and all and any of them against any and all losses, claims, damages or liabilities, joint or several, to which they or any of them may become subject under the Securities Act of 1933, as amended, or at common law, and except as hereinafter provided, to reimburse each of the Underwriters and each such controlling person for any legal or other expenses incurred by it or them in connection with defending any actions, in so far as such losses, claims, damages, liabilities or actions arise out of or are based upon any untrue statement or alleged untrue statement of a material fact contained in the Registration Statement or in the Prospectus (if used within one year after the first date of the public offering of the Debentures and as supplemented or amended if the Company shall furnish to the Underwriters any supplements or amendments thereto) or in the Newspaper Prospectus, or arise out of or are based upon the omission or alleged omission to state therein a material fact required to be stated therein or necessary to make the statements therein not misleading, except in so far as such losses, claims, damages, liabilities or actions arise out of or are based upon any such untrue statement or omission or alleged untrue statement or omission, which was made in such Registration Statement, or Prospectus or Newspaper Prospectus in reliance upon information furnished in writing to the Company by any Underwriter expressly for use therein. Each Underwriter agrees that, promptly upon receipt of notice of the commencement of any action against such Underwriter or against any person so controlling such Underwriter in respect of which indemnity or reimbursement may be sought from the Company on account of its agreement contained in this paragraph, notice will be given to the Company in writing of the commencement thereof, but the omission so to notify the Company of any such action shall not release the Company from any liability which it may have to such Underwriter or to any such controlling person otherwise than on account of the indemnity agreement contained in this paragraph. In case any such action shall be brought against any Underwriter or against any such controlling person and notice shall be given to the Company of the commencement thereof, the Company shall be entitled to participate in, and, to the extent that it shall wish, including the selection of counsel, to direct the defense thereof at its own expense. Any Underwriter or any such controlling person shall have the right to employ its or their own counsel although the Company has so selected counsel in any such case, but the fees and expenses of such counsel shall be at the expense of such Underwriter or such controlling person unless the employment of such counsel has been authorized by the Company in connection with defending such action.

Each Underwriter agrees to indemnify and hold harmless the Company against any and all losses, claims, damages or liabilities, joint or several, to which it may become subject under the Securities Act of 1933, as amended, or at common law, and to reimburse the Company for any legal or other expenses incurred by it in connection with defending any actions, in so far as such losses, claims, damages, liabilities or actions arise out of or are based upon any untrue statement or alleged untrue statement of a material fact contained in the Registration Statement or in the Prospectus (if used within one year after the first date of the public offering of the Debentures and as supplemented or amended if the Company shall furnish to the Underwriters any supplements or amendments thereto) or in the Newspaper Prospectus, or arise out of or are based upon the omission or alleged omission to state therein a material fact required to be stated therein or necessary to make the statements therein not misleading, which untrue statement or omission or alleged untrue statement or omission was made in such Registration Statement, or Prospectus or Newspaper Prospectus in reliance upon information furnished in writing to the Company by such Underwriter expressly for use therein. The Company agrees promptly upon receipt of notice of the commencement of any action against the Company in respect of which indemnity or reimbursement may be sought from an Underwriter on account of its agreement contained in this paragraph, to notify such Underwriter in writing of the commencement thereof, but the omission of the Company so to notify such Underwriter of any such action shall not release such Underwriter from any liability which it may have to the Company otherwise than on account of the indemnity agreement contained in this paragraph. In case any such action shall be brought against the Company and the Company shall notify an Underwriter from whom indemnity or reimbursement may be sought on account of its agreement contained in this paragraph of the commencement thereof, such Underwriter shall be entitled to participate in and, to the extent that it shall wish, including the selection of counsel, to direct, the defense thereof at its own expense. The Company shall have the right to employ its own counsel although the Underwriter has so selected counsel in any such case, but the fees and expenses of such counsel shall be at the expense of the Company unless the employment of such counsel has been authorized by the Underwriter in connection with defending such action.

The indemnity agreements contained in this Article VI (j) and the representations and warranties of the Company in this Agreement set forth shall remain operative and in full force and effect regardless of (a) any termination of this Agreement, (b) any investigation made by or on behalf of any Underwriter or controlling person or by or on behalf of the Company and (c) acceptance and payment hereunder for the Debentures.

VII

This agreement shall become effective when the Registration Statement becomes effective and until such time this Agreement may be terminated by the Company, by notifying you at your office, 2 Wall Street, New York, N. Y., or by such number of Underwriters who have in the aggregate agreed to purchase more than $42,500,000 principal amount of the Debentures, by notifying the Company at its office, 50 West 50th Street, New York, N. Y. Any such notice may be in writing or by telegraph or by telephone and, if by telegraph or by telephone, shall be subsequently confirmed in writing.

If any of the Underwriters shall fail or refuse (whether for some reason sufficient to justify its cancellation or termination of its obligation to purchase hereunder or otherwise) to purchase the principal amount of the Debentures which it has hereunder agreed to purchase, the Company shall immediately notify the remaining Underwriters, at the respective addresses set forth in the Registration Statement, who may within twenty-four hours of receipt of such notice purchase or agree to purchase or procure some other responsible party or parties satisfactory to the Company to purchase or agree to purchase such Debentures on the terms herein set forth; and if the remaining Underwriters fail to purchase or agree to purchase or to procure a satisfactory party or satisfactory parties to purchase or agree to purchase such Debentures on such terms within twenty-four hours of the receipt of such notice, then the Company shall be entitled to an additional period of twenty-four hours within which to procure another party or parties to purchase or agree to purchase such Debentures on the terms herein set forth. In any such case either you or the Company shall have the right to postpone the closing date from the date determined as provided in Article III hereof, but in no event to a date later than August 1, 1939, in order that necessary changes and arrangements may be effected by you and by the Company. If the remaining Underwriters fail to purchase or agree to purchase or to procure a satisfactory party or parties to purchase or agree to purchase such Debentures, and if the Company also does not procure another party or parties to purchase or agree to purchase such Debentures, within the aforesaid periods, then this Agreement may be terminated, either by the Company or by Underwriters who have in the aggregate agreed to purchase more than 50% of the principal amount of the Debentures other than the Debentures which one or more Underwriters shall have failed or refused to purchase. In the event of any such termination the Company shall not be under any liability to any Underwriter, nor shall any Underwriter (other than an Underwriter who shall have failed or refused to purchase Debentures without some reason sufficient to justify its cancellation or termination of its obligation hereunder) be under liability to the Company.

If this Agreement shall be terminated by the Underwriters, or any of them, because of any failure or refusal on the part of the Company to comply with the terms or to fulfill any of the conditions of this Agreement, or if for any reason the Company shall be unable to perform its obligations under this Agreement, or if the Company shall terminate this Agreement under the option contained in the first paragraph of this Article VII, the Company will reimburse the Underwriters or such underwriters as have so terminated this Agreement with respect to themselves, severally, for all of their out-of-pocket expenses (including the fees and disbursements of their counsel) reasonably incurred by them.

VIII

The Agreement herein set forth has been and is made solely for the benefit of the Underwriters and the Company, their successors and assigns, and, to the extent expressed, for the benefit of persons controlling Underwriters and of dealers purchasing Debentures, their successors and assigns, and no other person shall acquire or have any right under or by virtue of this Agreement. The term "successors and assigns" shall not include any purchaser of the Debentures merely because of such purchase.

Please confirm that the foregoing correctly sets forth the agreement between us.

Very truly yours,

EXHIBIT 1

MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INCORPORATED
Two Wall Street, New York

$85,000,000 SHELL UNION OIL CORPORATION FIFTEEN YEAR 2½% DEBENTURES

Dated July 1, 1939

Due July 1, 1954
NEW YORK, July 19, 1939.

DEAR SIR: We and the other Underwriters named in the Offering Prospectus have severally agreed to purchase, subject to the terms and conditions of our Purchase Agreement, at 96¼% of the principal amount thereof, and accrued interest to the date of payment therefor, an aggregate of $85,000,000 principal amount of Shell Union Oil Corporation (hereinafter called the Company) Fifteen Year 2½% Debentures (hereinafter called the Debentures), to be dated July 1, 1939, and to mature July 1, 1954, and more fully described in the enclosed copy of the Offering Prospectus.

A part of the $85,000,000 principal amount of the Debentures is being offered for sale, when, as and if issued and accepted by the several Underwriters and subject to the approval of their counsel and to the other terms and conditions hereof, to dealers at 97¾% of the principal amount thereof—the public offering price—and accrued interest, less a concession of ½%, payable as hereinafter provided. No deduction from this concession will be made for expenses. Out of the above-stated concession of ½%, dealers may allow a concession not in excess of ¼% to brokers or dealers only, provided that such concession is not reallocated to a customer in any case.

We are advising you by telegram of the principal amount of Debentures reserved for purchase by you, subject to the terms and conditions hereof. Such Debentures will be reserved for purchase by you until 4 o'clock P. M. (standard time in your city), Wednesday, July 19, 1939. Please advise us at our office, 2 Wall Street, New York City, by the time specified, whether or not you agree to purchase, on the terms and conditions hereof, all or any part of such reserved Debentures. Applications for Debentures in excess of the amount so reserved and applications received after 4 o'clock P. M. (standard time in the applicant's city), Wednesday, July 19, 1939, will be received only subject to allotment by us in our uncontrolled discretion.

We have been advised by the Company that a Registration Statement in respect of these Debentures under the Securities Act of 1933, as amended, has become effective. Neither you nor any other person is authorized by the Company or by the Underwriters to give any information or make any representations, other than those contained in the Offering Prospectus, in connection with the issue and sale of the Debentures. No dealer is authorized to act as agent for the several Underwriters when offering the Debentures to the public or otherwise. The Company has agreed with the Underwriters that for a period of one year after the first date of the public offering of the Debentures, if any event shall occur as a result of which it is necessary to amend or supplement the Prospectus in order to make the statements therein, in the light of the circumstances when the Prospectus is delivered to a purchaser, not misleading, forthwith to prepare and furnish, at its own expense, to the Underwriters and to the dealers to whom Debentures may have been sold by us on behalf of the Underwriters and, upon request, to any other dealers making such request, either amendments to the Prospectus or supplemental information so that the statements in the Prospectus as so amended and supplemented will not, in the light of the circumstances when the Prospectus is delivered to a purchaser, be misleading.

You may offer the Debentures Wednesday morning, July 19, 1939, subject to the foregoing and to the above referred to conditions of the Purchase Agreement of the Underwriters. No dealer shall enter, either directly or indirectly, into any agreement or arrangement with any purchaser of the Debentures whereby such dealer accepts Shell Union Oil Corporation Fifteen-Year $3\frac{1}{2}\%$ Debentures dated March 1, 1936 and due March 1, 1951 or Shell Union Oil Corporation Fifteen Year $3\frac{3}{8}\%$ Sinking Fund Debentures, due June 1, 1953, (both of which issues the Company intends to redeem on or before September 1, 1939) in payment of all or any part of the purchase price of the Debentures at any price in excess of $102\frac{1}{2}\%$ for the $3\frac{1}{2}\%$ Debentures or 104% for the $3\frac{3}{8}\%$ Debentures and accrued interest in either case to the redemption date.

Public advertisement of the Debentures will be made July 19, 1939. After that date, you may advertise on your own responsibility over your own name and at your own expense. Additional copies of the Offering Prospectus will be supplied in reasonable quantities upon request.

The Debentures purchased by the Underwriters which are not being offered to dealers in accordance with the terms of this Agreement are being offered for sale by certain of the Underwriters, all of whom have agreed with respect to the sale of Debentures to comply with the terms and conditions of this Agreement. All of such Underwriters have agreed that they will not sell or offer to sell or solicit offers to buy Debentures prior to the public offering.

