History

The lands around Nemerow were owned by the Broda Monastery in the 12th century. In the Treaty of Kremmen of June 20, 1236, Duke Wartislaw III, who lived in Demmin, had to give the countries of Stargard, Besaritz and Wustrow to the jointly ruling Brandenburg Margraves Johann I and Otto III. resign from the house of the Ascanians. The Margraves Otto and Albrecht of Brandenburg donated the village of Klein Nemerow (Wendisch Nemerow) to the Broda Monastery on April 10, 1273, and on March 13, 1285 the Brandenburg Margrave Albrecht III of the Order of St. John the ownership of the village Gnewitz to the Commandery Gardow, later Nemerow. Gardow was a field mark between Godendorf and Comthurey, near the Great and Small Gadosee, which was described as desolate in 1583. In the course of time, this location lost more and more of its importance, especially when Commander Ulrich Swave [Ulrich Schwab] bought the property in Klein and Groß Nemerow for the order from Hermann von Warburg. The property was on May 15, 1298 by Margrave Albrecht III approved. Very soon a priestly priory was established in Nemerow, as in Mirow, next to the commandery, which took on the religious duties of the order.

After the reign of Stargard changed to Mecklenburg, Prince Heinrich II gave the Commandery Nemerow the right of patronage over the parish church of St. Johannes to Lychen on January 30, 1302. The Brandenburg Margrave Hermann von Brandenburg confirmed these rights in the same year. In this context, Gardow was named as part of Nemerow. The possessions of the initial equipment of the Nemerow commandery were directly connected to the goods of the Wanzka monastery.

At the beginning of the 14th century, the commandery consisted of Nemerow with Groß Nemerow and Klein Nemerow, Rowa and Staven and the areas around Gardow with Dabelow, Wokuhl, Gnewitz, Gudendorf and the Dreffin field. In the course of the 14th century the Commandery increased its property considerably. In its economic heyday, the Commandery owned eight villages with around 100 farmers and kossats.

The importance of the Commandery Nemerow in the Middle Ages also speaks that its commander, as respected persons, often appeared as witnesses in important notarizations and other political acts, in particular Ulrich Schwabe [Ulrich Schwab] and Adolf von Schwalenberg, who still headed the commandery in 1355.

In the course of the 16th century, the dukes of Mecklenburg gained greater influence over the occupation of the commander and the appointment of commons during the course of the 16th century, with ongoing disputes with the army masters of Sonnenburg . In the middle of the 16th century there was a violent dispute over inheritance between the dukes of Mecklenburg Johann Albrecht I and Ulrich . The inheritance dispute was settled in 1556 with the Ruppiner power ruling by the Brandenburg Elector Joachim II . But the Commandery, like the Mirow Commandery , was excluded from it and thus spared from secularization for the time being. But in 1552 Duke Johann Albrecht I installed his feudal man and court and war counselor Joachim von Holstein on Ankershagen as commander in Nemerow. He had himself clad in the order and the commandery was now secularized for the dukes.

In 1628 Wallenstein moved in the Nemerow Commandery. Two and a half years later his rule in Mecklenburg ended and the Swedish King Gustav II. Adolf gave the commandery to his colonel Melchior Wurmbrand in 1630 . This ceded it again in 1634, but the building and property of the Commandery had been completely ruined.

In 1648, with the Peace of Westphalia, the Commandery of the Güstrow line of the House of Mecklenburg was awarded. After their expiry and with the Hamburg hereditary settlement, the Commandery came to the new (partial) duchy of Mecklenburg-Strelitz in 1701 . There she formed an independent office until 1794, the last tenant of which was the governor Adolph Friedrich Quinckardt. Then Nemerow came to the Stargard office as a domain . Almost nothing is left of the Commandery's facilities.

Buildings

Of the monastery complex, only the surrounding walls of the monastery barn, which probably dates back to the 14th century (formerly incorrectly referred to as the "old church") on the steep bank of Lake Tollensee, are preserved today. Building evidence clearly shows that the medieval brick building was built as a farm building. The barn was located north of the convent house and, together with the building association on the edge of the Tollensee, formed the core of the economic sector of the Coming. In the early 1960s, the barn burned out completely.

The monastery church, also built in stone, was in a different place. From the monastery church, the structural remains of which were demolished in the early 18th century, only the corpse stone of Commander Ludwig von der Groeben, who was in office from 1593 to 1620, remained. Built into a brick frame, it stands today on the former farm yard in front of the former tenant house (now the inn) of Klein Nemerow.

