PREFACE

This bibliography contains selected material by and about Mr. Allen Welsh Dulles. An attempt has been made to include all of his published writings. Books and articles about him are limited to those concerned, directly or indirectly, with his role in intelligence; those books and articles which have only unimportant or passing references have been omitted. Coverage of the U-2 incident in 1960 and the Cuban invasion of 1961 is very selective, since a high percentage of the material is repetitious.

Mr. Dulles was born in Watertown, New York, 7 April 1893 and was graduated from Princeton University in 1914. Following a year's teaching in Allahabad, India, he returned to Princeton, where he received a master's degree in 1916. He then joined the United States Diplomatic Service, serving in Vienna, Bern, Berlin, Constantinople, and Washington. He was with the American Commission to Negotiate Peace at the Paris Peace Conference in 1918-1919 and also participated in international conferences in the Coolidge and Hoover administrations. In 1926, Mr. Dulles resigned from the Foreign Service and entered the practice of law in New York City with the firm of Sullivan & Cromwell. During World War II, he was chief of the Office of Strategic Services Mission in Switzerland and later in Germany.

After the war, in addition to his law practice, Mr. Dulles served as a government advisor, particularly in regard to foreign aid and German policy. He became president of the Council on Foreign Relations in 1946. In 1948-1949, he was the Chairman of a three-man committee to survey the United States intelligence system for the National Security Council. Mr. Dulles joined the Central Intelligence Agency late in 1950. He became Deputy Director of Central Intelligence on 23 August 1951 and served as Director of Central Intelligence from 26 February 1953 to 29 November 1961.