Payment for Debentures purchased by you is to be made by certified check at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., 23 Wall Street, New York City, at the public offering price, and accrued interest to the date of payment therefor, on July 24, 1939, or such later date as we may advise, in New York Clearing House funds to the order of Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated, against delivery of temporary Debentures. The concession to which you shall be entitled will be paid to you upon the termination of this Agreement. Notwithstanding the distribution of any such amount to you, you agree to pay your proportionate share of any claim, demand or liability asserted against you and the other dealers to whom Debentures are sold in accordance with the terms of this Agreement or any of them, or against us as Manager of the offering, based on the claim that such dealers constitute an association, unincorporated business or other separate entity.

In the event that prior to the termination of this Agreement (or prior to such earlier date as we may determine), we purchase for the account of any of the several Underwriters, in the open market or otherwise, at or below the public offering price, any Debentures delivered to you, we reserve the right to withhold the above-mentioned concession on such Debentures.

This Agreement will terminate on September 23, 1939, unless sooner terminated by us.

As Manager of the offering, we shall have full authority to take such action as we may deem advisable in respect of all matters pertaining to the offering. As Manager, we shall be under no liability to you for or in respect of the validity of, or the form of, or the representations contained in, the Debentures or the Registration Statement or the Offering Prospectus or the Newspaper Prospectus or the Agreement with the Company for the purchase of the Debentures or other instruments executed by the Company or by others; or for the delivery of the Debentures or the performance by the Company or by others of any agreement on its or their part; or for the qualification of the Debentures for sale under the laws of any jurisdiction; or for any matter connected with this Agreement, except for lack of good faith and for obligations expressly assumed by us in this Agreement. This offer of Debentures to dealers is made in each state only by such of the Underwriters as may lawfully sell the Debentures to dealers in such state.

Each of the Several Underwriters has authorized us for its account, during the term of agreements between us and the several Underwriters (which agreements will terminate thirty days after the termination of this Agreement, or on such earlier date as we may determine), (1) to buy and to sell Debentures, in addition to the Debentures sold to dealers pursuant to the terms of this Agreement, in the open market or otherwise, for either long or short account, on such terms and at such prices as we may deem desirable, and (2) in arranging for sales to dealers pursuant to the terms of this Agreement to over-allot, it being understood that such purchases and sales and over-allotments shall be made for the account of each of the several Underwriters as nearly as practicable in proportion to the respective principal amounts of Debentures which the Underwriters severally have agreed to purchase from the Company; provided, however, that at no time shall the net commitment of any Underwriter under such provisions of said agreements, for either long or short account, exceed 10% of the principal amount of Debentures which any such Underwriter has agreed to purchase from the Company.

Each of the several Underwriters reserves the right to make purchases and sales of the Debentures in the ordinary course of business, and not for the purpose of stabilizing the price of any security, for its own account, in the open market or otherwise, for either long or short account.

Please advise us whether or not you agree to purchase all or any part of the Debentures reserved for you, and if you so agree please confirm your purchase by signing, in the manner indicated on the reverse hereof, and returning to us the duplicate copy of this letter enclosed herewith.

Very truly yours,

MEMORANDA

Jan. 2, 1937. Mr. ——— called to say that his firm was established January 1, 1936 and requested partici-pations in issues which we underwrite. Their capital is $75,000 of which $50,000 is in cash—balance in securities. They now have 8 salesmen, 3 of whom devote their entire time to the distribution of corporate bonds in and around Philadelphia. For the past year their bond volume has been approximately 75% corporates—25% municipal issues. In addition to covering the large institutional accounts in the city they have many private investor clients. 4M Philadelphia Electric 3 1/2s repurchased below the offering prior after removal of price restrictions.

Dec. 13, 1937. Mr. ——— called to advise that in connection with their allotment of 15M Philadelphia Electric 3 1/2s, they had distributed the bonds to six different accounts. Mentioned the fact that they now also receive participations from a number of other underwriters.

Feb. 11, 1938. Visited this firm and talked with Mr. ——— and Mr. ———. Capital remains unchanged. Now have 10 salesmen, 4 of whom devote most of their time to the distribution of high-grade corporate bonds. Stated that private investors were practically out of the market for low coupon bonds but that there has been some buying by Trust Funds. Stated that with their increased distribution and sales force they would like to be considered for larger amounts.

Dec. 2, 1938. Mr. ——— wrote, stating that they had recently opened an office in Wilmington. They will be one salesman in this office who will cover Wilmington, Baltimore and Washington. Mr. ——— who had left this firm in 1937 has now rejoined them as a vice president. He sells mostly to trust accounts in the larger banks in Philadelphia.

Feb. 3, 1939. Messrs. ——— and ——— called. Stated that the distribution in 1938 of corporate bonds had been approximately $3,000,000—mostly to institutions. Capital remains $75,000.

Aug. 10, 1939. Mr. ——— called and after discussing present bond markets said they had declined 20M Shell Union Oil Debentures due to the fact that they had been unable to distribute them to their clients and did not feel justified in retaining the bonds for their own account inasmuch as the selling commission was only 1/2 point.

Memorandum of October 16, 1939

THE SYNDICATION OF NEW ISSUES OF CORPORATE SECURITIES

No clear-cut rules-of-thumb can be followed in the formation of selling groups. The circumstances surrounding each offering usually vary, and all factors must be considered in arriving at decisions concerning the composition of a group. No more than a few of these factors can be discussed in this memorandum, which outlines the general principles underlying the formation of selling groups and reviews some of the specific problems encountered.

GENERAL PRINCIPLES

Those responsible for the formation of selling groups must give primary consideration to three basic factors when a new issue of securities is about to be offered to the public. These three basic factors are:

- The state of the then existing market for securities,
- The character of the issue to be offered—whether investment or speculative characteristics predominate—whether it is an issue of bonds, preferred stock or common stock, and
- The size of the total commitment about to be undertaken.

Each of these three basic factors may profoundly affect the syndication of an issue. Those responsible for syndication must plan the arrangements with respect to each issue in the light of these factors and, in so doing, determine the identity and aggregate number of dealers to be included in the selling group. The objective is to achieve distribution with a broad group of ultimate investors who, under the market conditions prevailing at the time, represent the most desirable market for an issue of the quality, type and size of the issue to be offered.

It is seldom an easy matter to determine the number and identity of the dealers to be included in the selling group for an issue of a particular size, type and quality and under a given set of market conditions. The selling group should generally include a substantial number if the issue is large, and a smaller number if the issue is small, but market conditions or other factors frequently are such that this customary procedure may be inadvisable.

Managing underwriters endeavor to select as members of a selling group those dealers who, under the circumstances then prevailing, appear best qualified to assist in successful distribution of the offering. The managing underwriter of an issue reaches decisions in this respect on the basis of information which he has collected concerning the special qualifications of each dealer.

It merits emphasis that the success with which a managing underwriter syndicates issues is in large measure due to the experience developed by the officers or partners of the house over a period of years in the selection of members of selling groups, for a variety of issues and under a variety of market conditions. It is this background of experience which really counts. The syndicate lists, syndicate records and classification systems built up by the syndicate departments of the leading underwriting houses are merely tools to assist the officers or partners of a managing underwriter in arriving at decisions with respect to the composition of selling groups. The tools should not be considered as automatic in their operation. They prove useful only in the light of the experience and judgment of those making use of the tools.

THE SYNDICATE LIST

A typical syndicate list provides a working list from which dealers to be offered participations in selling groups are selected.

A typical syndicate list will include the names of virtually all of the leading investment banking houses of the country which have sufficient capital to engage in underwriting on a sizable scale. In addition, such a list will include the names of those who are believed to be the leading dealers in each of the more important financial centers throughout the country. It will also include a number of smaller dealers both in the large cities and smaller cities and towns, who have demonstrated their ability to distribute issues. In general, it can be said that syndicate managers are always glad to talk with dealers who wish to be placed on syndicate lists and to hear from them the reasons why they think they should be included in selling groups. Careful consideration is given to the facts made available by dealers in the course of such discussions and in general practice names are added if it appears that the applicant-dealers can make a real contribution to the success of the distribution of issues, always provided, of course, that the syndicate manager consulted is satisfied that the applicant-dealers are of good character and reputation.

A dealer whose name appears on a typical syndicate list is by no means assured that he will be offered a selling group participation in all issues publicly offered by the underwriter concerned. Most selling groups range in size between one-quarter and three-quarters of the aggregate number of dealers whose names appear in a typical list. The size of the group in any particular instance depends upon the quality, type and size of the issue and on market conditions prevailing at the time of offering. Dealers are chosen on the basis of their ability to contribute to successful solution of the distribution problem presented by the issue.

It is generally the case when a selling group is formed that a number of dealers who had not previously appeared in a typical syndicate list will be included in the group. Some of these may subsequently remain on the syndicate list. Other names will be removed. Many well-established businesses depend for their effectiveness on the ability of one man. When he retires, dies or is incapacitated, the business no longer occupies the same position in the industry. Other dealers go down-hill for other reasons. Newer and more vigorous organizations replace them and over a period of time additions to a typical syndicate list will be about as numerous as removals. The number of names on a typical list remains fairly constant.

Information concerning dealers becomes available to a managing underwriter in various ways of which the most important are conversations between the syndicate manager and dealers, and inspection of the record of past performance by dealers on issues managed by the underwriter. Each managing underwriter has his own system for gathering this information into its syndicate records in a form convenient for instant use when the occasion arises. In this memorandum we are discussing a typical list and the system employed in keeping it up to date.

THE SYNDICATE RECORDS

In the case of the typical list under discussion, information about dealers obtained by the syndicate department is condensed into a brief record which is entered on "Syndicate Record Cards" and revised from time to time as new information becomes available. Part of this information is obtained during business calls at the principal office of the underwriter by dealers and their representatives, during business trips by the partners or officers of the underwriter in charge of syndicate operations to various financial centers, and from reports by managers and representatives of branch offices. The most important portion of the information is a record of the past performance of each dealer in the distribution of issues made available to him from time to time.

A syndicate department must know the answers to the following questions about dealers: To what extent does a dealer succeed in finding buyers in his territory for various types of securities? Is he a specialist in bonds suitable for institutional investment and is he outstandingly successful or only moderately so in meeting the demands of this market? Has the dealer developed good business with country banks and individuals in bonds below first grade? Does the dealer reach the market among individuals and others in his territory for more speculative high-return preferred and common stocks? How alert is the dealer in obtaining his share of the business available in his territory?

The following summary shows the information entered on a typical syndicate record card to disclose the answers to these questions:

On a separate card for each dealer an entry is made of the dealer's record of past performance on issues offered to him. This card shows the date of the issue; the title of the issue; the amount of underwriting interest, if any, of the dealer; the type of offering, either firm or subscription; the amount offered to the dealer in the selling group; the amount accepted by the dealer; the amount of his additional sales, if any; his total sales of the issue on selling group terms; and the amount of open-market repurchases by the syndicate manager of securities sold to the dealer, divided into securities repurchased with penalty and without penalty.