The sandstone slab shows a knight in splendid armor in arched architecture. The St. John's Cross hangs on the chain of the sash and on the left side of the head it says: LVDEWIEG. V. THE COARSE COMPTOR. Next to the left edge of the collar there is also a cross of St. John on the coat of arms. The following inscription can be read on the narrow pillars and the arch: ANNO 1620 THE 20TH AUGUSTY, THE VOLUMNY NOBLE AND VERNVESTER HER LUDEWIG V. THE GROSS OF THE MALTHESIAN ORDER S. JOANNIS AND HOSPITALS TO HIERUSALEM KNIGHT COMMANDATOR IS NEVER ALSO SEARCHED 6 AM AND 7 AM AND ON EARTH CONFIRMED IN THE VELVET OF HIS AGE IN THE 42TH IS IHARE DERO SEHLEN GODE GNEDIGH.

Commanderia Nemerow

La Commenda di Nemerow, precedentemente Commenda di Gardow, era una Commenda dell'Ordine di San Giovanni del Brandeburgo Ballei a Klein Nemerow nel Meclemburgo-Pomerania occidentale, menzionata per la prima volta nel 1285 ed esistita fino al 1648. La sede originaria della comanderia era Gardow, un insediamento ormai desolato nel comune di Wokuhl-Dabelow.

Tomba del comandante Ludwig von der Groeben

Rovina del granaio del monastero

▪ Previous article

▪ Next article

Le terre intorno a Nemerow erano di proprietà del monastero di Broda nel 12 ° secolo . Nel trattato di Kremmen del 20 giugno 1236, il duca Wartislaw III, che viveva a Demmin, doveva farlo . i paesi di Stargard, Beseritz e Wustrow ai margravi di Brandeburgo Johann I e Ottone III al governo congiunto . dimettersi dalla casa degli Ascani . I margravi Otto e Albrecht di Brandeburgo donarono il villaggio di Klein Nemerow (Wendisch Nemerow) al monastero di Broda il 10 aprile 1273 e il 13 marzo 1285 il margravio di Brandeburgo Albrecht III. Ordine di San Giovanni la proprietà del villaggio Gnewitz alla underia Gardow, poi Nemerow. Gardow era un punto di riferimento tra Godendorf e Comthurey, vicino al Grande e al Piccolo Gadowsee, già descritto come desolato nel 1583 . Nel corso del tempo, questo luogo perse sempre più la sua importanza, soprattutto quando il comandante Ulrich Swave acquistò le merci a Klein e Groß Nemerow per l'ordine da Hermann von Warburg. La proprietà fu il 15 maggio 1298 dal margravio Albrecht III. approvato. Ben presto fu istituito un priorato sacerdotale a Nemerow, come a Mirow, accanto alla comanderia, che assunse i doveri religiosi dell'ordine.

Dopo che il regno di Stargard cambiò in Meclemburgo, il 30 gennaio 1302 il principe Heinrich II concesse alla Commenda Nemerow il diritto di patronato sulla chiesa parrocchiale di San Giovanni a Lychen . Il margravio di Brandeburgo Hermann von Brandenburg ha confermato questi diritti nello stesso anno. In questo contesto, Gardow è stato nominato come parte di Nemerow. I possedimenti dell'attrezzatura iniziale della Commenda Nemerow erano direttamente collegati ai beni del monastero di Wanzka .

La commenda allora consisteva all'inizio del XIV secolo da Nemerow con Groß Nemerow e Klein Nemerow, Rowa e Staven e le aree intorno a Gardow con Dabelow, Wokuhl, Gnewitz, Gudendorf e il marchio di campo Dreffin. Nel corso del XIV secolo la Commenda aumentò notevolmente la sua proprietà. Nel suo periodo di massimo splendore economico, la Comanderia possedeva otto villaggi con circa 100 agricoltori e kossat.

L'importanza della Commenda Nemerow nel Medioevo è confermata anche dal fatto che il suo comandante, in quanto persone rispettate, appariva spesso come testimone in importanti notarili e altri atti politici, in particolare Ulrich Schwabe e Adolf von Schwalenberg, che ancora erano a capo della Commenda nel 1355.

Nel corso del XVI secolo, i duchi di Meclemburgo acquisirono maggiore influenza sull'occupazione del comandante e sulla nomina dei comuni nel corso del XVI secolo, con controversie in corso con i padroni dell'esercito di Sonnenburg . A metà del XVI secolo ci fu una violenta disputa sull'eredità tra i duchi di Meclemburgo Johann Albrecht I e Ulrich . La controversia sull'eredità fu risolta nel 1556 con il potere Ruppin del principe elettore di Brandeburgo Joachim II . Ma la Commenda, come la Commenda di Mirow, ne fu esclusa e quindi risparmiata dalla secolarizzazione per il momento. Ma nel 1552 il duca Johann Albrecht I installò il suo feudatario e consigliere di corte e di guerra Joachim von Holstein ad Ankershagen come comandante a Nemerow. Era vestito nell'ordine e la comanderia era ormai secolarizzata per i duchi.

