The first identified Rothschild ancestor in Frankfurt

In 1973, under the direction of Victor, 3rd Lord Rothschild, a detailed Rothschild family tree was commissioned which traced the family back to 'Uri Feibesh' in 1450. The primary sources for the first ten generations of the 1973 family tree were 'Die Inschriften des alten Friedhofs der israelitischen Gemeinde zu Frankfurt a.M.' by M. Horowitz (J .Kauffmann, Frankfurt a.M.); the Memorbuch of the Frankfurt Jewish Community (National Library, Jerusalem); the Burial Society Record of the Frankfurt Jewish Community (sefer ha-Kabranim) and the Parish Registers in the State Archives of Wiesbaden.

Rabbi Samson Wertheimer, also known as Wertheimer, was born in Worms in 1658. In 1684 he moved to Vienna, where Samuel Oppenheimer introduced him to the financial world of the Viennese court. During the War of the Spanish Succession he and Oppenheimer supported the emperor Leopold I. When Oppenheimer died, he was the sole lender to the Austrian government and was appointed court factor. Wertheimer took every opportunity to use his influence at court to advance the interests of Jews. He possessed great knowledge of the Talmud and held the title of a Hungarian national rabbi. Many personal and commercial connections linked him to Frankfurt. One of his daughters was married to the banker Moses Löb Isaak zur Kann, also known as Moses Kann. Two business transactions involved him in serious and longdrawnout disputes with the Frankfurt city council. The council did not want to let him buy a bleaching meadow belonging to Rebekka Dietz, a pastor's widow, because the residence code did not permit Jews to purchase land outside the Judengasse. He emphasised his services to the imperial court, and with the vendor's help he managed to persuade the emperor to order the city council to approve the purchase. His application to build a massive fourstorey stone house for his soninlaw, Isaak Nathan Oppenheimer, after the Judengasse fire in 1711 was also refused by the city council. A further appeal to the emperor again helped Wertheimer, and after five years the city council approved the house. Work on building the Steinernes Haus commenced in August 1717. Wertheimer died in Vienna on 6 August 1724. His descendants became one of the most respected and wealthiest Jewish families in Europe.

There are several interesting connections between Rabbi Samson Wertheimer and Rabbi Chaim Jair Bacharach that suggest that they are closely related. Rabbi Samson Wertheimer married a woman who appears to be the niece of Rabbi Bacharach's wife! In addition, Jair's Great Grandfather is Rabbi Shimshon ben Gershon ha Kohen who was born around 1530. Rabbi Wertheimer's great grandfather was also a Rabbi Samson. So is it possible that this is the same person? It appears that Rabbi Samson Wertheimer was undoubtedly named for this illustrious Rabbi!

Menahem Man (ben ...) BACHARACH was the son of a shoet.
In 1414 he studied with Salmon Soten and Jakob Möllin in Mainz.
Rabbi Jacob Möllin was also the teacher of Rabbi Jacob ben Yehuda, the Weil der Stadt who is a DNA match with the BACHARACHS.

Around 1440 he was with Rabbi Jechiel BACHARACH during the divorce of Rabbi Abraham ACHLETTSTADT.
Around 1449 and 1454 he was the Rabbi ('Hochmeister Mane') in Worms.

same?

Isaak's father in law died in 1609, the same year as the Maharal of Prague "LÖW"

It appears that the WERTHEIMER surname came from the Isaak's wife's family. So it's possible that he was born a BACHARACH!

The Samson name in the BACHARACH line came from Eva's paternal grandfather Samson b' Gerson HaKohen (Gershoni family). Her maternal grandfather was the Maharal of Prague. The Samson name in the WERTHEIMER line was from Isaak's wife's maternal grandfather Rabbi Samson.

Sorle Brilin is the daughter of Rabbi Meshullam Elieser BRILIN. Veronica BRILIN's father was Isaak, a sister of Sorle BRILIN.