The card described above is the basic record with respect to each dealer. All other information is entered on a second card, which contains:

1. The name of the dealer and the address to which communications are to be sent.
2. The name of the individual with whom business contacts are maintained on matters relating to syndicate operations.
3. A brief history of the dealer and a summary of information relating to his character and reputation.
4. A list of the cities in which the dealer maintains offices. This list gives the geographical scope of the dealer's activities.
5. The number of salesmen employed by the dealer. This figure gives some idea of the intensity and breadth of the dealer's operations.
6. A notation whether the dealer's territory is predominantly urban or rural.
7. Notations concerning the types of investors reached by the dealer—institutions, banks in the larger centers, country banks, individuals, etc.
8. A note on the securities, if any, in the distribution of which the dealer makes a specialty, such as municipal bonds, local utility preferred stocks, investment trusts, etc. This data frequently gives an especially accurate lead on the dealer's ability to reach certain markets in his territory.
9. An estimate of the capital resources of the dealer. Inasmuch as participants in selling groups have an opportunity to place their participations before deciding to accept or decline the offer, the capital resources of selling group members are not of major importance to the managing underwriter in deciding whether such dealers should be included in a selling group. Nevertheless, information concerning the capital resources of dealers is of interest to managing underwriters as an indication of the conservatism with which the dealer conducts his operations and as in some degree a measure of the success with which the dealer has conducted his business.
10. A notation (either 1, 2 or 3) which indicates the quantity of day to day trading business, using the size of the dealer as a base, in other than new issues, of each dealer with the underwriter concerned in the latter's capacity as a dealer. A small dealer who does the same volume of trading business with the underwriter concerned as a larger dealer, might be noted under (1) whereas the larger dealer would be noted under (2). These notations give a further indication of the ability of a dealer to meet the supply-demand conditions in his market.
11. A notation of the approximate minimum and average amounts which a dealer might be offered in a selling group. This notation is by no means rigidly adhered to when the participations of selling group members are worked out for a specific issue, but it is useful as a guide.

It will be noted that much of the information on the syndicate record cards is of a confidential nature and that the records are maintained solely for the information of the officers or partners of the underwriter concerned who are responsible for the formation of selling groups. In general, the record cards serve two purposes. These are, first, to provide a ready reference source from which to answer the questions most likely to arise in discussions, which are usually prolonged, preceding the formation of selling groups, and, second, to provide a basis by which dealers may be classified in an orderly manner to lighten the work of selecting selling group members best qualified to distribute a specific issue in the light of the type, size and quality of the issue and the market conditions prevailing at the time of offering.

All names in the typical syndicate list under discussion are divided into three classification groups (called the A, B and C groups) and the classification into which each dealer is placed is noted on the syndicate record card relating to the dealer. There has also been marked after the letter symbol of certain of the dealers, the note "Und." This has been done to mark clearly dealers who are believed to have sufficient capital and distribution to warrant their inclusion in underwriting groups from time to time. The classifications are intended to convey a measure of the consistency of the distributing ability of each dealer with respect to various types of issue.

The A group includes those dealers who are believed to be consistently able to place amounts of any issue which meets a moderately receptive market. These are the dealers to whom the underwriter concerned is most likely to turn in forming a selling group. The larger dealers who frequently act as underwriters are almost without exception included in this group and any dealer who is believed to be actively in touch with all phases of the market in his territory is also included. Size is not necessarily a controlling criterion, although the average size of the dealers in the A group is probably considerably larger than the average size in the B and C groups. The A group, in fact, will be found to include several one-man firms who have been particularly successful in conducting business in their cities. Likewise, capital resources are not a controlling criterion, although the bottom limit on the capital resources of a dealer in the A group is probably in the neighborhood of $10,000. Consistency of past performance is the major criterion in the classification of dealers. The amounts or the size of the dealer's expected distribution are a secondary consideration.

The B group includes dealers whose performance records are for one reason or another not as good as the records of the dealers in the A group. For example, a dealer whose customers are largely country banks might be expected to do a good job in selling a public utility bond issue yielding 4.50% but might not be able to sell any shares of a high grade preferred stock issue yielding 4.00%. He probably would be classed as a B dealer. Several old-line houses of the highest reputation, who decline all participations except those in issues rated "Aa" and "Aaa" by the statistical services, are also classed as B dealers. The B classification shows a less consistent performance record and dealers in this classification are generally offered participations in selling groups only after consideration has been given to the special qualifications of the dealer to handle each issue.

Even more consideration is given to the qualifications of dealers in the C group before they are offered participations in selling groups. These are dealers whose performance record is less satisfactory than the records of the B dealers. Many of the C dealers have not yet had an opportunity to demonstrate over a period of years their ability to contribute to the successful distribution of new issues. Many of these dealers are unseasoned in the business.

Changes in classification for dealers are made from time to time as conditions warrant, but the number of dealers in each of the three groups tends to remain fairly constant.

The A, B and C classifications are in no sense a measure of the financial probity of the dealers. The underwriter concerned is not likely to have any reason to suspect the financial or business integrity of any dealer on his syndicate list.

The typical syndicate list, the syndicate record cards and the classifications represent a condensation into written form of the judgments reached by those responsible for the operation of the syndicate department of the underwriter concerned relating to the qualifications of each dealer. The cards and classifications are nothing more than a ready reference system for use in discussions. Each selling group presents a different problem which must be met in the best possible manner on the basis of the available information and in the light of the type, size and quality of the issue to be offered and the market conditions existing at the time.

FORMATION OF SELLING GROUPS

When a managing underwriter offers a group of dealers fixed participations (as distinguished from subscription participations) in a new issue, his hope is that each dealer receiving an offer will accept 100% of the offer. A certain portion of the bonds of each new issue will customarily be reserved for retail distribution by underwriters. The remainder will be offered through the selling group. In the aggregate, the amount of securities offered to underwriters and selling group dealers may be slightly in excess, but less than 110%, of the total amount of the issue with a view to minimizing the effect of non-acceptances from dealers who have received offerings. If dealers receiving offers of, say, 25% of the issue decline, the offering is not successful until underwriters and the remaining selling group members make additional sales to a point where the entire issue is placed.

Good syndication may be defined as selecting a high percentage of dealers who accept selling group participations up to the full amount of each offer.

Notwithstanding the use of great care in selecting selling group dealers for an issue which meets an unresponsive market, an issue is frequently destined to be unsuccessful because of market conditions. Likewise, careless selection of selling group members may not prove to be a handicap if an issue meets a nation-wide demand from many different types of investors. But in the majority of cases, careful selection of selling group members is an important and essential factor in the successful distribution of an issue.

In recent years, it is not probable that any managing underwriter has offered selling group participations in an issue of highest grade public utility bonds to be sold at a price to yield 3.00% to dealers whose business is restricted to the sale of open-end investment trusts to individual customers, since such individuals have not been in the market for bonds yielding 3.00%. Nor is it likely that a managing underwriter would include in the selling group for an issue of convertible preferred stock, dealers whose business transactions are solely with insurance companies and banks in one of the larger financial centers, since these institutions are not in the market for speculative securities.

The backbone of a syndicate list consists of those dealers in various parts of the United States who are keenly alert to the opportunities to do business in all types of securities; those who can find the demand for an issue if the demand exists in their territories. There is an intermediate group which can be counted upon to do good work in distribution of special types of issues and there is a third group which is not so alert and cannot be counted upon for consistent performance. Chief reliance is necessarily placed on the dealers included in the A group in a typical syndicate list.

It has previously been indicated that the basic factors which should govern the composition of a selling group are market conditions and the size, quality and type of issue. Some of the problems which may arise in this connection can be illustrated by a few examples.

An issue of $10,000,000 of medium-grade industrial ten-year debentures, to be offered at a price to yield 4.00%, is expected to prove unattractive to insurance companies and individuals, but to be moderately attractive to national banks. The issue is small but the distribution problem is difficult. Under these circumstances, it is probable that the selection of selling group dealers would be restricted to the majority of dealers in the A group plus a selection of B and C dealers who had demonstrated an ability to handle similar pieces of business. As the list of dealers in this instance are fewer and selective, many of the dealers would receive relatively larger offerings.

An issue of $10,000,000 of preferred stock of an industrial company, to be offered at a price to yield 4.50%, is expected to find its market primarily with individual investors interested in income, rather than price appreciation. The issue would probably be offered to a larger number of dealers and the participations offered each dealer might be considerably smaller than customary. While the proportion of non-acceptances might be quite high, the hope would be that several dealers on the A, B and C lists would find purchasers for larger amounts than had been offered to such dealers and that additional sales to these dealers, together with acceptances by other dealers, would be sufficient to result in sale of the entire issue. By scattering his shots, the manager succeeds in this case in finding an ultimate market for the preferred stock.

Geographical considerations are frequently of prime importance. An issue may be expected to be in great demand in the state in which the issuer is situated but is expected to lack appeal in other states. In this case, the selling group contains a relatively large number of dealers in the home state of the issuer. Sometimes too, tax refunds in Pennsylvania or legality for savings banks in certain states have an important bearing on the composition of a selling group.

In those few instances where no special problems exist in connection with the formation of selling groups, first consideration is given to the dealers who have had a good record of past performance on issues managed by the underwriter concerned.

It is frequently not possible to include certain dealers in selling groups who might logically expect to be included. Some of the larger underwriting houses never accept selling group participations in an issue of which they are not an underwriter for an amount less than a fixed minimum, say $250,000 or $100,000. When inclusion of such a dealer in the selling group with a participation acceptable to him would not be practical because of the size of the issue or because of the type of distribution desired, the managing underwriter usually omits such dealer.

The purpose of distribution through a nation-wide selling group is to obtain broad distribution, in small blocks, with a large number of ultimate investors. An issue is said to be well-placed if it is distributed in this manner. Distribution in large blocks is generally considered undesirable because a large block may upset the secondary market for the issue when the holder decides to sell. At times, however, it is virtually necessary to distribute issues in relatively large blocks because of the condition of the market.

In general, it may be said that the best way to obtain wide distribution with ultimate investors is to make offerings through a large number of dealers who maintain close contact with all types of investors in their territory.

DEAR MR. YOUNG: The writer would like to take this opportunity to express his appreciation on behalf of our firm for our recent inclusion in the new financing of Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.

In connection with our participation in new underwritings we make it a practice to apprise underwriters of the character of our distribution to the end that we may continue to justify their favors in further new issues.

In the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey 15-year debentures we participated to the extent of $125,000 in the Selling Group. These bonds were distributed in our various offices in the following manner:

	No. of trans- actions	Par Value
Banks, insurance companies and other institutions.....	20	$102,000
Individual customers.....	8	23,000
Total.....	28	$125,000

In the serial note issue of the same company we participated to the extent of $75,000 in the Selling Group. These bonds were distributed in our various offices in the following manner:

	No. of trans- actions	Par Value
Banks, insurance companies and other institutions.....	10	$45,000
Individual customers.....	5	30,000
Total.....	15	$75,000

Re: Great Northern Railway, Gen. Mtg. 3s, 1967.

DEAR JOHN: We appreciate very much your offering us the 25M bonds today and regret exceedingly to have felt obligated to decline. Of course we are indebted to you for special consideration in many cases and we are ready to stay in there and pitch whenever there is any chance for us to do business. On the other hand as you undoubtedly recall we are poor on rails and our customers will not buy them except in special cases. In this particular instance I regret that I failed to notify you in advance that we would not be interested. We have been extremely busy and to be truthful I overlooked the issue entirely.

I sincerely hope that our standing with you is not impaired by declining an offering. I figure that we are not paid for any underwriting risk but are expected to do a selling job. If we make an honest effort to sell and do not succeed according to my understanding you would prefer to have us decline rather than to buy the bonds and throw them back in to the market later on.

An expression from you on the subject will be appreciated.

With best regards,

Very truly yours,

GEORGE V. ROTAN.

*Messrs. George V. Rotan Co., Esperson Building,

DEAR GEORGE: I have received your letter of January 14, 1937, with reference to Great Northern Railway Company General Mortgage 3¾% Bonds. We were glad to have these Bonds back as we had substantial orders in other markets which we could not fill unless we were able to obtain unsold Bonds.

Railroad Bonds have demonstrated themselves to be the most difficult issues to distribute under present day circumstances. However, the Great Northern has made great progress in the past few years and this is a type of Bond that can be sold well if real effort is put on it.