Nel 1628 Wallenstein si trasferì nella Commenda di Nemerow. Due anni e mezzo dopo il suo governo nel Meclemburgo terminò e il re svedese Gustavo II, Adolf cedette la commenda al colonnello Melchior Wurmbrand nel 1630 . Questo lo cedette di nuovo nel 1634, ma l'edificio e la proprietà della Commenda erano stati completamente rovinati.

Nel 1648, con la Pace di Westfalia, fu assegnata la Commenda della linea Güstrow della Casa di Meclemburgo. Dopo la sua scadenza e con l'insediamento ereditario di Amburgo, la Commenda arrivò al nuovo (parziale) ducato di Meclemburgo-Strelitz nel 1701 . Lì formò un ufficio indipendente fino al 1794, l'ultimo inquilino del quale fu il governatore Adolph Friedrich Quinckardt. Dopodiché, Nemerow è arrivato nell'ufficio di Stargard come dominio . Quasi nulla è rimasto delle strutture della Comanderia.

Edifici

Del complesso monastico si conservano oggi solo le mura di cinta del fienile del monastero, che risale probabilmente al XIV secolo (in precedenza erroneamente chiamata "chiesa vecchia") sulla sponda scoscesa del lago Tollensee. L'evidenza degli edifici mostra chiaramente che l'edificio medievale in mattoni è stato costruito come un edificio agricolo. Il fienile era situato a nord della casa del convento e, insieme all'associazione edilizia ai margini del Tollensesees, costituiva il nucleo del settore economico del Coming. All'inizio degli anni Sessanta, il fienile si è completamente bruciato.

La chiesa del monastero, anch'essa costruita in pietra, si trovava in una posizione diversa. Della chiesa del monastero, i cui resti strutturali furono demoliti all'inizio del XVIII secolo, rimase solo la pietra cadavere del comandante Ludwig von der Groeben, in carica dal 1593 al 1620. Costruito in una cornice di mattoni, si trova oggi nell'ex cortile della fattoria di fronte all'ex casa degli inquilini (ora locanda) di Klein Nemerow.

La lastra di arenaria mostra un cavaliere in splendida armatura in architettura ad arco. La Croce di San Giovanni è appesa alla catena della fascia e sul lato sinistro della testa dice: LVDEWIEG. V. IL COARSE COMPTOR. Accanto al bordo sinistro del collare c'è anche una croce di San Giovanni sullo stemma. Sugli stretti pilastri e sull'arco si legge la seguente iscrizione: ANNO, 1620, 20 AGOSTO, LA LANA NOBILE E VERNVESTER SUO LUDEWIG V. LA LORDA DELL'ORDINE MALTHESIANO S. JOANNIS E GLI OSPEDALI DEL CAVALIERE DI GERUSALEMME NON È SEMPRE RICERCATO ANCHE 6 AM E 7 AM E SULLA TERRA CONFIRMATO NEL VELLUTO DELLA SUA ETÀ NEL 42 ° È IHARE DERO SEHLEN GODT GNEDIGH.

Commanderies of the Order of Saint John

The Order of Saint John (Knights of Malta, Knights Hospitaller) was organised in a system of commanderies during the high medieval to early modern periods, to some extent surviving as the organisational structure of the several descended orders that formed after the Reformation.

In the Late Middle Ages, the bulk of possessions of the order were in the Holy Roman Empire, France, Castile, Aragon and Portugal, but they extended into Poland, Hungary, southern Italy, England and Denmark, with individual outliers in Ireland, Scotland, Sweden and Greece (the main seat of the order was in Rhodes from 1310 until 1522, and in Malta from 1530 until 1798).

Pre-Reformation

Before the Protestant Reformation, the Order was divided into seven langues or tongues. The langues were divided into great priories, some of which were further divided into priories or bailiwicks (ballei), and these were in turn divided into commanderies.

The largest of the langues by far was the "German" one, which included not only all of the Holy Roman Empire but also the non-German-speaking (Slavic and Hungarian) territories east of Germany. It was divided into five great-priories, the largest of which were Austria-Bohemia and Germany, in turn, divided into major priories or bailiwicks; one of the largest such became independent after the Protestant Reformation as the Order of Saint John (Bailiwick of Brandenburg).

The division of Latin Europe, on the other hand, was more fine-grained, into the Hispanic (Iberian peninsula, at first known as the "Aragonese" langue, but in 1462 split into the Aragonese and the "Castilian" langue, the latter including Castille, Léon and Portugal), Italian (Italian peninsula), Provençal, Auvergnat and French langues.

