Mike:

It is not a bad day. It's a business decision that this law firm cannot continue to work for Leader without payment. This is business, not friendship. The decision is final but subject to review upon receipt of payment. I do consider us to be friends, and I have certainly supported Leader in every way. But that is now ended.

A duplicate copy of the invoice faxed on July 15 is attached hereto.

Please pay immediately and then we can talk. I will call you when I can.

Dear Mike:

1. First, we are vigorously and successfully prosecuting your [redacted] thereby creating an extremely valuable [redacted] estate for Leader.

2. Second, we have successfully negotiated the Leader/LLNL CRADA [redacted] This adds great value to Leader’s intellectual property estate.

3. Third, we have made introductions to IBM, XEROX, and Hoffmann-LaRoche - big players in your space.

4. All of the above adds value to your company and provides an and [redacted] intellectual asset base on which you can justify the investments by [redacted] others. The cost to this firm to pursue this work exceeds $40,000.00 per month, excluding the [redacted] work. As you know, we have not invoiced monthly for this work effort. At this time, however, we must cease all work for Leader Technologies until our meager invoice of $30,000 on the trademark work is paid. I will invoice you for all other work carried out in the calendar year 2002 and 2001.

As for shares in Leader Technologies Incorporated, I have no further interest in them.

Finally, as stated before, I introduced you to Bill Fenwick to map your progress through reorganization and capitalization. Get on with it with Kevin. If he cannot do it, get someone else in that firm who can.

At this time, I have but one interest and that is that you pay our invoice immediately and keep these invoices current. The capital investment by this firm into Leader has exceed tolerable levels. Going forward, we can only do such work as is important enough for you to pay for.

Jim
Jim:

I put in a call to you on Monday to go over this, but since we haven't yet connected, I'll summarize our status.

$30K is currently 15% of our monthly overhead. We are on the verge of a breakthrough, and it can't come soon enough for me (and you)!