You are correct in saying that you are not paid for an underwriting risk but are expected to do a selling job. While a single instance of this type will not affect your record with us, yet frankly I cannot understand why a Bond of this character would not be attractive to investors in your market.

Sincerely yours,

JMY: MA.

DEAR MR. EMERSON: After thoroughly canvassing our customers it was very disappointing to us to be unable to sell any of the Shell Union Oil 2½% Debentures which you offered us today at Selling Group terms.

As Mr. Kerr and I told you when you called to see us, it is not our policy to take bonds from any syndicate unless we are able to sell them to our legitimate customers. It has come to our attention that some of our competitors have taken down these particular bonds even though they have no prospects of selling them at the offering price, fearing that if they did not do so they would jeopardize their position with you as syndicate managers. We feel our policy is better for the syndicate rather than to take the bonds and immediately dump them in the so-called bootleg market at a loss to ourselves, or to have them on our shelves as an undistributed, unknown quantity to the syndicate managers. We think the syndicate managers should at all times know exactly where we stand.

Needless to say, if our efforts to date bring results, we shall wire you to see upon what basis you could supply the bonds.

We enjoyed your friendly visit with us and hope that when you are in Los Angeles again you will have more time to give us.

Very truly yours,

LELAND M. BELL,
KERR & BELL.Leland M. Bell.

Mr. SUMNER B. EMERSON,

*Vice President, Morgan Stanley & Company, Incorp.,

DEAR SUMNER: I am sorry to say that we have done what appears to be a very poor job in the distribution of the new Shell Union bonds offered this morning. We actually had orders for 30M bonds, but of course, should have sold 3 or 4 times that many. We found that the chief objection to the bonds was not the quality but the price. There was no question in my mind of the thoroughness of our job because we covered at least 50 banks and as many individuals in western New York and Pennsylvania.

A few of the banks that did buy the bonds placed their orders at least 10 days ago. I sincerely hope that you will not think we have fallen down on the job in the distribution of one of your deals for lack of real work on it, and that you will not hold this particular record against our future participation in other deals.

Kindest regards, I remain

Cordially yours,

PHILIP H. GERNER.

Mr. PERRY HALL,
% Morgan, Stanley & Co., Inc.,
2 Wall Street, New York, New York.

DEAR PERRY: I certainly feel badly about not being able to sell any of the Shell Union or the Southern Bell Telephone issues. However, people down here simply don't seem to buy those securities. I am sure we could have used some of the Southern Bells if the premium had not been so great, but as it happens, the very day those came out we bought an issue of State of Louisiana Pension 2.30's, 2.50's and 3.00's due in 12 years and reoffered the 3.00's on a 2.65 basis. The issue is one of the very best in the State and still nobody thought that the issue was offered at a bargain price.

I certainly hope that some day this market will catch up to yours so that we can participate in national syndicates the way we did several years ago, but this does not seem to be feasible right at the present. Meanwhile, I am delighted that you won your point in that particular issue in regard to competitive bidding and hope that this present agitation for it will die down.

I have written to Mr. Ripley to ask for a copy of the pamphlet that Harri-man, Ripley is issuing on the subject and shall bring it with me to the next Times-Picayune meeting.

With best regards and hoping to see you in California this Fall, I am

Yours sincerely,

INVESTMENT BANKERS

DENVER, COLORADO, July 20, 1939.

MORGAN STANLEY & Co., INCORPORATED,
2 Wall Street, New York, N. Y.

GENTLEMEN: Please find herewith enclosed signed acceptance of the Selling Group letter on both the SHELL UNION OIL CORPORATION Debentures and the SOUTHERN BELL TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH COMPANY Debentures.

We very much appreciate your kindness in including us in these two selling groups.

In view of the fact that we only accepted $50,000 SHELL UNION OIL CORPORATION Debentures, as compared to the $85,000 Debentures which you held for us, we would like to explain that we made every possible effort to use these debentures. We canvassed our private investors, the Colorado banks, and other institutions. As a matter of fact, we had very poor success and our efforts resulted in selling only $15,000 debentures. One bank in Colorado Springs, which on the previous day had indicated that they would be interested and to whom we expected to sell either $15,000 or $25,000 debentures, told us early yesterday that they had bought bonds in Chicago at 97. They asked us not to cause any trouble over the matter but they were explaining to us why they did not place the order here. The official of the bank stated he realized that somebody was breaking the selling group agreement but he thought he was justified in taking advantage of the price. We were unable to learn the name of the firm from whom he made the purchase but we inferred that it was one of the trading houses there. You may be interested in hearing that our salesmen have reported to me that two local dealers had told them that they had purchased debentures at list less 1%. I think we might have had better success if it had not been for this price situation.

We infer that there were special reasons in relation to both issues why the debentures had to be priced at what appears to the investor as a pretty high price, and we appreciate the fact that your firm has been the champion for the entire investment banking business. We certainly shall continue to put forth our best efforts on both issues.

Sincerely yours,

ARTHUR H. BOSWORTH, Pres.

SUPPLEMENTAL DATA

The following letters are included at this point in connection with Mr. Hancock's testimony, supra, pp. 12350, 12354, 12359, 12364, 12366, 12369, 12371, 12373, 12390, and 12408.

JANUARY 27, 1940.

MR. JOHN M. HANCOCK,

Lehman Brothers, 1 William Street, New York, N. Y.

DEAR MR. HANCOCK: An examination of the transcript of the hearings before the Temporary National Economic Committee on January 8, 1940, indicates that at several points you promised to make available material which you did not then have in hand, and that in other cases you accepted certain statements subject to later correction.

These instances are listed in this letter for your convenience:

1. In connection with the financing in 1924 which resulted in the creation of the National Dairy Products Corporation, you explained that Lehman Brothers and Goldman, Sachs & Company had had equal participations in that underwriting. You were not certain of this, however, and promised to correct the record, if your recollection of this matter proved to be incorrect.

2. The question was asked, "Do you recall any instances in which Lehman Brothers afforded Goldman, Sachs an opportunity for oral argument, so to speak, before a corporation covered by the list?" Your recollection was not clear about more than one such instance, but you suggested that you would prepare a memorandum for the Committee setting forth such instances.

3. In connection with the participations in various trading accounts in securities of the Archer-Daniels-Midland Company between 1927 and 1933, it was suggested that Lehman Brothers and Goldman, Sachs & Company each had a one-third interest in these accounts. During the course of the hearings you accepted this statement subject to verification.

4. During the course of the hearings there was a discussion of the practice of dividing commissions in trading or brokerage accounts involving securities of a company where there was a banker-issuer relationship and where the transactions were for the account of the company, its officers, or principal stockholders. The question was asked, "Do you know of any instance where the members of a syndicate, other than the manager or managers, have ever shared in the commission derived from a trading account?" You answered, "I haven't thought of your question before and I don't think of a case at the moment," but you suggested that you would prepare a memorandum for the Committee on this point.

5. Later there was discussion covering the sharing of commissions between Lehman Brothers and Kuhn Loeb & Company in connection with purchases of the 3½% sinking fund debentures of 1952 for the account of Tidewater Oil Company; and of the sharing of commissions in connection with the purchases of securities for the account of Aviation Corporation with Brown Brothers, Harriman & Company. You agreed to submit data dealing with why commissions were divided and what services each of the houses performed in connection with these transactions in consideration of the shared commissions.

6. You were not clear whether Lehman Brothers refused to accept a joint managership of the issue by General Foods Corporation in 1938, subject to the condition that they do the actual work without receiving a management fee. Your reply was, "I will have to verify; my recollection is not clear."

Your cooperation in completing the record with respect to these matters would be greatly appreciated.

Sincerely yours,

PETER R. NEHEMKIS, JR.,

Special Counsel, Investment Banking Section, Monopoly Study.

LEHMAN BROTHERS,

ONE WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK, February 16, 1940.

MR. PETER R. NEHEMKIS, JR.,

*Special Counsel, Investment Banking Section, Monopoly Study,
Securities and Exchange Commission, Washington, D. C.*

MY DEAR MR. NEHEMKIS: With reference to your letter of January 27th, and taking up the six numbered matters upon which you asked for material, which I assume is to be added to the present record, I submit the following statements, each numbered in accordance with the points as numbered in your letter.

1. The interests of Lehman Brothers and Goldman, Sachs & Co. in the financing which resulted in the creation of the National Dairy Products Corporation early in 1924 were identical.

2. We have no record of any case arising since January 5, 1926, where it has been necessary to follow the procedure outlined in the memorandum of January 5, 1926 which provided that "if any of the listed companies refuses in the future to have either firm participate in a piece of financing, the other firm will endeavor to have such excluded firm afforded a full opportunity of presenting its case". The incident concerning R. H. Macy & Co., Inc. financing arose three years before the memorandum was signed, when R. H. Macy & Co., Inc. expressed the wish not to have Goldman, Sachs & Co. appear but had no objection to our sharing any profit with them.

3. Lehman Brothers and Goldman, Sachs & Co. each had a one-third interest in the original offering of the Archer-Daniels-Midland Company, and the various trading accounts involving stock of that company during the years from 1927 to 1933 were formed on the same basis.

4. A division of stock exchange commissions resulting from the operation of trading accounts of the type which was under discussion, namely those involving securities of corporations where we had acted as one of the managers of an issuing syndicate, has, in our case, so far as I can find, not been extended to include any stock exchange members who were members of the syndicate but not one of the managers thereof, or to other stock exchange houses not connected with the business, such divisions being in all cases confined to co-managers of the account who were stock exchange members, or possibly curb members if the security was listed on that exchange.

As a general comment on this situation, may I mention that the corporation concerned is, of course, free to place its brokerage orders with whatever exchange members it may select or with non-members if it wishes, the usual practice being to choose member firms as their charges consist of the standard brokerage charge without any additional charge such as a non-member would customarily add to cover his added expense beyond the brokerage charge. If the company decides to have such transactions handled by two member firms, it has the choice of three procedures.

(a) Permit the two firms to divide orders between themselves in such a way that the commissions obtained by each one will be equal;

(b) Give the whole order to one firm to place buying and selling orders, the firm handling the business to divide the commissions equally with the other firm;

(c) For the company to place buying and selling orders from time to time with one or the other of the two firms in such a way that they would not come into competition with one another in the market and that the commissions would be equal.

It seems obvious that (a) or (b) are more convenient for the company.

5. As to the purchases of Tide Water Oil 3½% Sinking Fund Debentures by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. for account of the company and their division of the New York Stock Exchange commissions with us, I believe, on the facts now available, that procedure (b) outlined above applied in this case.

In the case of the orders placed by The Aviation Corporation for the purchase of market securities for its portfolio, the same condition prevailed as to the services rendered by the bankers, as Lehman Brothers and Brown Bros., Harriman & Co. had jointly managed the group in connection with the original issue and marketing of shares of the Corporation's stock and both firms were represented on the company's directorate. In this case, procedure (b) was followed with a slight variation—orders for certain securities being given to Lehman Brothers and orders for certain other securities being given to Brown Bros., Harriman & Co., who divided the commissions each with the other, using this method for equalization.

6. With reference to your point numbered 6, I think your letter does not correspond with the question left open in the testimony and the following is submitted to complete the record, though it will not appear to be an exact reply to the question numbered 6 in your letter. At page 498, second column, in answer to your question, "Mr. Hancock, your firm refused that?", my answers indicated that I did not recall and would have to verify. I have now discussed the matter with one of my partners, and I find that the answer should be as follows: "My firm did not refuse to accept the proposal of February 1, 1938."

The foregoing is in reply to your letter of January 27th, and I submit the following comment to invite attention to a few minor errors in the verbatim record, together with a few suggestions as to clarification and completion of the record where it appears lacking.