Finally, the English langue included the order's possessions in the British Isles.

After the Reformation

A "Russian Grand Priory" with no less than 118 commandries, dwarfing the rest of the Order, was established by Paul I of Russia after the French occupation of Malta in 1798, initiating the Russian tradition of the Knights Hospitaller. Paul's election as Grand Master was, however, never ratified under Roman Catholic canon law, and he was the de facto rather than de jure Grand Master of the Order.

The commandry system survives into the present era, but since the Protestant Reformation the order is split into the four "Alliance orders" of the German Order of Saint John (Bailiwick of Brandenburg), the British Most Venerable Order of the Hospital of Saint John of Jerusalem, the Swedish Johanniterorden i Sverige, and the Dutch Johanniter Orde in Nederland, the Order forms the Alliance of the Orders of St. John of Jerusalem and the Roman Catholic Sovereign Military Order of Malta.

The German (Brandenburg) branch comprises seventeen commandries in Germany, one each in Austria, Finland, France, Hungary, and Switzerland, and a global commandry with subcommandries in twelve other countries (Australia, Belgium, Canada, Colombia, Denmark, Italy, Namibia, Poland, South Africa, the United Kingdom, the United States, and Venezuela).^[1]

Following constitutional changes made in 1999, the Priory of England and The Islands was established (including the Commandery of Ards in Northern Ireland) alongside the existing Priories of Wales, Scotland, Canada, Australia (including the Commandery of Western Australia), New Zealand, South Africa, and the United States.^[2] In 2013, the Priory of Kenya and in 2014 the Priory of Singapore were formed. Each is governed by a Prior and a Priory Chapter. Commanderies, governed by a Knight or Dame Commander and a Commandery Chapter,^[3] may exist within or wholly or partly without the territory of a priory, known as Dependent or Independent Commanderies, respectively.^[4] Any country without a priory or commandery of its own is assumed into the "home priory" of England and The Islands, many of these being smaller Commonwealth of Nations states in which the order has only a minor presence.^[5]

HISTORY

Groß Nemerow: Groß Nemerow is mentioned for the first time as "Nimyrow" among the places mentioned in a deed of foundation by Duke Casimir von Pomerania in 1170. The place name comes from the Slavic and means something like "place of discord". The church with its almost round churchyard and the smithy were located on the lanceolate green. After 1236 the towns of Groß and Klein Nemerow were owned by the von Warburg family. Already in 1298 they sold these possessions to the Order of St. John. The places remained the property of the order until 1648. According to the provisions of the Peace of Westphalia, the possessions of the order fell to the dukes.

Klein Nemerow: The place with the mill was first mentioned on the occasion of a donation from the Margraves Otto and Albrecht in 1273. The term "villa Slavicalis Nemerowe" appears in a document from 1281. As early as 1298, Commander Ulrich Swabe bought the village for the establishment of a Johanniter Commandery (administrative seat of the order), which began operations as early as 1302.

Krickow: In connection with the foundation of the Wanzka monastery in 1290, the place was first mentioned as "Crikkowe". The village must have existed for a long time.

It was donated to the monastery in 1290 together with what was later called the nuns' mill. After the town was completely devastated in the Thirty Years' War, only one of the seven farms was set up as a leasehold. The church was never rebuilt.

Zachow: Angerdorf was first mentioned in 1290 as "Zachowe". The place belonged to the Wanzka monastery. After the monastery was secularized, Zachow came to the ducal office of Wanzka and later to the ducal office of Strelitz.

Tollenseheim: Next to the old inn, an agricultural school was built in 1956, which is still in operation today.

Commandry of Nemerow

The Commandry of Nemerow (German: Komturei Nemerow or Komturei Gardow) was a commandry of the Knights Hospitaller in the village of Klein Nemerow in Mecklenburg-Vorpommern. It existed from 1285 until 1648. It was originally centred on Gardow, a now-ruined village near Wokuhl-Dabelow.

Groß Nemerow: The church was probably built by the Order of St. John at the beginning of the 14th century. It is a Gothic fieldstone ashlar building on whose west house of the same width an impressively large half-timbered tower from 1750 rises. The early baroque style dominates the interior design. The ornate 13th-century baptismal font is also worth seeing.

In the former fire station built around 1800, one of the oldest in the district, there is a local history room. A school museum is housed in the old school.

Klein Nemerow: The impressive ruins of a field stone barn from the 14th century - the former Johanniter Commandery - and the tombstone of the last commander from 1620 are worth a visit.

Zachow: In the village there is a half-timbered church from the 17th century with late Gothic carved altar shrines and the reconstructed village smithy.