Page 482, second column, line 8: I believe my name belongs in place of yours. Page 483, first column, 22nd line from bottom: 1923 should be changed to 1924.

Page 483, third column, line 27: First word, "not", should be omitted. My answer following the last word should be completed so as to read "correct".

Page 488, third column lines 6 and 23, typographical error, the word in the record being "findings". Presumably, "finder's fee" was used.

Page 489, first column, end of the first answer: I think it would be a more understandable answer if the following words were added, though I think it is not vital that they be added. "In certain cases long positions were taken over from syndicate accounts to permit the closing of the syndicate accounts".

Page 489, first column, 25th line from the bottom of the page now reads: "Apply to trading and outstanding securities". I think your question was "apply to trading in outstanding securities".

Page 489, first column, second line from bottom of page, the word "who" is probably in error, the word "to" probably being the word used.

Page 489, second column, line 9, where I refer to "large holders", it will be correct to refer to "large stockholders".

Page 490, second column, 10th line from bottom, the expression should be "were stock exchange commissions".

Page 490, second column, your question at the foot of the page: I think there is some error in transcription. From my answer it would appear that your question had two parts, first whether the manager of an issue had an obligation to share profits with important stockholders, and also whether he had an obligation to share with co-managers. It may be that your question was general and was expressed in a double barreled form as to whether there was an obligation generally to share stock exchange commissions with stockholders or with co-managers. It was my intention to answer clearly that as between Lehman Brothers and Goldman Sachs & Company there is such an expressed obligation.

Page 490, third column, 11th line from bottom: The word "with" should be "for".

Page 491, first column, last three lines of my second answer should read: "was specifically covered with regard to our two firms, and the reason for the obligation in our case was that it had been specifically stated in the agreement."

Page 491, first column, Mr. O'Connell's last question and two following questions in next column, I think it should be indicated that this was not a trading account but commission orders for the purchase of various market securities.

Page 492, third column, starting with your third question from the bottom of the page, the name in the third line should be E. H. Betts. Where Carl Conway's name is referred to, it should be "CARLE". Though on this point you were interrogating Mr. Sachs and not me, I suggest that you verify the initials of the Mr. Cluett referred to. I think the initials were G. A.

Page 498, first column, your last question, first line, should be: "This is a letter from Mr. Robert Lehman" rather than "to Mr. Robert Lehman", as it now appears.

Page 498, second column, after the exhibit of Robert Lehman's letter: I think that you were addressing me and that I answered the two questions rather than Mr. Sachs. From the text it appears quite certain that I answered the first question, and I may have answered the second one.

Page 500, first column, 27th line from the bottom: The date 1936 should be 1926.

Page 502, first column, my first answer: I do recall that I didn't quite catch your question quickly, but that I answered to the effect that it must have been Mr. Weinberg; that I knew of no one else referred to in general terms.

Page 503, second column, first answer—should be "I did understand at that time he had" rather than "hadn't".

Page 504, third column, my first answer, last few words should read: "at that stage of the transaction".

Page 504, third column, my last answer is inaccurately reported. I think the changes I suggest are only to correct errors in the record and I believe the answer would be better if it read this way: "The outside interest of the banker is two points. Now if by competitive bidding we forced the banker to purchase the security from the issuer at 101, and if the two points spread was fair value for the services rendered by the banker, the result would be a price to the public of 103." The following sentence should read: "Now who is wise enough to say what is wise or right at that moment?"

Page 505, first column, my last answer should be: "It has been so found".

Page 505, first column, after your suggestion that my firm had contradicted everything I had said about competitive bidding, I think that in fairness to you the record should show that you said there was a difference of opinion about that. Unfortunately, we didn't go back to the point and I would have been glad to have taken the position which I have all along that my views about competitive bidding are not contradicted by the competitive bid for the Cincinnati Union Terminal Company security. After a decision has been made by proper and final authority that securities are to be sold by competitive bidding I believe that a firm like ourselves does not surrender its views by entering a competitive bid.

Page 505, third column, fifth line from the bottom: I probably used the word "tabulations" but quite obviously I meant "items".

Page 506, Mr. Henderson's question at the start of the first column: I think the word "peg" as used in the third line should be "pay".

Regarding Page 485, your long question in the middle of the first column: I wasn't asked the question but it may be important to an understanding of the facts to have these additional facts inserted into the record in such a position as suits your purpose. During the period from 1926 through 1939, a compilation from our records indicates that the firm of Lehman Brothers managed a total of corporate and municipal underwritings aggregating approximately $1,425,000,000. Out of this total $1,250,000,000. represented issues in which Goldman Sachs & Company had no interest, their interest being limited to a share in underwritings aggregating $175,000,000. during the fourteen year period.

Sincerely,

JOHN M. HANCOCK.

The following letters are included at this point in connection with Mr. Sachs's testimony, supra, pp. 12346, 12354, 12359, and 12367.

JANUARY 27, 1940.

MR. WALTER SACHS,

Goldman, Sachs & Co., 30 Pine Street, New York, N. Y.

DEAR MR. SACHS: An examination of the transcript of the hearings before the Temporary National Economic Committee on January 8, 1940, indicates that at several points you promised to make available material which you did not then have in hand, that in other cases you accepted certain statements subject to later correction, and that in one case a statement appears in the record, probably through some error in transcription, which you might like to correct.

These instances are listed in this letter for your convenience.

1. It was suggested that the corporations covered by the memorandum of 1926 issued approximately $200,000,000 of securities during the next decade. You replied that, "I can't substantiate your figure because I haven't gone back to the record. There was a very substantial amount done by some, not all, of these companies in the subsequent years." Would you care to make any further comment at this time?

2. The question was asked, "Do you recall any instances in which Goldman, Sachs & Co. afforded Lehman Brothers an opportunity for oral argument, or, to speak, before a corporation covered by the list?" Your recollection was not clear on this point, but you suggested that you would prepare a memorandum detailing such instances.

3. During the course of the hearings it was stated that there was a disposition of 50,000 shares of stock of Sears, Roebuck & Company for the Estate of Julius Rosenwald in 1933, and of 26,000 shares of the same stock for the Rosenwald Fund later in the year. You accepted these figures subject to future correction.

4. It was suggested during the course of the hearings that the 1906 financing for the company that later became the General Cigar Company was undertaken by a 3/3 account, in which the members were Goldman, Sachs & Co., Lehman Brothers and Kleinwort & Co. The transcript indicates that you were not clear whether Kleinwort & Co. were a member of this underwriting group, and that you promised to correct the record in the event that they were not members.

5. In discussing the size of selling groups, you stated that, "We sometime have as many as three or four, perhaps five or six or seven dealers to become members of this selling group * * *" You apparently meant in this connection a selling group of from three to seven hundred dealers. Would you care to make a correction to this effect?

Your cooperation in completing the record with respect to these matters would be greatly appreciated.

Sincerely yours,

PETER R. NEHEMKIS, Jr.,

Mr. PETER R. NEHEMKIS, Jr.,

Special Counsel, Investment Banking Section, Monopoly Study, Securities and Exchange Commission, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. NEHEMKIS: I have your letter of January 27 and I am glad to comment about the various points which you raise. I understand also that Art Dean has a few obvious instances of incorrect transcription of the testimony which he will be passing on to you in due course.

As to your first point, let me state I feel certain that although it is not correct that "the issuance of these securities was governed by the memorandum of 1926," nevertheless the corporations listed certainly issued in the aggregate at least $200,000,000 of securities. The sale of many of these issues was handled by Goldman, Sachs & Co. and Lehman Brothers in accordance with the memorandum. Of course Goldman, Sachs & Co. itself headed offerings of far more than $200,000,000 of other securities during the period, and in the offerings which I have in mind Lehman Brothers did not participate either under the provisions of the memorandum or otherwise. Furthermore, as you know, $200,000,000 is a minute item in comparison with the $50,000,000,000 of new security offerings during the same period, as tabulated by Standard Statistics Company.

I am content to let the record stand as it is with regard to your second point inasmuch as the Pillsbury instance is the only item of this kind which comes to mind, and inasmuch as formal operation under the memorandum would not ordinarily be necessary in view of the acquaintance of both firms with most of the companies.

Your third point is entirely clarified by exhibits 1784, 1785, 1786 and 1787, which you offered in evidence.

Examination of our records indicates that Kleinwort, Sons & Co. were not associated with us as originating bankers in the financing in 1906 of United Cigar Manufacturers.

Obviously, the word "hundred" was inadvertently omitted from the stenographic record with regard to the number of dealers who have a part in "selling groups."

Thank you very much for calling these matters to my attention.

With best regards,

Very truly yours,

WALTER E. SACHS.

PETER R. NEHEMKIS, Jr., Esq.,

Special Counsel, Investment Banking Section, Monopoly Study, Securities and Exchange Commission, Washington, D. C.

DEAR PETER: I am sorry not to have replied to your letter of January 15, 1940 earlier but I was in Washington for several days last week at another hearing before the S. E. C.

I realize that some of Mr. Hancock's testimony is based upon Mr. Palmer's reply of May 25, 1937 but inasmuch as the other correspondence appears verbatim in the record we feel, after a discussion, that it would be better to have the letter of May 25, 1937 appear in verbatim form also inasmuch as the record is not really complete without it. You will recall that Mr. O'Connell, in particular, was interested in the so-called "threat" to resign, which is covered fully in Mr. Palmer's letter.

Sincerely yours,

ARTHUR H. DEAN.

Mr. Jo... M. HANCOCK,
Lehman Brothers, 1 William Street, New York City.

DEAR JOHN: Due to my absence from the city on a business trip my reply to your letter of May 18th has been delayed a few days.

Due either to misinformation or a lack of information, it seems to me you have arrived at some conclusions and some assumptions that are just not in accordance with the facts.

To begin with, you ask whether there was any reason why the proposed financing should not be handled on a basis of equality for the two banking firms. I think you know the reasons for this just as well as I do. It is just because the two banking firms are not working together, which certainly makes it very unpleasant for us and puts us in a position which I do not think we have any right to be put in.

The problem of the new financing is not a new one and you may recall that I rather casually discussed it with you the day that I had luncheon with you several months ago. That is, I told you then that the way our business was growing it would appear as though we would need additional working capital some of these days and I felt the time to do it was when we could. Furthermore, the plan was arrived at by members of the Executive Committee in connection with Mr. Green and later with Mr. Weinberg. The entire matter had been discussed with the Board at various times, although not in detail as to the plans. That, naturally, was left to the Committee and the proposed plans submitted to the Board at the meeting on May 11th. Up until that time no definite agreement had been reached. No matters of importance are entered into without submission to the Board . . . and by the Board I mean the working Board and those who attend our regular meetings, so your assumption, that this whole thing was done without any previous discussion of the Board is erroneous.

Your question of calling the preferred stock is a very natural one. It not only should have been considered, but it has been carefully considered for over a year, and the only reason that nothing was done about it is because either through oversight or poor judgment at the time the stock was originally issued.

the Company finds itself "hung up" with what might be called a non-callable stock. It can be called only at the rate of 2% a year and we are way ahead of that program already.

Naturally a great deal of study has been made by me because I do not think any one could be more interested than I am that we do the right thing. I cannot speak for Mr. G. A. Cluett and Mr. E. H. Cluett whom you mention in your letter to me, but speaking for myself, I should say that the reason the financing could not be handled on an equality basis is because of the relationship of the firms.

Over the telephone on May 11th I informed the Board that if it seemed wise to them to postpone action, that that could be done. Then when I found this could necessitate an additional audit and that we could not use our figures as of December 31st, I saw no reason why we should be put to that expense and trouble.

The facts were gone into very thoroughly before any decision was reached, and, furthermore, John, this is not the first case of this kind that has come up in the past year or so.

Another assumption that I seem to read in your letter is a threat of resignation on the part of another banker. There was no such threat made. As a matter of fact, he told me when we were having this discussion over the phone on May 11th that he would gladly step aside and let your firm take the whole thing and that it would not in any way cause any change in his feelings towards our Company or in his relationship to the Company, so I see in this no attempt at a threat or control of the Board.

Our change in position was due naturally to our desire to go on with our plans in order to be able to use our December 31st audit.

Personally I feel that the financing plans that we have in mind are sound and to the best interests of the Company, otherwise we would not go through with them.

It was most embarrassing to me, and I know it was to other members of the Board, to be put on the spot because of a quarrel between banking houses, and I think it is most unfair that we should be made in any way to suffer because of this. I personally have suffered a great deal myself, and I have no desire to do anything that would hurt anybody, but apparently here is a case where somebody had to be hurt, and not through any fault of mine.

I should like to talk with you, of course, as I deeply regret the unpleasantness that this matter has caused, and naturally it is my earnest hope that the entire Board will be in agreement on our plans.

Sincerely yours,

/s/ C. R. PALMER.

DEAR MR. NEHEMKIS: Mr. Hancock has handed me for reply your letter of January 27th addressed to him, as he has just returned after an absence from the office of several weeks.

In accordance with your request, I enclose herewith a signed stipulation as to the four letters mentioned by you, additional copies of which I enclose in order that there may be no misunderstanding as to the letters referred to. You will note that I have corrected the initials of Mr. Chester's name in the stipulation to read "C. M. Chester."

We wish to thank you for permitting us to identify these letters by stipulation rather than having to appear in person to identify them.

Very truly yours,

The following letter from Robert Lehman to C. M. Chester is included at this point in connection with Mr. Hancock's testimony, supra, p. 12389.

DECEMBER 22, 1937.

MR. C. M. CHESTER,
General Foods Corporation,
250 Park Avenue, New York City.

DEAR CLARE: I want to tell you that I deeply appreciate the very fair way in which you handled the matter which we discussed today. As I told you, I feel that the suggestion which you made is thoroughly satisfactory to me and my firm.

In order that there may be no misunderstanding as to what should be considered "an equal basis," I am giving you the following notes which cover the more important points so that you may have them before you.

Your suggestion that G. S. & Co. should handle the business in their office is entirely satisfactory to me although, of course, I consider that that is a real privilege.

1. Both firms to share equally in the profits and to take the same commitment. Any step-up to be shared equally by both firms.

2. Both firms to be syndicate managers and both signatures to appear on all syndicate and selling group letters and letters of confirmation.

3. Both names to appear on the same line in all newspaper advertising and any syndicate, selling group and other letters. Both names to be included on a parity basis in newspaper publicity as jointly heading the business.

4. Syndicate and selling groups to be formed jointly as to who should be included therein.

Yours sincerely,

rlc

MESSTRS. LEHMAN BROTHERS,
1 William Street, New York, N. Y.

Attention: Mr. Robert Lehman.

DEAR SIR: Enclosed is a copy of a resolution adopted by our Board of Directors on Thursday, January 27, 1938.

The purpose of this letter is to make to your firm the offer contemplated in the first clause of this resolution.

The expression "without fee" in the resolution is not intended to apply to out of pocket expenses.

Will you please consider the matter, and let me have your decision with respect to it promptly?

Enclosed also is a copy of my letter of this date of Goldman, Sachs & Company, which is self-explanatory.

Very truly yours,

Resolved that the proper officers of this corporation be and they are hereby authorized and empowered, in their discretion, to offer to Goldman, Sachs & Company and Lehman Brothers the joint syndicate managership of the proposed issue of preferred stock of this corporation, the work to be done, without fee, in the office of Goldman, Sachs & Company;

Further resolved that, in the event said offer shall be made and shall not be accepted promptly thereafter by both firms, the said officers shall offer Lehman Brothers and Goldman, Sachs & Company the joint syndicate managership of the proposed issue of preferred stock of this corporation, the work to be done, without fee, in the office of Lehman Brothers;

Further resolved that, if both offers shall be made by said officers and neither one shall be accepted by both firms, then neither of said firms shall be selected as syndicate manager or as joint syndicate manager for such preferred stock issue.

COPY OF LETTER FROM MR. R. O. KENNEDY TO MR. SANFORD L. CLUETT

MAY 19, 1937.

Thank you a lot for telling me about Mr. G. A. Cluett's letter. I can understand exactly Mr. Cluett's reaction. I feel sure that he does not understand the situation, just as we did not in the very beginning.

What did hurt me about his letter, though, was the implication that something is being done that would mar the long record of fair and honorable dealings. As you know the Board faced a situation that was not only embarrassing, but most upsetting. Naturally our inclination was to have both of these houses work together as they always have. We have always felt very close to each one, and particularly so to the representatives on our Board. But there has grown up between the two houses an antagonism that we simply could not break through. As you know I had dinner twice with Mr. Hancock and met with Sidney two or three times. We told them how we felt, what we wanted, but we just could not get it. Goldman, Sachs just would not work with Lehman Brothers, and for reasons which to them seem sound, although to an outsider they seem just a little childish, and Mr. Weinberg admitted that they might be so.

The feeling is so intense, however, that in all recent financing they have not shared, even though it be for companies in which they are both represented.

(Written by hand:) Not represented on Endicott Johnson or Continental Can. Sears, Roebuck would not have Lehman Brothers. (By hand:) No.

National Dairy gave all of the work to Goldman, Sachs.

Endicott-Johnson had Goldman, Sachs do it alone.

Continental Can was recently re-financed with Goldman, Sachs cooperation.

(Written by hand:) How about Macy-Gimbel-General Tire who had old relationships and many others who had the choice.

We pleaded and put all the pressure we could, requesting that they overlook their differences, but those differences were too fundamental and we could do nothing about it. As late as last Friday night, Mr. Weinberg said he would think it over again and see if they could not make an exception. As you know, he has already offered Lehman Brothers full participation as to the amount that each is to have, but he called me up yesterday and said that he could not consent to go along with Lehman Brothers' name appearing along with theirs.

Mr. Weinberg did suggest that we drop Goldman, Sachs altogether and give it all to Lehman Brothers. He promised he would do everything he could to help if we did. Lehman Brothers gave us no such assurance and have not today. Lehman Brothers feel that Goldman, Sachs have taken the position that they would have it all or would not play. That is not the case, whereas I do believe that Lehman Brothers up to now are taking the position that they will not go along if not offered all that they want—half of the participation and the prestige of being a joint principal.

As you know, the Board felt that Goldman, Sachs were in a position to do a better job in this particular instance than Lehman Brothers could alone. We have been supported in this by the examples of other companies who have had similar work to do. Also it is true that Lehman Brothers have been helpful to us, but it is quite as true that Goldman, Sachs have. Goldman, Sachs' interest has been a warm and very cordial one during the last few years, and particularly during the dark years of 1932 and 1933, where on the other hand, I have an impression that Lehman Brothers were willing to drop us altogether back in 1932 and 1933.

It is most unfortunate that this has happened. I know that it has bothered Mr. Palmer, as it has bothered all of us, all out of proportion to its importance. But what can we do? Goldman, Sachs will give Lehman Brothers much of which they ask, but will not accept their name as cooperator. No one could have tried harder to bring about the cooperation than have we. If Mr. G. A. Cluett would talk to Mr. Weinberg for just a few minutes, I am sure he would appreciate that our situation is a difficult one, and that our decision has not been an altogether unwise or unfair one.

Signed by: OAKLEY.

The following letter from John M. Hancock to Cluett, Peabody & Co. is included at this point in connection with Mr. Hancock's testimony, supra, p. 12410.

August 20, 1937.

(Handwritten:) Cross Ref. made for Statistics.
Messrs. CLUETT, PEABODY & Co.,
10 East 40th Street, New York City.

Attention Mr. C. R. Palmer.

GENTLEMEN: With great regret I hereby resign as a Director of Cluett, Peabody & Company. After careful consideration of all the facts before me and in the light of Mr. Palmer's letter I see no choice but to take this action, recognizing that there may be matters unknown by me but known to your officers that explain your action.

(Handwritten:) Not Sent to File.

After such long service on your board on the part of myself and Mr. Lehman, there cannot longer be any obligation on our part toward the stockholders who bought the stock from us at the time of the original underwriting. Though feeling free of any obligation I have delayed resigning so that the underwriting should be completed and I would be free of any possible charge of harming the company. My firm did not take any interest in the underwriting as it was desirous of making it clear that a possible profit does not affect our view of the principles involved in this case.

I think it will be admitted that my being on the Board was primarily for the advice of myself and my firm on financing problems. In this recent matter my advice was not asked for in advance of your decision and in connection with that decision two of your principal officers believed inaccurate and incomplete statements about my firm and did not feel under any obligation to discuss these statements with me before accepting them as facts. I would condemn such procedure on the part of a corporation or its management even if I were not involved in their acts.

I ask that this letter be incorporated in the minutes of the meeting of the Board of Directors when it is presented to the Board.

Sincerely,

JMH-MG

JOHN M. HANCOCK.

SCHRODER ROCKEFELLER & Co., INCORPORATED

48 Wall Street, New York

JANUARY 24, 1940.

Mr. PETER R. NEHEMKIS, Jr.,

*Special Counsel, Investment Banking Section,
Securities and Exchange Commission, Washington, D. C.*

DEAR MR. NEHEMKIS: In connection with my testimony before the Temporary National Economic Committee on January 11, 1940 and your letter of January 22, 1940, I wish to advise you that Messrs. Sullivan & Cromwell did not furnish any written opinion in connection with the agreement dated August 24, 1936 between Schroder Rockefeller & Co., Inc. and J. Henry Schroder & Co. which was introduced into evidence as Exhibit 1964.

It is my recollection, which is confirmed by inquiry of Messrs. Sullivan & Cromwell, that prior to the time of the execution of the agreement, the question which you raised was given consideration in consultation with Messrs. Sullivan & Cromwell and it was concluded that under all the circumstance J. Henry Schroder & Co. were not "underwriters" as that term is defined in Section 2 subdivision 11 of the Securities Act of 1933 and that therefore no mention of the agreement dated August 24, 1936 need be made in the registration statements.

You will note that the agreement provided that J. Henry Schroder & Co. would take no part, directly or indirectly in the underwriting or disposition of the securities which Schroder Rockefeller & Co., Inc. might underwrite, or assume any responsibility, liability or commitment in connection therewith, it being understood that Schroder Rockefeller & Co., Inc. was to be solely liable with respect to the total amount of its underwriting commitments without any recourse against J. Henry Schroder & Co. or its associates. You will also note that the payment to be made to J. Henry Schroder & Co. was not based on a percentage of any underwriting profits and in fact bore no relation to underwriting profits since under the agreement the sum was payable even though there were losses and was payable with respect to issues in which we might have participated if we had desired to do so even though we elected not to participate.

Under the circumstances, it was felt that J. Henry Schroder & Co. did not buy from or sell any securities for an issuer; that it did not participate or have any participation in the direct or indirect underwriting "of any such undertaking" since they were under no circumstances to receive any of the securities underwritten, and Schroder Rockefeller & Co., Inc. had no right to ask them to take up any part of the securities underwritten or to ask them to compensate us in any way, directly or indirectly, for any losses sustained by us as an underwriter.

I should like to point out also that Schroder Rockefeller & Co., Inc. never took over the securities referred to in paragraph one of the agreement, and that the whole agreement was cancelled on the 26th day of January 1937.

I trust that this will give you the additional information which you requested.

Very truly yours,

/s/ C. P. FULLER.

GENERAL ARRANGEMENTS PURSUANT TO WHICH INVESTMENT BANKERS ARE SELECTED FOR COMPANIES COMPRISING THE STANDARD GAS AND ELECTRIC COMPANY SYSTEM

The Standard Gas and Electric Company system, which includes the companies named in the above-cross-reference, is jointly controlled (through Standard Power and Light Corporation) by United States Electric Power Corporation and H. M. Byllesby and Company. U. S. Electric Power Corporation is, in turn, controlled by the United Founders group (in which David M. Milton's Equity Corporation group has a substantial interest). (Handwritten:) Not true since Dec. 1, 1935.

As of March 2, 1933, U. S. Electric Power Corporation had demand bank loans totaling \$12,500,000 (of which Chase National held 50% or \$6,250,000; Guaranty Trust held 33 $\frac{1}{3}$ % or \$4,166,666.67; and Chemical Bank & Trust Company held 16 $\frac{2}{3}$ % or \$2,083,333.33) which were secured; part of the security consisted of all of U. S. El. Pr. Corp.'s stock holdings in the Standard Power and Light Corporation. Those \$12,500,000 U. S. Electric Power Corporation secured demand notes (dated March 1, 1933) were given to the three banks pursuant to a written agreement between U. S. Electric Power Corporation and the banks dated and executed on March 1, 1933, and all but a small part of them are still outstanding and unpaid.

Among other things, that March 1 agreement contained a provision that U. S. Electric Power Corporation would furnish the banks with a certified list of all contracts to which they were then a party (except those covering ordinary current operations) and agree (so long as any of the $12,500,000 demand notes remained unpaid) not to change any such contracts without the consent of the banks. The March 1, 1933 agreement also provided that U. S. Electric Power Corporation (recognizing that those contracts were assets which should be available to creditors) agreed in so far as possible to give the three banks the benefit of such contracts and pay over to them any consideration received by U. S. Electric Power Corporation therefrom.

* * * * *

One contract covered by the foregoing provisions is a Memorandum dated December 21, 1929, signed by H. M. Byllesby and Company, U. S. Electric Power Corporation and Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co., which sets forth the manner in which investment bankers to handle security issues of the Standard Gas and Electric Company system are to be selected. Subject to certain exceptions (including particularly the financing of the Philadelphia Company and subsidiaries) the general arrangement contemplates that financing shall be undertaken as to interest and liability, at original cost, as follows:

U. S. Electric Power Corporation..... 75%
 H. M. Byllesby and Company..... 25%

and if those two mutually agree to permit other banking houses to join with them in particular pieces of financing, the respective interests of such other houses shall be provided for ratably out of the basic interests of those two, provided that Byllesby's interest in any piece of financing involving

Northern States Power Company
 Louisville Gas and Electric Company
 Oklahoma Gas and Electric Company, and San Diego Consolidated Gas and Electric Company shall be not less than 20%, irrespective of any interests granted in such financing to other banking houses.

In connection with the March 1, 1933 bank loan negotiations Mr. Louis H. Seagrave, Chairman of the Board of U. S. Electric Power Corporation, verbally confirmed to R. L. Garner, Vice-President and Treasurer of the Guaranty Trust Company, that U. S. Electric Power Corporation would consult the banks (which are parties to the March 1, 1933 bank loan agreement) in connection with subsequent financing of the Standard Gas and Electric Company system.

In connection with specific financing for any part of the Standard Gas and Electric Company system, reference should be made to the December 21, 1929 Memorandum signed by H. M. Byllesby and Company, U. S. Electric Power Corporation and Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co., but the more important provisions of that Memorandum are summarized in a general outline set forth on the following page hereof.

¹ Nothing precludes financing without bankers or by direct offering to stockholders or customers. It was contemplated that all customer ownership campaigns should be conducted by A as theretofore but without substantial profit to them.

Another contract covered by the provisions of the March 1, 1933 bank loan agreement is another Memorandum dated December 21, 1929, signed by H. M. Byllesby and Company and U. S. Electric Power Corporation, which provides, among other things that:

"* * * It is contemplated that whenever any issue of securities shall be made by Standard Gas and Electric Company or by any subsidiary or sub-subsidiary thereof, and sold to Bankers, counsel selected by U. S. Electric Power Corporation will represent the bankers * * *."¹ also

"* * * It is contemplated that whenever any issue of securities shall be made by Standard Power and Light Corporation, or by any subsidiary or sub-subsidiary thereof (other than Standard Gas and Electric Company or any subsidiary or sub-subsidiary of Standard Gas and Electric Company) and sold to bankers, counsel selected by *H. DEAR MR. NEHEMKIS: As you know, I have been in Washington for the past few weeks which accounts for my delay in replying to your letter of January 23, 1940.

As I testified in Washington, I have not any list of suggestions of underwriters made by the Shell Union Oil Corporation. However, in going over the list of underwriters again, I can add to the names mentioned in my testimony the following as having been suggested by the Company:

Blair, Bonner & Company, Chicago, Illinois.

A Supplement by Dr. Oscar L. Altman of the Securities and Exchange Commission to his testimony on "Concentration in the Management, Underwriting, and Sale of Registered Bond Issues since 1934."

THE ROLE OF COMMERCIAL BANKS IN THE DISTRIBUTION OF REGISTERED BOND ISSUES, AND SOME ASPECTS OF BOND ACQUISITIONS BY LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES.

This memorandum is a supplement to the testimony presented to the Temporary National Economic Committee on January 12, 1940, on "Concentration in the Management, Underwriting, and Sale of Registered Bond Issues since 1934."¹ Data were there presented on the distribution and sale of six bond issues.² In summary, it was shown that:

(1) Banks, insurance companies, and charitable and educational institutions together accounted for 88.4% of the sales by the distributing group, while individuals accounted for only 6.6%.

(2) Thirty-eight per cent of all sales by the distributing group were made within New York State; thirteen states, including New York, accounted for 90% of all sales.

This memorandum attempts to deal with three additional problems:

(1) The role of commercial banks in the distribution of bonds.

(2) The manner in which life insurance companies acquire their bonds.

(3) The relative importance of the holdings by life insurance companies of five bond issues.

1. ROLE OF BANKS IN THE DISTRIBUTION OF BONDS

Since part of the purchases of bonds from the distributing group by banks and trust companies is re-sold, an attempt was made to determine the amount re-sold and the nature of the purchasers.³ A questionnaire was addressed to one hundred of the largest banks and trust companies by the Investment Banking Section of the Securities and Exchange Commission on March 27, 1939, requesting data on the disposition of the four bond issues covered by the earlier questionnaire of February 25, 1939.⁴

The coverage of the responses to the questionnaires was as follows:

² The bond issues discussed, and the sources of the data, were as follows:

(a) From questionnaires by the Investment Banking Section of the Securities and Exchange Commission—four issues: (1) Toledo Edison Co., 1st mtge. 3½'s of 1968, principal amount $30,000,000. (2) Atlantic Refining Co., deb. 3's of 1953, principal amount $25,000,000. (3) Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co., ref. & impt. 3½'s of 1963, principal amount $30,000,000. (4) United States Steel Corp., deb. 3½'s of 1948, principal amount $100,000,000.

(b) From questionnaires by Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc.—three issues, including the U. S. Steel issue: (1) United States Steel Corp., deb. 3½'s of 1948, principal amount $100,000,000. (2) American Telephone & Telegraph Co., deb. 3½'s of 1968, principal amount $140,000,000. (3) Philadelphia Electric Co., 1st mtge. 3½'s of 1967, principal amount $130,000,000.

³ This section, together with portions of Dr. Altman's testimony of January 12, 1940, complement the remarks made by the Hon. A. A. Berle, Jr. on the distribution of securities. See Hearings before the Temporary National Economic Committee: Savings and Investment, Part 9, p. 3817.

⁴ Listed in footnote 2, above.

³ This issue showed relatively the smallest sale to banks and trust companies and the largest sale to insurance companies. See the discussion immediately following, and footnote 6.

⁴ The sales reported by the distributing group were greater than the amount of the issue. It is possible that this discrepancy is the result of reporting sales in secondary distribution. The nature of the data made it impossible to correct for this over-reporting.

Three of the issues showed a large initial distribution to banks and trust companies, followed by a substantial re-sale. The fourth issue—Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co.—showed a different pattern. The issue was unusual in that the initial bank purchases were small, only 19 per cent of the total. The manager of the underwriting group sold 45 per cent of the issue to a group of insurance companies, with each underwriter selling an amount in proportion to his underwriting commitment.⁵ In all, the distributing group sold 74 per cent of the issue directly to insurance companies.⁶ Moreover, in view of the limited response by banks and trust companies to the second questionnaire—only 17 per cent of bank purchases being accounted for—the results with respect to this issue are inconclusive.

⁵ For an illustration of the mechanics and procedure involved in such transactions, see the memorandum by The First Boston Corporation in connection with the sale of Southern California Edison Co., Ltd., ref. 3½'s of 1960, offered April 22, 1935 (Hearings: Investment Banking, Part 22, Exhibit No. 1639-14, page —).

⁶ Moreover, it was stated that a substantial part of the issue was not sold by the principal underwriters until more than a year after public offering. The New York Times reported (January 5, 1940) that Halsey, Stuart & Company and Otis & Company concluded this $30,000,000 bond financing by disposing of $7,600,000 of bonds on January 4, 1940, to a group of insurance companies.

The re-sales by banks and trust companies were rapid. Sixty-two per cent of their purchases of Toledo Edison bonds were re-sold within one week, and 39 per cent of Atlantic Refining Co. bonds were disposed of within the same time. Even in the case of the United States Steel Corp. issue—regarded by the "trade" as primarily a "banking issue" by reason of the industry involved and the short maturity of the bond—29 per cent of the bank and trust company purchases were re-sold within one week. More detailed data on the rate of disposition may be found in Table 3.

From the foregoing it is clear that banks and trust companies acted as one of the most important cogs in the distribution of these registered bonds to the ultimate investors.

To whom do the banks and trust companies sell? And at what prices? The data submitted on the questionnaires throw some light upon these questions.

The greatest part of the sales made by banks and trust companies, under orders dated not later than one week after public offering, was made at the initial public offering price; just as the greatest part of their security purchases from the distributing group was made at the public offering price:

The data thus indicate that banks and trust companies generally received no compensation in the form of a price differential for buying and re-selling these registered bond issues. They may have rendered this service to their customers free of charge, hoping to benefit by receiving compensating balances and by providing other, profitable services.⁷ Or, they may have received commissions or fees different in form from the dealers' concession or the ¼ point concession to banks. The questionnaire throws no light on these possibilities.

The sales by banks and trust companies were made largely to institutional customers. The most important customers were life and other insurance companies, with other banks and trust companies, including savings banks, second in importance. Individuals were responsible for only a relatively small part of the sales:

2. PURCHASES OF FIVE REGISTERED BOND ISSUES BY LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES

An analysis was made of purchases of registered bond issues by life insurance companies to determine (a) the number and the size of the separate purchases made; (b) the rate of acquisition of such purchases; and (c) the sources of such purchases. The data were taken from Part 3 of Schedule D of the annual reports prepared by the life insurance companies on the Convention Form.

This Form requires insurance companies to list all purchases of bonds and stocks during the current year, with date of acquisition, name of vendor, price, and other details.

The basic sample for the analysis consisted of the twenty-six largest legal reserve life insurance companies domiciled in the United States.^{1a} Since not all of the companies purchased bonds of each issue studied, and not all reported in the required detail, the samples used consist of from seven to eighteen companies.

Five of the six issues listed in Footnote 2 were studied; the sixth, C. & O. Ry. Co. ref 3½'s of '63, was eliminated since it was offered in December, 1938, which was too late for any purchases to be included in the reports for that year.

(a) The size and number of insurance company purchases.—Although the Convention Form calls for a listing of all security purchases, some companies lumped in one entry their purchases from two or more dealers or for two or more days. These companies were excluded from the tabulation.

It is possible that some of the companies included lumped two or more purchases from the same dealer on the same day, for it was noticed that some companies listed the same vendor more than once in one day, while other companies did not show similar entries. To the extent that a company combined two or more purchases in a single entry, it understated the number of purchases.

The number of purchases is, of course, roughly related to the size of the issue. For the two smallest issues, the seven insurance companies studied required a total of 463 ($30,000,000 Toledo Edison issue) and 471 ($25,000,000 Atlantic Refining issue) separate transactions to acquire their holdings. The seven companies thus required an average of 66 purchases for the former and 67 purchases for the latter. For the two largest issues, the fourteen companies studied required a total of 1,301 ($140,000,000 A. T. & T. issue) and 1,409 ($130,000,000 Philadelphia Electric issue) separate transactions, an average of 93 purchases for the former and 101 purchases for the latter. More complete data on the size and number of transactions are presented in Table 8.^{1b}

^{1a} These are the same twenty-six companies covered in the tables of Part 10-A of the Hearings before the Temporary National Economic Committee: Life Insurance: Operating Results.

^{1b} The questionnaire by Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., (see footnote 2) requested each dealer to state the number of his transactions for each issue. The total number of transactions for all dealers was as follows: for the U. S. Steel 3½'s of 1948, 17,096; for

Most of the individual purchases were made for relatively small amounts. A detailed table of purchases arranged in a frequency distribution by size of purchase constitutes Appendix I to this memorandum, but the findings may be summarized here for the largest and the smallest issues studied.

The analysis disclosed a total of 4,294 separate purchases by the major life insurance companies for the five issues studied. There were 1,479 transactions (more than one-third of the total) in blocks of $5,000 or less, including 32 purchases in blocks of $1,000 and 142 in blocks of $2,000. More than three-quarters of the total number of purchases were in amounts of less than $30,000, though this group accounted for only 21 per cent of the total purchased. Most purchases were for round amounts. With 1,136 purchases at $5,000, 842 at $10,000, 247 at $15,000, 195 at $20,000, and 353 at $25,000, a total of 2,773 purchases, almost two-thirds of the total number of purchases, is accounted for.

(b) The rate of insurance company purchases.—The annual reports prepared by insurance companies on the Convention Form require the date of acquisition for all security purchases. The analysis shows that the date of acquisition reported seems to have been in almost all cases the date on which the securities were delivered. For the five issues covered, a comparison of the date of acquisition reported by the twenty-six companies with the offering date (as shown by the prospectus), and the delivery date (as reported in the daily press), indicates that (a) in no case did the acquisition date coincide with the offering date, (b) in only one case, and then only for one company, was the acquisition date earlier than the delivery date, and (c) in all the other cases the first acquisition dates correspond with the delivery dates. The available data do not indicate the date of payment by the life insurance companies. It thus appears that the companies define securities acquired as securities delivered, rather than as ordered or paid for.*

A definitive study of the rate of insurance company purchases is, therefore, impossible. For there is no correspondence between orders and deliveries; one day's deliveries may include several days' orders, and conversely. Furthermore, the time between the date of offering and the date of delivery varies for different issues. The difference was sixteen days for the A. T. & T. bonds and only two days for the Toledo Edison bonds. The data do indicate, however, the importance of insurance company sales in making and supporting a market for publicly offered securities.

(i) During the first week after the first delivery date—the purchase orders may well have been much more concentrated—the insurance companies in the sample studied purchased from 9 per cent of the U. S. Steel bonds to 33 per cent of the A. T. & T. bonds.

As has already been mentioned, the U. S. Steel bonds were regarded as a "banking issue." Therefore, if this offering be excluded, the sample of insurance companies studied took within one week of the offering date¹⁰ from one-fifth to one-third of the issues.

(ii) The size of the individual purchases during the first week appears to be smaller than purchases consummated in later weeks.

* Except that the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Company reported a purchase on June 3rd.

The explanation for the small size of purchases during the first week probably rests upon the fact that the insurance companies spread their purchases among the members of the distributing group.

(c) The source of insurance company purchases.—It has been indicated in Section 1 that re-sales by banks and trust companies which bought directly from the distributing group constituted a substantial part (28 percent to 44 percent) of the respective issues. Examination of life insurance company purchases shows that:

(i) Purchases from banks were larger than purchases from dealers and underwriters.

(ii) The smaller insurance companies make a larger percentage of their purchases from banks and trust companies than do the largest insurance companies falling within the sample of the 26 largest legal reserve life insurance companies.

(iii) The sales by banks to the life insurance companies within the sample of insurance companies studied were highly concentrated. Only eighteen banks were represented. These eighteen banks made 116 sales aggregating $10,189,000. Five of these banks accounted for more than 70 percent of the total; and two of them—the New York Trust Co. and the Bankers Trust Co.—for 48 percent. The position of the New York Trust Co. is due entirely to its nine sales of A. T. & T. debentures to the New York Life Insurance Co. in the amount of $2,519,000. The sales by the Bankers Trust Co., on the other hand, were more widely distributed. Bankers Trust Co. made thirty-one sales amounting to $2,212,000, and dealt in all five of the issues.

3. AMOUNT OF INSURANCE COMPANY HOLDINGS OF FIVE REGISTERED BOND ISSUES ON DECEMBER 31, 1938

There has been much discussion of the extent of holdings of securities by institutions, and particularly by life insurance companies.¹⁰ Earlier sections of this memorandum indicated the importance of institutional purchases of the registered bond issues studied. In particular, they indicated the role of the insurance companies as final investors. After the banks, insurance companies were the largest purchasers from the distributing group of the registered bond issues studied, accounting for an average of 38.1 per cent of all sales. They added to these holdings immediately. The banks and trust companies that had purchased from the distributing group almost immediately disposed of a substantial part of their holdings, with insurance companies as the largest customers. Buying in relatively small lots, life insurance companies engaged in a large number of separate transactions. They continued to purchase these issues after the public offering. The amounts of their holdings at various dates may be shown as follows:

¹⁰ See, for example, Part 10-A of the Hearings Before The Temporary National Economic Committee: Life Insurance: Operating Results, p. 125. It was there shown that the twenty-six largest legal reserve life insurance companies domiciled in the United States purchased almost one quarter of the total amount of corporate bonds and notes issued in the years 1934 to 1936, inclusive; and that they purchased almost one-half of all the bonds and notes issued in the years 1937 and 1938.

A compilation was made by Merrill Lynch & Co., Inc., on August 2, 1939, of institutional holdings, based upon Poor's Institutional Holdings of Securities (1939). Only securities issued since 1935 were studied. Institutions were found to hold 52.5 per cent of the 87 electric power and gas company bond issues studied; 54.3 per cent of the 10 telephone issues studied; and 28.3 per cent of the 37 industrial issues studied. The data are incomplete because many institutions do not report or itemize their holdings. The percentages, therefore, understate the relative importance of institutional holdings.

¹The seven companies included in the tabulation for the Toledo Edison Co. 1st mtg. 3¼'s of 1968 were: New York Life Insurance Co., The Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, The Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York, The Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co., The Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co., and Provident Mutual Life Insurance Co.

²For the Atlantic Refining Co. deb. 3's of 1953, the seven companies included were: Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., The Prudential Insurance Co. of America, The Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York, John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co., The Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., The Union Central Life Insurance Co., and Provident Mutual Life Insurance Co.

³For the U. S. Steel Corp. deb. 3¼'s of 1948, the eight companies included were: The Prudential Insurance Co. of America, The Travelers Insurance Co., John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co., The Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co., Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co., Provident Mutual Life Insurance Co., The Lincoln National Life Insurance Co.

⁴For the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. debenture 3¼'s of 1966, the fourteen companies included were: Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., The Prudential Insurance Co. of America, New York Life Insurance Co., The Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, The Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York, The Travelers Insurance Co., John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co., The Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co., The Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co., Aetna Life Insurance Co., The Union Central Life Insurance Co., Provident Mutual Life Insurance Co., The Lincoln National Life Insurance Co.

⁵For the Philadelphia Electric Co. 1st mtg. 3¼'s of 1967, the fourteen companies included were: Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., The Prudential Insurance Co. of America, New York Life Insurance Co., The Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, The Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York, The Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co., John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co., The Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co., The Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co., Aetna Life Insurance Co., The Union Central Life Insurance Co., Provident Mutual Life Insurance Co., and The Lincoln National Life Insurance Co.

Source: Compiled from Part 3 of Schedule D of the annual reports of 26 selected life insurance companies on the Convention Form. These 26 companies are the same as those included in Part 10-A of the Hearings Before the Temporary National Economic Committee: Life Insurance: Operating Results, February 12, 1940. The number of companies included in each tabulation is less than 26, since not all the companies furnished the data in useable form, and not all the companies purchased each issue.

¹ The companies are required to furnish the date of acquisition for securities. For these issues, the earliest dates of acquisition for the five issues correspond with the delivery dates mentioned in the offering announcements, rather than with the dates of the respective offering prospectuses. See Footnote 9.

² The seven companies included in the tabulation for the Toledo Edison Co. 1st mtg. 3½'s of 1968 were: New York Life Insurance Company, The Equitable Life Insurance Society of the United States, The Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, The Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co., The Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co., and Provident Mutual Life Insurance Co.

³ For the Atlantic Refining Company deb. 3's of 1963, the seven companies included were: Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., The Prudential Insurance Co. of America, The Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York, John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co., The Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., The Union Central Life Insurance Co., and Provident Mutual Life Insurance Co.

⁴ For the U. S. Steel Corp. deb. 3½'s of 1948, the seven companies included were: The Prudential Life Insurance Co. of America, The Travelers Insurance Co., John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co., The Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co., Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co., Aetna Life Insurance Co., and Provident Mutual Life Insurance Co. Other tables in the Appendix dealing with this issue were based upon eight companies. This tabulation is based upon seven, since the dates of purchase by The Lincoln National Life Insurance Co. were shown only by months, and not by days. A similar explanation applies to footnotes 5 and 6.

⁵ For the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. debenture 3½'s of 1966, the thirteen companies included were: Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., The Prudential Insurance Co. of America, New York Life Insurance Company, The Equitable Life Assurance Society of America, The Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York, The Travelers Insurance Co., John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co., The Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co., The Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co., Aetna Life Insurance Co., The Union Central Life Insurance Co., and Provident Mutual Life Insurance Co. The Lincoln National Life Insurance Co. was not included. See footnote 4.

⁶ For the Philadelphia Electric Co. 1st mtg. 3½'s of 1967, the thirteen companies included were: Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., The Prudential Insurance Co. of America, New York Life Insurance Company, The Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, The Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York, The Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co., John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co., The Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co., The Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co., Aetna Life Insurance Co., The Union Central Life Insurance Co., and Provident Mutual Life Insurance Co. The Lincoln National Life Insurance Co. was not included. See footnote 4.

¹ The names of the various life insurance companies included have been abbreviated. For their full names, see footnotes to Appendix I; for complete names with addresses, see Hearings, Part 10-A, p. III. The companies are arranged in approximate order of size.

Source: Compiled from Part 3 of Schedule D of the annual reports of selected life insurance companies on the Convention Form. The basic sample consisted of the 26 life insurance companies included in Part 10A of the Hearings Before the Temporary National Economic Committee: Life Insurance: Operating Results. The number of companies in these tabulations is less than 26, since not all the companies furnished the data in useable form, and not all the companies purchased each issue.

APPENDIX IV
